and statutory bodies can levy cesses, but is a charge claimed by him in respect of pre-ancient irrigation facilities which are no longer in existence. As pointed out by the District Judge the High Court has held that this charge is recoverable, but he has dismissed the suits on the ground that the principle of res judicata prevents the recovery. He has divided the appeals before him into five batches, the first four being those in which notice had gone to the respondent and the fifth batch containing appeals in which no notice had gone but were dealt with by him under Order XLI, rule 11. It will be convenient to treat these latter with the first four as the appeals are before us. Out of the whole number, however, some are not yet before us and they will be indicated in the classification. Following his classification as far as possible, we divide the appeals as under: The first batch corresponds to his first batch and contains Second Appeals Nos. 1110, 1115 and 1124, together with Second Appeals Nos. 1119 and 1121 which are not before us. The second batch contains his second and third batches and covers Second Appeals Nos. 1109, 1114, 1120, 1123, 1111, 1113, 1116, 1117 and 1125. The third batch contains Second Appeals Nos. 1118 and 1108.

Mr. Ramesam, for the respondent, admits that the appellant is entitled to succeed in the first batch as they undoubtedly must be decided against him if his contention on the second batch is sustained. He also admits that the third batch must also succeed on the same principle—with the result that Second Appeals Nos. 1110, 1115, 1124, 1108 and 1118 must be allowed if we uphold his argument.

There remains then to consider the second batch. It is urged that these are res judicata in that the High Court in 1912 in Second Appeals Nos. 616 to 629 of 1908 held, on second appeal from the decisions of the District Munsif in suits of 1905, that the matter was res judicata by reason of the decision of the District Munsif between the same parties in 1902. It is not denied that the decision of the High Court in 1912 does cover these cases. It is urged, first, that that judgment, although correct on the materials then before the High Court, does not bind us in these second appeals because another judgment of the High Court in 1892 was not before it. Secondly, that that judgment of the High Court in 1912 is not binding on us because it is merely on a point of law. With regard to the first argument it is sufficient to say that this contention was never put before the District Munsif who decided the cases now under appeal and we cannot allow it to be raised now. We must, therefore, confine ourselves to the second question.

The broad proposition contended for is that a decision on a pure question of law is not res judicata. The decision of the High Court is Exhibit A and it simply says "we accept the findings and set aside the decrees." The issue sent down for finding was whether the parties to those second appeals and the lands, the subject of them, were the same as those dealt with by the District Munsif in 1902, and the finding was that the parties and the lands were the same. It is argued on this that the question decided by the Munsif in the suits of 1902 was a pure question of law and accordingly the decision of the High Court in 1912 must have been a pure question of law too. The decision of the Munsif is Exhibit F, and the issue is as follows:—"Is the plaintiff entitled to levy on the plaint land the cess called ghattu-thumulu. (This issue includes consideration of the question whether, granting that the cess is payable by custom, the plaintiff is not entitled, in the present circumstances of the parties, to enforce the same.)" It is dealt with by the Munsif on page 53 of the printed papers and his decision is as follows:—"I hold that the plaintiff's contention, that he is entitled by the sheer force of custom to a perpetual payment of the plaint cess by the inamdars without any obligation on his part to maintain any of the old irrigation works in the villages concerned is not sustainable." Now there is no doubt that if the question of res judicata was out of the way, this would be the very issue to be decided by the High Court now and we have, therefore, to decide whether that finding does operate as res judicata. Mr. Ramesam urges that it is a mixed question of fact and law and, as such, is res judicata. Mr. Narasimha Rao relies on certain decisions. In Mangalatham- mal v. Narayanswami Aiyar (1) it was decided that an erroneous decision on a question of law in a previous suit is no bar, in a subsequent suit between the same parties, to the Court deciding the same question, provided the decision in the latter case does not in any way question the correctness of the former decree. In Natesan Chetty v. Vengu Nachiar (2) it was decided that an order or decree passed on a mistake of law does not operate as res judicata, with the same reservation. Now it could at once be conceded that a decision on an abstract question of law is not res judicata. But the difficulty arises in applying that proposition to cases that come before the Court. It is a very convenient treatment to say that a particular case is a mixed question of fact and law and to hold that the doctrine, therefore, does not apply. But speaking for myself, I find it difficult to appreciate exactly what is meant by the term "mixed question of fact and law." It seems to me that the question, whether an issue arising in a case is of law or is of mixed fact and law, must depend on the way in which the issues are framed, quite apart from the question which is really decided in the case. It must be possible to split up any issue which, as framed, contains questions of fact and law in such a manner that a pure issue of law can be framed on the hypothesis of the finding of fact one way or the other, and I cannot conceive that the whole question should be decided by the frame of the issue. It is a matter of daily experience that some Judges frame issues in a concentrated form, while others analyse the questions at issue between the parties and frame an issue of law on the hypothesis of the alternative findings of fact. I must not be understood to mean that the phrase "mixed question of fact and law" is not one that should be used. I only mean that, to me it does not contain a principle which I can apprehend.

BOJMADEVARA VENKATA v. ANDAVOLU VENKATARATNAM.

Before proceeding to examine the cases any further, I think it advisable to examine the section, which is section 11 of the present Code of Civil Procedure, "No Court shall try any suit or issue in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit between the same parties," Order XIV, rule 1, states that "Issues arise when a material proposition of fact or law is affirmed by one party and denied by the other;" and "issues are of two kinds; issues of fact and issues of law." Applying the language of Order XIV to section 11 we get the language "No Court shall try any suit or issue of fact or of law in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit." Mr. Narasimha Rao contends that the word 'matter' there does not include a point of law and this may be so with regard to some propositions of law decided in a case, but the word 'matter' is used in two of the Explanations to the section; the second of which certainly throws light on its meaning: "Any matter which might and ought to have been made ground of defence or attack in such former suit shall be deemed to have been.....directly and substantially in issue in such suit." It can hardly be contended that a defence or claim based on a question of law is not 'matter' within the meaning of this Explanation. If his contention were correct the decision on a point of law in any suit, (entirely apart from the question of a decision on an issue) would not be final between the parties and a fresh suit could be brought on the same cause of action, provided that a new point of law was raised. So 'matter' must include an issue of law sometimes, and it seems to me that where the point of law directly affects the rights in litigation between the parties to the suit it must be matter within the meaning of the section. The doctrine of res judicata is stated in Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume XIII, page 331 as follows: "Where res judicata is pleaded by way of estoppel to an entire cause of action, it amounts to an allegation that the whole legal rights and obligations of the parties are concluded by the earlier judgment which may involve the determination of questions of law as well as findings of fact." In my opinion the phrase "legal rights and obligations of the parties" and the words "which may involve the determination of questions of law" cover the same ground as the language "any suit or issue of law in which the matter directly and substantially in issue etc., etc.," in the section. Mr. Ramesam relies on a decision of the Privy Council in Badar Bee v. Habib Merican Noordin (3) and a careful examination of this case certainly does show the principle which the Board applies, quite apart from the particular language of the section. The appellant petitioned to have it declared that the devise and gifts contained in the 6th clause of the testator's will were void, and that the lands comprised therein and the income thereof being undisposed of belonged to the testator's next-of-kin. By that 6th clause he gave certain lands in Penang, which he directed to be called "the wakaf of Mahomed Noordin," to trustees for certain purposes. By a decree of the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements in 1872, it was held that one of the purposes for which the income of the wakaf was to be applied was void as not being lawful charitable gifts and that the gifts fell into the undivided residue of the testator's estate. In consequence of this decree a sum of $700 out of the rents and profits of the wakaf was for several years paid to the next-of-kin. But the trustees, after that, seem to have declined to pay this amount either to the next-of-kin or to the residuary legatees, doubtless owing to the residuary legatees having protested against payment to the next-of-kin. In 1889 one of the next-of-kin brought a suit in respect of that annual sum of $700 against the trustees. The trustees pleaded that they were advised that the amount ought to be paid to the residuary legatees. It was decided by the Court that the defendants were estopped from raising that defence. Several years afterwards, the only daughter of the eldest son of the testator filed a petition for declaration that the property comprised in the wakaf was at the death of the testator vested in his trustees and executors in trust for the next-of-kin of the testator living at the time of his death. It was decided by the Court of Appeal that the said lands were vested in the said trustees in trust for the residuary legatees, save and except the two yearly sums amounting to $700 which yearly sums were payable to the testator's next-of-kin—the ground of decision being that, so far as the yearly sum of $700 was concerned, the matter was res judicata by the first decree. But they held that the amount of $700 formed only a small portion of the total income yielded by the properties mentioned in clause 6 and that there was nothing in the case from which it could be inferred that the next-of-kin had been recognized as entitled to anything beyond the $700. The next-of-kin appealed to the Privy Council and it was in that appeal that the present judgment was given. Their Lordships say:—"The decree of 1872 was a decision on the construction of the testator's Will as to the destination of funds released from the operation of the trust declared by the 6th clause of the Will..... The result is that it appears that the point raised by this appeal has already been adjudicated on and it is not open to the Court, in the case of the same question arising between the same parties, to review a previous decision not open to appeal." Now here clearly the decision of the first Court was on a pure question of law, namely, the construction of the testator's Will, the question being to whom any moneys released from the trust by reason of the trust being found not to be good at law should go. The amount affected by the judgment was only a sum of $700, but their Lordships have held that the first case decided the legal rights of the parties and that that decision governed claims made subsequently where the same question arose, namely, the construction of the Will. It cannot be contended, that this point of law, namely, the true construction of the Will as to the destination of released funds, was not a matter "directly and substantially in issue" in both suits within the meaning of section 11, and yet it is difficult to see what question of fact was mixed up in it. It is to be noted too that the Board draw no distinction between questions of law and mixed questions of fact and law. In a case reported in Rai Churn Ghose v. Kumud Mohon Dutta (4) the High Court held that the decision of a Court on the question whether rent was payable under section 53 of the Bengal Tenancy Act quarterly or annually was res judicata. The Bench put it on the ground that it was a mixed question of law and fact. I find a difficulty in seeing the question of fact but the decision seems to me in entire accordance with Badar Bee v. Habib Merican Noordin (3). In Bishnu Priya Howthurani v. Bhaba Sundari Debya (5) the High Court held that a decision on the question whether a stipulation in a kabuliāt was valid and binding between the parties was res judicata. All the cases were considered by Mookerjee, J. in an elaborate judgment reported in Aghore Nath Mukerjee v. Kamini Debi (6). He applies the test of mixed question of fact and law to the construction of a clause in a Will in which process, I am with respect, unable to follow him but he says that the decision on the question of the true construction regulates the rights of the parties. That latter test seems to me to be the one applied in Badar Bee v. Habib Merican Noordin (3) and also to give due effect to the words of section 11 of the Code. The question has been recently considered by the Chief Justice in Secretary of State v. Rajah of Venkatagiri (7) and the Court had the decision in Badar Bee v. Habib Merican Noordin (3) before it. The cases in Mangalathammal v. Narayanswami Aiyar (1) and Natesan Chetty v. Vengu Nachiar (2) and all the Calcutta cases were also cited. The learned Chief Justice applies the decision of the Privy Council to the question of the right of Government to resume inams in zemindari and decides that such a decision cannot be said not to be res judicata on the ground that it is erroneous in law. It is to be noted that the Chief Justice does not apply the test of mixed question of fact and law. My conclusion is both on the authority of the Privy Council and on the language of the section that where a decision on a point of law, whether it be on the construction of a document, or of a Statute or on Common Law or on Customary Law settles a question that arises directly out of conflicting views as to the rights of the parties, it is res judicata. In this view I think the cases in Parthasaradi Ayyangar v. Chinnakrishna Ayyangar (8), Mangalathammal v. Narayanswami Aiyar (1) and Natesan Chetty v. Vengu Nachiar (2) cannot now be regarded as accurately expressing the law though they may be correct on the facts of each particular case, as they are inconsistent with Badar Bee v. Habib Merican Noordin (3) and Secretary of State v. Rajah of Venkatagiri (7). In this view the decision of the District Munsif in the 1902 suits that the zemindar cannot by custom claim the payment of the charge without maintaining the tanks is res judicata, and the decision of the High Court in 1912, that that decision is res judicata is also res judicata. The Appeals in Nos. 1108, 1110, 1115, 1118, 1124 will, therefore, be allowed with costs and the Appeals Nos. 1109, 1111, 1113, 1114, 1116, 1117, 1120, 1125, 1125 will be dismissed with costs. The memorandum of objections will be dismissed with costs.

(1) 30 M. 461 at p. 463; 17 M. L. J. 250.

(2) 3 Ind. Cas. 701; 33 M. 102; 6 M. L. T. 313; 20 M. L. J. 20.

BOMMEDEVARA VENKATA v. ANDAVOLU VENKATARATNAM.

(3) (1909) A. C. 615; 78 L. J. P. C. 161; 101 L. T. 161.

(4) 1 C. W. N. 687.

BOMMEDEVARA VENKATA V. ANDAVOLU VENKATARATNAM.

SADASIVA AIYAR, J.—I entirely agree. The actual decision in Parthasaradi v. Chinnakrishna Ayyangar (8) might, perhaps, be supported on the ground that the decree in the plaintiff's favour in an injunction suit affects only the particular defendants who are parties thereto individually and that in a subsequent suit for injunction against other individuals, the questions decided in the first suit cannot be res judicata. [See Sadagopachariar v. Rama Rao (9) and Sadagopa Chariar v. Krishnamoorthy Rao (10).]

I also think that Wallis, C. J., in Secretary of State v. Rajah of Venkatagiri (7) has clearly changed the views which he had expressed in the cases reported in Mangalathammal v. Narayanswami Aiyar (1) and Natesan Chetty v. Vengu Nachiar (2), in the light of the Privy Council decision in Badar Bee v. Habib Merican Noordin (3) and the decision of Mookerjee, J., in Aghore Nath

(5) 28 C. 318 at p. 323.

(6) 6 Ind. Cas. 554; 11 C. L. J. 461.

(7) 35 Ind. Cas. 266; 31 M. L. J. 97 at p. 117; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 96; 4 L. W. 133; 20 M. L. T. 234.

(8) 5 M. 304; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 211.

(9) 26 M. 376.

(10) 30 M. 185; 4 A. L. J. 333; 11 C. W. N. 585; 5 C. L. J. 566; 17 M. L. J. 240; 9 Bom. L. R. 663; 2 M. L. T. 204; 34 I. A. 93 (P. C.).

KRISTADHAN GHOSE v. GOLAM MANDAL.

Mukerjee v. Kamini Debi (6) though my Lord does not expressly say so. I might also refer to Bishnu Priya Chowdhurani v. Bhaba Sundari Debya (5) where the distinction is pointed out between the contention that the decision on an abstract question of law (say a question of limitation between the parties) in one suit is res judicata so that the law of the land should itself be deemed to have been altered when that question arises in subsequent suits between the same parties and the contention that a legal right, found declared or awarded in favour of one of the parties in one suit though based on an erroneous view of the law or an erroneous construction of a document is res judicata when the same legal right is controverted in subsequent suits between the same parties. The first contention is unsustainable while the second ought to be upheld. The memorandum of objections will stand dismissed with costs, not being pressed.

Appeals partly allowed;
Memo of objections dismissed.

V.R.P.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 476
OF 1914.

December 6, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice D. Chatterjee and
Mr. Justice Walmsley.

KRISTADHAN GHOSE—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT

versus

GOLAM MANDAL—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B C. of 1885), s. 29—Landlord and tenant—Amalgamation of tenancies, whether changes their incidents—Enhancement of rent—Pleadings—Appeal, fresh basis for claim, whether can be adopted in.

Where two occupancy holdings are amalgamated without any registered document, the lands remaining the same, and the consolidated jama is enhanced more than 2 annas in the rupee on the old jama, then unless it is proved that a new tenancy has been created or the parties intended to create a new tenancy, the incidents of the old tenancy remain unchanged, so that the landlord cannot get enhanced rent in contravention of the provisions of section 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. [p. 863, col. 1.]

Where the plaintiff's case in the lower Court was not that a new tenancy had been created or that the parties had intended to create a new tenancy by the amalgamation of the old tenancy, he cannot be allowed to contend in second appeal that a new tenancy was created by the amalgamation. [p. 863, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Murshidabad, dated the 27th November 1913, affirming that of the Munsif, first Court, Kandi, dated the 17th March 1913.

FACTS of the case appear from the judgment.

Babus Ram Chandra Majumdar and Turkeswar Pal Ohoudhri, for the Appellant. The defendant respondent held two jotes under the plaintiff-appellant. Subsequently in 1301 B. S., the two jotes were consolidated together and a consolidated rent exceeding the rent of the two jamas together by more than 2 annas in the rupee was settled. The defendant on being sued for rent contended that under section 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act the plaintiff cannot get rent exceeding the previous rent by more than 2 annas in the rupee. The only question for determination, therefore, is whether the plaintiff is entitled to get the full extent of the enhanced rent settled. My submission is that after consolidation a new jote was created. It is clear that section 29 has no operation when a new jote comes into existence. Therefore, unless it is found that after consolidation the old jotes were intended by the parties to be kept alive it cannot be said that the rent has been enhanced in contravention of the provisions of section 29.

The principle laid down in Mulzik Chand Das v. Satish Chandra Das (1) supports my contention. That was a case of splitting up of one jote, but the principle which governs the splitting up of a jote applies also in the case of consolidation of two or more jotes. If by consolidation a new tenancy was created the question of the right of occupancy does not arise, and consequently section 29 can have no proper application.

[CHATTERJEE, J.—Your point is that defendant is not an occupancy-raiyyat. Therefore you are entitled to recover the enhanced rent agreed upon?]

Yes. The whole point is whether by the consolidation a new tenancy was created. Before applying section 29 one way or the other it must be definitely found what the intention of the parties was when the jamas were consolidated together.

(1) 3 Ind. Cas. 306; 11 C. L. J. 56 at p. 59; 14 C. W. N. 335.

KEDAR NATH v. JAI BERHMA.

[CHATTERJEE, J.—The point was not raised in any of the lower Courts.]

In the case reported in Mulluk Chand Das v. Satish Chandra Das (1) the point was not taken in the lower Courts. Still it was allowed to be raised before the High Court, and the High Court gave effect to the contention.

Babu Karunamoy Bose, for the Respondent, was not called upon.

JUDGMENT.—This is an instance of the various subterfuges that have been devised to evade the salutary provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Two occupancy holdings were amalgamated in 1301 B. S., without any registered document, the lands remaining the same but the consolidated jama being an enhancement of more than 2 annas in the rupee on the old jama. The lower Courts have given a decree on the old state of things.

It is contended before us that there ought to have been a finding as to whether the landlord and the tenant intended by this amalgamation to create a new tenancy. This was never the case of the appellant in the Courts below. In the first Court, his case was that the tenant was a non-occupancy-raiyat and that, therefore, he was liable to pay at the rate at which he had been paying for more than three years and that failing, his contention was that he was entitled to realise rent at the enhanced rate under proviso (1) to section 29.

Both the grounds failed on the Courts deciding first, that he was an occupancy-raiyat, and secondly, that there was no written document. It was never the case of the plaintiff that a new tenancy had been created or that the parties had intended to create a new tenancy. All the facts point to the conclusion that the old tenancy was to continue and that all the incidents of the tenancy were to remain unchanged.

In this view of the case, there is no substance in this appeal and it is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 228 of 1916.

December 14, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Roe and

Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad.

KEDAR NATH MARWARI AND OTHERS—

DECREE-HOLDERS—APPELLANTS

versus

JAI BERHMA AND OTHERS—

JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 144—Restitution, principles governing—Property, sale of, not covered by proclamation—Sale certificate, cancellation of, in appeal—Application for restitution—Auction-purchaser, rights of.

On an application for restitution under section 144, Civil Procedure Code, the Courts should not only restore parties to the positions which they held before the erroneous order was made, but should also make restitution from party to party, as nearly as possible, simultaneous. [p. 865, col. 1.]

Where a sale of property not covered by the proclamation is afterwards set aside, the judgment-debtor can claim restitution only on payment to the purchaser of the purchase-money. The purchaser cannot be forced to seek his remedy against the decree-holder or required to vacate, till restitution is made of the sum paid by him for the property erroneously offered for sale. [p. 865, cols. 1 & 2; p. 868, col. 2.]

Courts acting under section 144, Civil Procedure Code, will only re-place parties in the position which they actually occupied at the time of the order reversed and will not consider all the various subsequent positions voluntarily taken up by the parties as the remote consequences of that order. [p. 866, col. 1; p. 869, col. 1.]

Appeal against the order of the Sub-Judge, Godda, dated the 20th August 1916.

Mr. Hassan Imam, Sir Rosh Behari Ghose and Messrs. Purendra Narain Sinha, Naresh Chandra Sinha and Ranjit Sinha, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Pugh, Sarat Chandra Mukerji and Mahomed Tahir, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Roe, J.—This appeal arises from proceedings under section 144, Civil Procedure Code. The appellants are Kedar Nath Marwari and others, auction-purchasers, and respondents are Jai Berhma, and others, judgment-debtors.

Raja Thakur Berhma the father of the judgment-debtors, was very deeply indebted in the early years of this century, his principal creditors being members of the family of the appellants. Anant Ram Marwari, the father of Sri Mohan Marwari, held a decree against him upon a mortgage-debt by which was secured eight annas of the village Patsanda. Another two annas of the same village had also been given to the same creditor as security for another debt. One Jivan Ram Marwari held a decree for Rs. 42,000 and in execution of that decree attached the Raja's milkiat right in six annas out of sixteen annas of Mahal Tappa Patsanda, etc. The application for attachment sets forth that "this property is mortgaged in the bond of Babu Anant Ram Marwari and others decree-holders and also a two-annas share of the said mahal which has been hypothecated as security on behalf of the defendant in the case of execution of a mortgage-decree by the said Babu Anant Ram Marwari and others decree-holders against the judgment in the first Court of the Subordinate Judge of Bhagalpore; in all eight-annas share of the said mahal, the estimated value being Rs. 50,000"

KEDAR NATH v. JAI BEHMA.

Now this entry of the share to be attached as six annas was in all probability a mistake for eight annas. It was eight annas out of the sixteen annas that was originally mortgaged to Babu Anant Ram Marwari. It was clearly the intention of the auction-purchasers to attach and bring to sale the whole of the property secured upon the two debts due to Anant Ram Marwari. It happened that the residue of the property was also six annas and inasmuch as there was no six-annas share mortgaged to Anant Ram, there appears to have crept into the minds of those interested in the proceedings the illusion that what had been attached was the unmortgaged six-annas share. The sale notification published in the Gazette specifically mentioned that the share to be sold was not mortgaged to Anant Ram and in the letter asking for the sanction of the Commissioner of Bhagalpur (which was necessary before this property could be sold in execution of a money-decree) it was again stated that the property to be sold was the unencumbered six annas share. Though spoken of in the proceedings as the unencumbered share this six-annas was not entirely unencumbered, three annas of it had been given as security for the satisfaction of a decree obtained by Gobardhan Marwari, the brother of Anant Ram, and in the sale proclamation upon which the property was put up to auction by the Nazir of the Court there is a note to the effect that of the share to be sold three annas is held in security for the satisfaction of Gobardhan's decree. It is unnecessary to speculate upon whether this change in the identity of the property to be sold was intentional or unintentional. It is sufficient to say that though the property attached was without doubt the share mortgaged to Anant Ram, the property actually put up to sale in the auction room was the six-annas residue not mortgaged to Anant Ram. Even the judgment-debtor himself was under the impression that it was the unencumbered six-annas share that had been sold, as is clear from a petition of the judgment-debtor to be found at page 16 of the paper book. This petition was filed in connection with a petition by the auction-purchasers for confirmation of sale and the issue of a sale-certificate. It was an objection to the confirmation of the sale but was afterwards withdrawn and on its withdrawal the learned Subordinate Judge confirmed the sale made by his Nazir and directed the issue of a certificate of sale of the property not covered by the mortgage to Anant Ram. Against this order for a sale-certificate the judgment debtor appealed to the High Court. The High Court refused to cancel the certificate of sale, holding that it was quite obvious that what was sold was the unencumbered six annas.

On appeal to the Privy Council the Judicial Committee held that only that can be sold which has been attached, and in the body of its judgment humbly advised His Majesty that the appeal should be allowed and that the order of the Subordinate Judge confirming the sale together with the certificate granted thereunder dated 23rd December 1904 should be set aside, and added "this will of course have the effect of setting aside all subsequent proceedings on the part of the auction-purchasers based thereon."

The successful appellants upon receipt of this order in Council applied to the Subordinate Judge for restitution. The auction-purchasers objected to restitution on various grounds. The learned Subordinate Judge refused to accept these objections. He ordered the judgment-debtors to be restored immediately to possession of the property of which possession had been delivered to the auction-purchasers under the sale-certificate. The auction-purchasers appeal and in support of the appeal Sir Rash Behari Ghose urges:

(1) That the respondent before the Privy Council Chatari Ram Marwari was dead

KEDAR NATH v. JAI BEHMA.

before the appeal came on for hearing in the Privy Council, and that, therefore, the order cannot affect his share in the property of which possession was delivered to him, which share is half an anna of the sixteen annas.

(2) That the auction-purchasers cannot be asked to vacate the property until the amount deposited by them to complete the sale has been refunded.

(3) That in order to obtain a clear title to the property the auction purchasers paid Rs. 34,000 to Gobardhan Marwari in accordance with the security-bond entered into by the judgment debtor for the satisfaction of the decree obtained by Gobardhan Marwari. That before eviction from the property this sum must be restored to them.

Mr. Pugh, on the other hand, contends that the sale-certificate having been cancelled, the delivery of possession following on the certificate of sale becomes inoperative and that it is incumbent now upon the Court to forthwith restore the judgment-debtors to the property without considering at this stage any question that may afterwards arise between the parties.

Upon a plain reading of the words of section 144, it seems to me that the Courts should not only take care that all parties are restored to the positions which they held before the erroneous order was made but should also make restitution from party to party, as nearly as possible, simultaneous.

It seems to me utterly inequitable that the judgment-debtor in this case, who acquiesced in the idea that the six annas unencumbered share had been put up to sale, should derive benefit from this mistake and should forthwith return to possession of the property without any arrangement whatever for the restoration to the auction-purchaser of the money paid upon the auction-purchase.

Mr. Pugh contends that it is the business of the auction-purchaser to get that money out of the decree-holders as best as he can by subsequent proceedings. I can see no force at all in this argument. The words of the section are clear: "any party entitled to any benefit by way of restitution should be placed in the position which he would have occupied but for the erroneous order made." But for the erroneous order made the auction-purchasers would have had in October 1903 Rs. 1,12,000 in their pocket, and it is the business of the Court to see that Rs. 1,12,000 is put back into their pocket simultaneously with the restoration of the judgment-debtor to his property.

Mr. Pugh suggests to us an alternative, that a sale certificate should now be given on the six annas share mortgaged to Anant Ram. I can hardly believe that he is serious in making this suggestion. That share has never been sold. The sale proclamation was for the unencumbered share. The notification in the Gazette was for the unencumbered share. Sanction of the Commissioner was taken for the sale of the unencumbered share, and the Nazir actually put up for sale the unencumbered share. Undoubtedly the Judicial Committee intended that the effect of their order should be that the order confirming the sale made by the Nazir should be set aside and this their Lordships have actually said in the body of their judgment. For the reason that the judgment-debtor in his appeal had not asked for this particular relief does not appear in the decree. The only restitution that can be made to the auction-purchaser is restitution of the sum paid by him for property erroneously offered for sale.

It appears that this sum was rateably distributed among thirteen judgment-creditors who held decrees against the judgment-debtor, Raja Thakur Barhma. Until those creditors refund the money the auction-purchaser should not be required to vacate the property. It cannot be contended that this entails any hardship upon the judgment debtor. The money was paid to his creditors in liquidation of his debts and if the similar judgment-creditors are not prepared to restore it to the auction purchaser, it is reasonable that the judgment-debtor should refund it before returning to possession of his property.

We are not in sympathy with the arguments advanced by Sir Rash Behari Ghose in respect of the liquidation of the mortgage lien in satisfaction of the charge held by Gobardhan Marwari upon the property. The payment of cash in satisfaction of that charge was not made by order of the Court. It was an optional payment made by the auction-purchaser for his own convenience. Seeing, moreover, that Gobardhan Marwari was the uncle of the ostensible auction-purchaser, it is by no means certain that any payment was made and it is more than probable that there was no close scrutiny of the account rendered by Gobardhan Marwari. The appellants cannot be held to be in a stronger position than this, that they having discharged the lien held by Gobardhan Marwari are entitled to hold the property bound by that lien. This appears to be in accordance with the principles laid down in Gunga Prosad v. Brojo Nath Das (1) and other cases to the same effect and is in accordance with the terms of the section. The Courts can only re-place the parties in the position which they actually occupied at the time of the order reversed, they cannot consider all the various subsequent positions taken up voluntarily by the parties as the remote consequences of that order.

KEDAR NATH v. JAI BERRHMA.

It may be suggested that this order amounts in effect to a denial of justice to the judgment-debtor and permanent deprivation to him of the property wrongly put up for sale. I see no reason why justice should be denied to the auction-purchaser in preference to the judgment-debtor. The auction-purchaser has done no wrong, he was not concerned in the mistake made either in the proclamation or in the attachment. In good faith he bid for the property which the Nazir of the Court had assured him was up for sale.

The judgment-debtor, on the other hand, is in the wrong, in that he has never made any attempt to satisfy the decree made against him and in that he acquiesced in the mistake made in the sale proceedings. If any one should suffer clearly it is the judgment-debtor. Nor does he suffer any appreciable injury. He is entitled to some twelve years' mesne profits. As far as I can ascertain, the mesne profits will approximately balance the purchase-money with interest from the date of its deposit, with the result that there will be no real delay in his restoration to the property.

The last point for consideration is whether the judgment-debtor is entitled to restoration of five-and-a-half-annas share of the property or of the whole six annas. There is no proof on the record that Chatri Ram is dead. The learned Subordinate Judge must go into this point. If he is satisfied on the evidence taken that Chatri Ram was dead at the time of the hearing of the appeal by the Judicial Committee, it is clear that the decree made at that hearing cannot affect the interests of his heir. In that event the judgment-debtor will be entitled to restoration to five and a half annas only of the property wrongly given to the auction-purchaser with mesne profits on that share only and the auction-purchaser is entitled to recover only eleven-twelfths of the money paid by him. The orders of the Subordinate Judge should, therefore, be set aside and the papers returned to him with these instructions:— That he do ascertain, firstly, whether Chatri Ram died before the hearing of the appeal by the Judicial Committee; (2) that he do ascertain the amount of mesne profits due on the share in respect of which restoration is to be made and (3) that he set off the sum due to the judgment-debtors as mesne profits against the sum due to the auction-purchasers in recovery of their deposit and in the event of the sum due to the judgment-debtors being in excess of the sum due to the auction-purchasers, he do restore possession of the property forthwith to the judgment-debtors and in the event of the sum due to the auction-purchasers being in excess of the sum due to the judgment-debtors he do refuse to restore possession of the property until the deficit due to the auction-purchasers has been made up either by the decree-holders or by the judgment-debtors themselves.

I would make no order as to the costs of this appeal.

JWALA PRASAD, J.—This is an appeal arising out of an application under section 144 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The judgment-debtors were owners of the entire sixteen-annas share of a Mahal Tappa Patsanda. Ten annas out of sixteen annas of the share was subject to the mortgage of Anant Ram Marwari and others and is referred to in these proceedings as the ten-annas encumbered share. The remaining six-annas is referred to in these proceedings as the unencumbered six-annas share, although three annas out of it was subject to certain encumbrances created by the security bonds executed by the judgment-debtors in favour of Gobardhan Das Marwari in execution cases Nos. 3 and 4 of 1902. The appellants are auction-purchasers at a sale held on July 27th, 1904, in execution of a money-decree against the judgment-debtors. The property was described in the attachment and the sale proclamation as being six-annas share of Tappa Patsanda under the mortgage of Anant Ram Marwari. On 20th December 1904 the appellants applied to the Subordinate Judge who had held the sale to grant them a sale-certificate in respect of six-annas unencumbered share, i.e., distinct and outside the ten-annas encumbered share which was under the mortgage of Anant Ram and others, alleging that by mistake the property was described in the attachment and the sale proclamation as being under the mortgage of Anant Ram, whereas the property should have been described as being not under the said mortgage. On the same date (20th December 1904) the Subordinate Judge, who had held the sale, granted a sale-certificate to the auction-purchasers in respect of six-annas unencumbered share as desired by the auction-purchasers. The Subordinate Judge held that it was clearly the intention of the Court to sell the six-annas share of Tappa Patsanda which was not covered by Anant Ram's mortgage and it was this six-annas unencumbered share which was sold to the auction-purchasers on 27th July 1904 and that there existed no doubt in the minds of the judgment-debtors or auction-purchasers as to what property was being sold. The auction-purchasers paid into the Court Rs. 1,12,000 for which the property was knocked down. On application by several decree-holders who had obtained decrees against the judgment-debtors, the Court directed a rateable distribution of the purchase-money, which was accordingly distributed and paid under the orders of the Court. The auction-purchasers paid the encumbrance of Rs. 34,000 over three annas out of the six-annas unencumbered share, covered by the two security bonds which the judgment-debtors had executed in favour of Gobardhan Das and which had been notified at the time of the auction-sale. On 26th December 1904, the auction-purchasers obtained possession of the six annas unencumbered share through Court.

(1) 12 C. W. N. 642.

KEDAR NATH v. JAI BERHMA.

The judgment-debtors appealed to the High Court of Calcutta against the order of the Subordinate Judge of the 20th December 1904, granting the sale-certificate in respect of the six-annas unencumbered share. The High Court, by its judgment dated the 26th June 1906, dismissed the appeal of the judgment-debtors, and confirmed the order of the Subordinate Judge granting the sale-certificate of the six-annas unencumbered share. The judgment-debtors then appealed to His Majesty. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee, by their judgment dated the 25th November 1913, held that the property described in the attachment and the proclamation was six annas subject to the existing mortgage, whereas the effect of the certificate of sale granted by the order of the Subordinate Judge was to make the sale that of a property not attached, namely, the six-annas unencumbered property, which could not be sold inasmuch as it was not the property attached. Their Lordships, therefore, set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge confirming the sale together with the certificate granted thereunder dated 20th December 1904, and also all subsequent proceedings on the part of the auction-purchasers based thereon. The decision of their Lordships received the sanction of His Majesty on 19th December 1913. Therefore, the judgment-debtors applied to the Subordinate Judge for a restoration of possession to them over the six-annas unencumbered share with mesne profits. The auction-purchasers objected to the restoration of the property to the judgment-debtors on various grounds. The learned Subordinate Judge overruled their objections and directed possession to be delivered to the judgment-debtors forthwith with mesne profits. The auction-purchasers have appealed to this Court.

KEDAR NATH v. JAI BERNHA.

The first objection urged by the auction-purchasers-appellants is that they are entitled to retain possession of the property and no restitution can be made to the judgment-debtors, unless and until they refund to the appellants the purchase-money, namely, Rs. 1,12,000 paid by them at the auction-sale. It is contended on behalf of the judgment-debtors that the auction-purchasers are not entitled to a refund of the purchase-money, inasmuch as what was sold on the 27th of July 1904 was the six-annas encumbered share and that the sale thereof was duly confirmed on 18th November 1904 and has not been set aside. It is contended that the only remedy now left to the auction-purchasers is to obtain a sale certificate in respect of the six-annas encumbered share and to content themselves by getting the six-annas encumbered share for what it is worth in lieu of the purchase-money. This contention of the judgment-debtors does not commend itself to me. I do not think that the auction purchasers can get a sale-certificate in respect of the six-annas encumbered share, nor can they obtain possession of it. In the first place, it is clear from the proceedings in connection with the sale that the six-annas encumbered share was not sold at all. The Subordinate Judge who held the sale distinctly says that it was the six-annas unencumbered share which was actually sold to the auction-purchasers on the 26th of July 1904, and that it was the intention of the Court to sell the said share and the parties as well understood that this was the property that was being sold. The Subordinate Judge had no doubt in his mind that he sold the six annas unencumbered share and accordingly granted a sale-certificate to the auction-purchasers in respect of that share. The Court may have been wrong in granting a sale-certificate of the six-annas unencumbered share, because it was not the property prescribed in the attachment and the sale proclamation, but certainly the Court cannot enforce the sale of the six-annas encumbered share which it did neither intend to sell nor actually did sell. The auction-purchasers cannot be compelled to take a sale certificate in respect of the six-annas encumbered share which they did not intend to purchase.

The only result of the proceedings in connection with the sale is that the six-annas encumbered share was not sold. Even if it be held that the six-annas encumbered share was sold, the circumstances connected with the sale and the ends of justice require that the sale should be set aside and considered to have been set aside by virtue of the inherent power vested in the Courts. Therefore, it is but just and proper that the auction-purchasers should get back their money before they are deprived of the possession of the property delivered to them in execution of a sale-certificate granted to them by the Court.

The judgment-debtors further contend that if the auction-purchasers have a right to a refund of the purchase-money, they must recover it from the decree-holders to whom the money was paid by the Court, and not from the judgment-debtors who did not actually receive the money. This contention also does not appear to have any substance in it. It is not denied that the money paid to the decree-holders was due to them from the judgment-debtors. The decree-holders applied to the Court for a rateable distribution of the purchase-money and the Court directed the rateable distribution of the money. The decree-holders received the money from the Court and under the orders of the Court. The judgment-debtors are bound by the orders of the Court directing the payment. The auction-purchasers paid the money in Court and they have nothing to do with how the money was disposed of. The judgment-debtors have been benefited by the payments, and the payments made to the decree-holders will be considered to have been made to the judgment-debtors. The judgment-debtors are, therefore, liable to pay this money to the auction-purchasers before they can recover possession of the property. I, therefore, disagree with the views of the learned Subordinate Judge that the judgment-debtors are entitled to recover possession of the property forthwith without refunding the purchase-money to the auction-purchasers.

The second objection of the auction-purchasers is that they are entitled to retain the property until the judgment-debtors pay to them Rs. 34,000 which they had paid to Gobardhan Das Marwari in respect of the security-bonds executed by the judgment-debtors, subject to which the property was sold and which were notified at the time of the auction-sale. The lien of the security-bonds of Gobardhan Das was over three annas out of the six-annas unencumbered share.

KEDAR NATH D. JAI BERRHA.

The auction-purchasers, by virtue of the payments made by them to Gobardhan Das, have stepped into the shoes of the creditor Gobardhan Das Marwari and have a right to enforce their claim against the judgment-debtors by a suit or other proceedings they may be advised to take. The payment to Gobardhan Das was made long after the auction-purchase and cannot be taken into account in the restitution proceedings, in which only the rights of persons that existed at the time the possession was delivered to the auction purchasers can be looked into and considered. The auction-purchasers, therefore, cannot resist the claim of the judgment-debtors to restitution on the ground that the payment made to Gobardhan Das Marwari should be refunded to them before the property is restored to the judgment-debtors.

The last objection urged by the appellants to the restoration of the property to the judgment-debtors is that the order of their Lordships in the Privy Council does not affect the half-anna share of the mahal, which is in the possession of his heir Puran Mal, in execution of the sale-certificate granted by the Court. It is alleged that Chatri Ram Marwari and Nib Chand had purchased one-anna share in the property, as specified in the bid-sheet and the sale-certificate, in which Chatri Ram had half share. He was one of the respondents in the appeal preferred by the judgment-debtors to the Privy Council, and is said to have died in 1911 before the hearing of the appeal, but his heir was not substituted and brought on the record and the appeal before the Privy Council was heard and decided in the absence of Puran Mal, his heir, and, therefore, the order of their Lordships in the Privy Council cannot affect the half-anna share in his possession and the judgment-debtors have no right to a restoration of this half-anna share. If Chatri Ram was actually dead before the appeal was heard in the Privy Council and Puran

Mal is his heir and no substitution was made and he was not brought on the record of the Privy Council appeal, it appears to me that the contention of the auction-purchasers must prevail. The learned Subordinate Judge has not enquired into the allegations made by the auction-purchasers and the case should be remanded to him for an enquiry into this matter. If it is found, as a matter of fact, that Chatri Ram Marwari died before the appeal was heard in the Privy Council, the judgment-debtors will not be entitled to a restoration of this half-anna share. I do not agree with the contention of the learned Counsel for the respondents that as their Lordships in the Privy Council have held that there was no sale at all of the entire six-annas unencumbered share, the heir of Chatri Ram Marwari is not entitled to retain possession of the share purchased by Chatri Ram, even if he was dead before the hearing of the appeal in the Privy Council and his heir was not substituted in his place.

The result is that the judgment-debtors are entitled to a restoration of the possession over the property in dispute and to recover mesne profits from the auction-purchasers for the period that they have been kept out of possession of the property. The auction-purchasers are entitled to get the purchase-money from the judgment-debtors and to retain the possession of the property till the judgment-debtor refund to them the purchase-money. The claims of the appellants and the judgment-debtors are, therefore, liable to be set off one against the other. If it is found that the half-anna share in the possession of Puran Mal is not affected by the order of their Lordships in the Privy Council, in that case the judgment-debtors would be entitled to recover only 11/12ths of the property, that is, five half annas out of the six-annas unencumbered share. The judgment-debtors are liable to pay 11-12ths of the purchase-money, namely, Rs. 1, 12,000 i. e., Rs. 1,02,660 10 8 to the auction-purchasers. This will be set off against the mesne profits they are entitled to get from the appellants other than Puran Mal.

The result is that the order of the learned Subordinate Judge is set aside and the case remanded to him to determine the rights of the parties in the light of the above remarks. For the reasons given above I agree with the order proposed by my learned brother to be made in this appeal.

SURESH CHANDRA ROY v. SURENDRA CHANDRA ROY.

Appeal allowed; Case remanded.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES NOS. 1505
AND 1677 OF 1914.

December 7, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and

Mr. Justice Richardson.

IN No. 1505

SURESH CHANDRA ROY CHOW-

DHURY AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—

APPELLANTS

versus

SURENDRA CHANDRA ROY CHOW-

DHURY—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

IN No. 1677

SURENDRA CHANDRA ROY CHOW-

DHURY—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

SURESH CHANDRA ROY CHOW-

DHURY AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—

RESPONDENTS.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 8—Right, reservation of, inference of—Construction of document—Ambiguity.

Where property is transferred on execution of a document, unless there is an ambiguity in the document, an intention to reserve a certain right cannot be necessarily implied under section 8 of the Transfer of Property Act except from the terms of the document itself. If the document, however, is ambiguous, a Court can consider the object of the grantor and other circumstances attending its execution and the acts of the parties since the date of its execution. [p. 871, col. 2.]

Appeals against the decrees of the District Judge, Rajshahye, dated the 14th March 1914, modifying that of the Officiating Subordinate Judge of that District, dated the 30th June 1913.

FACTS appear fully from the judgment.

IN S. A. No. 1677 of 1914

Babu Sarat Chandra Roy Chowdhury (with him Babu Krishna Kamal Maitra, for the Appellant.—The right of way was reserved; although the land was included within the limits of the property given to the respondents, the intention to reserve the right of way over that was evidently reserved and was necessarily implied by the facts and circumstances of the case, and for a conclusion like this the Court is not confined to the terms of the document itself, but must look to the object of the grantor and other circumstances and the acts and conduct of the parties since the execution of the document. The Court of first instance took all this into consideration and came to the conclusion that the right of way was reserved. The Court of Appeal below failed to consider all this and confined itself to the consideration of the terms of the document itself, and thus came to a wrong conclusion and erred in its decision. The matter should go back on remand for a re-hearing of the appeal with a view to come to a finding on the question of intention of parties upon consideration of all the evidence on the record.

Babu D. N. Bagchi, for the Respondent.—Having regard to the provisions of section 8 of the Transfer of Property Act and section 92 of the Evidence Act and the clear terms of the document itself, the conditions of the other side must be taken to have no force in them. Section 8 of the Transfer of Property Act at once lays down a principle and a rule of interpretation—the principle underlying the law of transfer, and the rule of interpretation of the document or conveyance by means of which the transfer is effected. The terms of the document are clear enough, and you cannot read reservations or exceptions into it which are not there, as the learned Judge below has held. There is no express provision for such a reservation in the document, nor is there anything to necessarily imply any such reservation. And now to travel beyond the document itself and to try to infer intention of parties from extraneous evidence would be to transgress the clear provisions of section 8 of the Transfer of Property Act and also those of section 92 of the Evidence Act. Even if an intention like that is to be inferred from other evidence, it cannot be said that the learned Judge below has not considered that evidence—on the contrary, the learned Judge, upon consideration of all the evidence on record, did come to the deliberate conclusion “that there were no reasons for reading into this document exceptions which must have been belibegately omitted by the conveying party," a finding of fact which is not to be disturbable in second appeal.

SURESH CHANDRA ROY v. SURENDRA CHANDRA ROY.

Babu Sarat Chandra Rai Chowdhury replied.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This is an appeal from the judgment of the learned District Judge of Rajshahye, dated the 14th March 1914, modifying the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge of the same place. The suit was brought by the plaintiff for a declaration of his right to the use of a certain private road and for an order compelling the defendants to remove certain obstructions. The road consisted of two parts; namely, first, what is called in these proceedings the main road and secondly, the branch road. The present appeal relates wholly to the road which is called the main road. Originally this property, the road, with the adjoining lands belonged to the plaintiff and the defendants jointly. Subsequently, a partition suit was instituted. During the course of those proceedings, the parties arrived at a settlement and it was agreed that certain land should be given to the plaintiff and certain land to the defendants. The main road clearly falls within the limits of the land which was given to the defendants as taken by the boundaries. The question is whether, on the documents that were executed between the parties, the plaintiff has the right of still using that main road which falls within the limits of the property that was given to the defendants. During the partition proceedings, the parties executed material documents in each other's favour—called ladavi ekrarnamas. Those documents were duly registered and they operated as mutual conveyances and as transfers of properties within the meaning of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. It is quite true that subsequently, after those documents had been completed by execution and registration, a petition was presented to the Court and a consent decree was obtained; but the foundation of the title in this case seems to be based, without doubt, on the material conveyances that the parties executed in favour of each other. Now, it is a common factor in this case, as have already said, that within the limits of the property that was allotted to the defendants by the documents that were executed by the parties the site of this road—the road which is called the main road—fell. The question, therefore, is reduced to this, namely, whether under the terms of section 8 of the Transfer of Property Act the plaintiff reserved to himself the right of using this road which would otherwise pass to the defendants under the terms of the document that he executed in their favour. The learned Judge in the first Court came to the conclusion that, having regard to the other terms of the document and the acts of the parties subsequent to the execution thereof, the plaintiff had reserved to himself the right of using this road. The terms of section 8 of the Transfer of Property Act are as follows:—"Unless a different intention is expressed or necessarily implied, a transfer of property passes forthwith to the transferee all the interest which the transferor is then capable of passing in the property, and in the legal incidents thereof." It has been argued by Mr. Chaudhury, the learned Vakil who appears for the appellant, that, for the purpose of discovering whether a different intention should be necessarily implied the Court is not confined to the terms of the document itself but it must consider the object of the grantor and other circumstances and the acts of the parties since the date of the execution of the document. I am not at present prepared to assent to that view. Of course, if there is an ambiguity in the document those matters might well be considered; but as at present advised, I am not prepared to say that, on the construction of section 8, a different intention which may necessarily be implied under that section can be implied except from the terms of the document itself. However, even if the view that Mr. Chaudhury has put forward is correct, I am unable to see any ground for interfering with the judgment of the lower Appellate Court. I see no necessary implication which should require us to read the conveyance of this property in favour of the defendants in the way that has been suggested. The document is perfectly plain in its terms. The suggested convenience of leading the ladies of the plaintiff's family to the temple to perform their worship by this private road instead of proceeding by the public road perhaps may be a matter of importance to the plaintiff and the members of his family, but that there is any necessity for implying such reservation is immediately negatived by the terms of the deed. It may be inconvenient for the females of the plaintiff's house to go to the temple by the other way and that inconvenience of proceeding by the public road may be a matter of moment to Hindu ladies. But Hindu ladies do, at times, have to proceed by public roads. The method of proceeding by a public road may be different in each case, but it is a matter of every day observation that in this country the ladies are properly secluded when they pass by a public road. Those ladies of the plaintiff's household may as well go to the temple and perform their worship there by using this public road. I see no reason why we should imply in the grant to the defendants by the plaintiff of his interest in the land, which would include the site of this main road, a different intention, which it is said, would be a matter of convenience to the ladies of the plaintiff's family, that is, of proceeding along this private road. I think the learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court arrived at a correct conclusion when he held that there were no reasons for reading into this document exceptions which must be taken to have been deliberately omitted by the conveying party, the plaintiff, when he executed the document. I think the decision of the learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court is right. The present appeal, therefore, fails and must be dismissed with costs.

RAGHUNATH SINGH v. HAZARI SAHU.

RICHARDSON, J.—I agree.

IN NO. 1505.

This appeal will stand dismissed. The appellants must pay to the respondent his costs in this appeal.

*Appeals dismissed.*PATNA HIGH COURT.
FULL BENCH.

CIVIL REVISION No. 198 of 1916.

January 24, 1917.

Present:—Sir Edward Chamier, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Sharfuddin and Mr. Justice Atkinson.

RAGHUNATH SINGH—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR
—PETITIONER
—PETITIONER

versus

HAZARI SAHU AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 66, s. 115—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 287—Government of India Act, 19 5, (s. 6 & 6 Geo. V, C. 61), s. 107—Execution—Sale proclamation—Value of property to be sold, ascertainment of—Court, duty of—High Court, interference by—Jurisdiction—Administrative act.

Order XXI, rule 66, of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, differs from section 287 of the Code of 1882, in that it requires a Court to draw up a proclamation of sale, after notice to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor. [p. 873, col. 1]

The action of a Court in settling the terms of a proclamation under Order XXI, rule 66, is a judicial act. [p. 873, col. 1]

It is the duty of a Court in preparing a proclamation of sale to state as fairly and accurately as possible in the proclamation the value of the property. It is absurd to enter in a proclamation two greatly varying estimates of the value of the property [p. 874, col. 1]

Snadumand Khan v. Phul Kaur, 20 A. 412; 25 I. A. 146 2 Q. W. N. 550; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 380; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 621, followed.

Rajah Romessur Prashad Narain Singh v. Rai Sham Krissen, 8 C. W. N. 257; Kashi Pershad Singh v. Jamuna Pershad Sahu, 3 C. 922; Saurendra Mohan Tagore v. Hurruck Chandra, 12 C. W. N. 542; Lachman Pershad Singh v. Ganga Pershad Singh, 6 Ind. Cas. 180 15 C. W. N. 713, referred to.

Obiter dictum—The jurisdiction of a High Court to interfere under section 107 of the Government of India Act, 19 5, extends not only to judicial but also to administrative acts of the lower Courts. [p. 873, col. 2.]

Application for revision of an order of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Court, Gaya, dated the 12th August 1916.

Mr. Sushil Madhub Mullick, for the Petitioner.

Mr. K. P. Jayaswal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

CHAMIER, C. J.—This is an application for revision of an order of the Subordinate Judge (1st Court) of Gaya. A decree upon a mortgage was obtained against the applicant in execution of which the mortgaged property is to be sold. When the Court was preparing the sale proclamation, the first mortgagee said that the value of the property was

RAGHUNATH SINGH v. HAZARI SAHU.

Rs. 7,500 odd. The mortgagor (present applicant) estimated the value at Rs. 65,000 while a puisne mortgagee estimated it at Rs. 20,000. The applicant put in a petition praying that evidence might be taken regarding the value of the property, and he desired to call witnesses on the subject. On August 12th, 1916, the Subordinate Judge recorded the following order: "Heard Pleadings of both sides. The values of properties given by both sides are agreed to be stated in the sale proclamation. Hence the judgment-debtor's prayer for time is rejected as not necessary. Let the value given by both sides be stated in the sale proclamation." The agreement referred to in this order was an agreement between the first and second mortgagees. The mortgagor (present applicant) who was the judgment-debtor did not agree. In fact as already stated, he wished the Court to ascertain the value. The figures given above are those stated to us by the learned Vakil for the applicant. When we examined the sale proclamation, it appeared that the figures stated, by the learned Vakil were not correct and that the difference between the values given by the different parties was proportionately much greater than in the figures given above. I have not examined the figures further, because they do not affect the view which I take of this case. It is certain that the mortgagor wished the Court to enter a very much larger figure in the sale proclamation than either of the mortgagees was prepared to accept. The questions for decision are whether the Subordinate Judge ought to have ascertained the value himself and secondly, if he ought to have done so, whether upon the present application this Court can require him to do so.

It was suggested that the action of the Court in settling the proclamation was administrative and not judicial and that no case had been "decided" within the meaning of section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In my opinion, the action of the Court in settling the terms of a proclamation under Order XXI, rule 66, is a judicial proceeding. I would point out that Order XXI, rule 66, differs from section 287 of the Code of 1882 in that it required the Court to draw up the proclamation after notice to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor. This indicates, in my opinion, that the action of the Court in settling the proclamation is intended to be judicial. I do not think it necessary to consider the question whether a case has been "decided" within the meaning of section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The jurisdiction of this Court to interfere under section 107 of the Government of India Act is clear, whether the action of the Court below was administrative or judicial. It is conceded that no appeal lies in this case.

If, as I hold, this Court has jurisdiction to entertain the present application it ought, in my opinion, to set aside the order now in question and direct the Subordinate Judge to ascertain the value of the properties to be sold. Order XXI, rule 66, requires the Court to cause a proclamation of the intended sale to be prepared. Such proclamation is to be drawn up after notice to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor and is to specify as fairly and accurately as possible, inter alia, "every other thing which the Court considers material for a purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property." In Rajah Ramessur Prashad Narain Singh v. Rai Sham Krissen (1), it was held that the judgment-debtor was entitled to have a reasonably correct valuation placed upon the property. In Kashi Pershad Singh v. Jamuna Pershad Sahu (2), it was said that the Court was not bound to investigate the value of the property, but in Saurendra Mohan Tagore v. Hurruk Chand (3), it was pointed out that the remarks made in Kashi Pershad Singh v. Jamuna Pershad Sahu (2) were obiter dicta. In Lachman Pershad Singh v. Ganga Pershad Singh (4), the Court referred to the case of Saurendra Mohan Tagore v. Hurruk Chand (3) and held that the Subordinate Judge was wrong in refusing to consider an application made to him to have the sale proclamation amended by inserting in it the proper value of the property to be sold. The learned Judges were of opinion that the question had been settled by the decision of the Privy Council in Saadatmand

(1) 8 C. W. N. 257.

(2) 3 C. 922.

(3) 12 C. W. N. 542.

(4) 6 Ind. Cas. 189; 15 C. W. N. 713.

RAHMAT V. ZABITA.

Khan v. Phul Kuar (5). With that view I entirely agree. Their Lordships of the Privy Council were of opinion that a gross misstatement of the value was something more grave than an ordinary irregularity of procedure and that the value of the property was a very material fact and must be considered one of those things which the Court considers material for the purchaser to know, and they observed that it had been enacted in terms (although express enactment was hardly necessary for such an object) that those things should be stated as fairly and accurately as possible. It seems to me that in view of the decision of their Lordships it is not open to any Court in India to hold that it is not the duty of a Court preparing a proclamation to state as fairly and accurately as possible in the proclamation the value of the property. It was suggested that this view of the law laid a very heavy burden on the Court. In the first place, that would be no reason for not enforcing the law. Next, it has never been suggested that the Court should hold an elaborate enquiry and ascertain the exact value of the property. Lastly, in my experience in another province no practical difficulty has been experienced by the Courts in giving effect to the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council and I see no reason why any greater difficulty should be experienced in this province. In my opinion it is absurd for a Court to enter in the sale proclamation a statement that the property to be sold is valued by one person at Rs. 7,000 and by another at Rs. 70,000 or as in one case Rs. 1,500 by one person and Rs. 1,00,000 by another. The value must be stated as fairly and accurately as possible. An entry of two figures like Rs. 7,000 and Rs. 70,000 in the proclamation is calculated to cause great confusion in the minds of bidders.

I would allow this application, set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge dated August 12th, 1916, and direct him to prepare a proclamation of sale according to law. No order as to costs.

SHARFUDDIN, J.—I agree.

ATKINSON, J.—I concur in the judgment of this Court delivered by the Chief Justice.

Rule made absolute.

(5) 20 A. 412; 25 I. A. 146; 2 O. W. N. 550; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 380; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 624.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 399 OF 1914.

January 9, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith and

Mr. Justice Shadi Lal.

RAHMAT AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—
APPELLANTS

versus

ZABITA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Burden of proof—Registration—Consideration, receipt of—Presumption.

Where a vendor admits receipt of consideration in respect of a transfer at the time of registration, the onus is on him to show that he did not in fact receive it, and the presumption arising from his admission is not rebutted by his mere denial of such receipt. [p. 875, col 2.]

Wazir Singh v. Jai Gopal, 17 P. R. 1888, referred to.

Second appeal from the decree of the Divisional Judge, Gujranwala Division, at Lahore, dated the 2nd January 1914, affirming that of the Munsif, 1st class, Pakpattan, dated the 26th August 1912, decreeing the claim.

The Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi, K. B., for the Appellants.

Dr. Muhammad Iqbal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This was an action brought by one Zabita for possession of a plot of land on the strength of a sale-deed executed in his favour on the 17th September 1909 by the appellants Rahmat and Ahmad for Rs. 3,500. The Courts below have concurred in decreeing the claim, and the learned Counsel for the appellants admits that on the plea of fraud set up by his clients there is a finding of fact against them, which cannot be impugned in second appeal. He, however, contends that the learned Divisional Judge has found that the sale was really effected in favour of one Gopi, and that the suit should be dismissed because Gopi was prohibited by the Punjab Alienation of Land Act from buying the property from a member of an agricultural tribe. The pleadings of the parties make it absolutely clear that the plaintiff Zabita alleged a sale in his own favour, and this allegation was met by the assertion made by the defendants that the transaction was one of mortgage in favour of Gopi, and that a fraud was practised upon them by which they were induced to believe that they were attesting a mortgage instead of a sale. It will be observed that it was not the case of the defendants that they effected a sale in favour of Gopi; and indeed, Rahmat's statement on the 31st March 1911, referred to by the lower Appellate Court, is to the effect that he had sold his land to Zabita. The observations at the end of the judgment of that Court, to which our attention has been drawn, do not warrant the conclusion that the learned Divisional Judge intended to hold that the sale was really made in favour of Gopi. If that had been his finding, there is not the slightest doubt that he would have dismissed the suit. A perusal of the judgment makes it clear that what the learned Judge meant was that Gopi financed Zabita; that there was some understanding between them with respect to this transaction; and that subsequently they fell out. Neither the plaintiff nor the defendants alleged the sale to be one in favour of Gopi, and consequently there was no issue on the subject. The sale-deed, which is a registered document, is clearly in favour of Zabita, and there is not an iota of evidence to prove that he is not the real vendee. The mere suspicion that there might have been some kind of secret understanding between him and Gopi is no reason for dismissing the suit.

KUPPUSAMY AIYAR v. VEERAPPA CHETTIAR.

The consideration for the transaction comprised three items; on two of which, viz., Rs. 1,950, paid before the Sub-Registrar, and Rs. 1,000, paid by transfers of the vendor's debt in Gopi's books to the vendee, there are clear findings by the lower Appellate Court which cannot be impugned in second appeal, and in fact no attempt has been made to challenge them.

As regards Rs. 550, said to have been paid to the vendors before the date fixed for the registration of the document, the Munsif gave his decision in favour of the plaintiff, but the learned Divisional Judge on appeal has not recorded a definite finding and has simply remarked that the only proof of the payment is the admission of the vendor at the time of the registration. The learned Counsel for the appellants accordingly contends that we should remand the case to the lower Appellate Court with a direction that it should record a clear finding on the passing of Rs. 550; but considering that the matter is simple enough, and that section 43 of the Punjab Courts Act fully empowers this Court to decide a question of fact not determined by the lower Appellate Court, we do not think that any useful purpose would be served by further prolonging this litigation, which began five years ago. After hearing the learned Counsel we are not prepared to hold that the presumption [vide Wazir Singh v. Jai Gopal (1)] arising in consequence of the admission before the Sub-Registrar has been rebutted by the mere ipse dixit of the vendors that they received only Rs. 50. The onus is clearly upon them, and they have failed to discharge it.

We accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 17 P. R. 1888.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

PAUPER APPEAL No. 32 OF 1914.

November 9, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim and Mr. Justice Srinivasa Aiyangar.

KUPPUSAMY AIYAR (DEAD) AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

A. L. V. R. P. S. VEERAPPA

CHETTIAR AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 85, 89—Principal and agent—Accounts, suit on—Consignment for sale on commission—Advances to consignee—Settlement, periodical, of accounts—Action brought after stoppage of dealings—'Open, mutual and current account'—Agency, termination of.

A suit for accounts by the plaintiff, who used to send goods to the defendants for sale on commission, receiving advances therefor from time to time and acknowledging sums due by him at periodical settlements of accounts, after the dealings had stopped, is not a suit on an 'open, mutual and current account' within the meaning of Article 85 to Schedule I of the Limitation Act. [p. 876, col. 2.]

The question when an agency terminates must depend on the facts of each particular case. [p. 876, col. 2.]

Quære:—Whether after all dealings between a principal and agent have been closed, the agency continues till the latter accounts for money alleged to be due to the former. [p. 876, col. 2.]

KUPPUSAMY AIYAR v. VEERAPPA CHETTIAR.

Venkatachalam Chetty v. Narayanan Chetty, 26 Ind. Cas. 740; 28 M. L. J. 140; 39 M. 376, approved.

Babu Ram v. Ram Dayal, 12 A. 541; A. W. N. (1890) 9; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1089; Fink v. Buldeo Dass, 26 C. 715; 3 C. W. N. 524; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1057, disapproved.

The plaintiff agreed to supply agricultural produce to the defendant, who was to sell the same and pay over the proceeds to the plaintiff after deducting advances made to the plaintiff on the articles supplied. The dealings commenced in 1901 and stopped in 1906. There were periodical settlements of accounts, the plaintiff executing a promissory note at each settlement for the balance due. Plaintiff sued in 1912 for accounts between 1901 to 1906 and for recovery of the amount found due to him:

Held, (1) that this was not a case of open, mutual and current account within the meaning of Article 85 of the Limitation Act and the suit was consequently barred: [p. 876, col. 2.]

(2) that even on the basis of an agency the agency terminated in 1906 and the suit was barred under Article 89. [p. 876, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Trichinopoly, in Original Suit No. 77 of 1912.

Mr. R. Kuppuswami Aiyar, for the Appellants.

Messrs. T. Narasimha Aiyangar and A. Krishnaswami Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT—This appeal is from a suit instituted in forma pauperis by the appellant for the taking of accounts against the defendant, to whom he used to send agricultural produce on the understanding that he was to sell the produce and pay over the sale proceeds to the appellant after deducting whatever moneys the respondent advanced to the appellant. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit holding, upon the allegations in the plaint, that it was barred by limitation.

The agency, according to the statement in the plaint, began sometime in 1901 and there were no dealings after 1906. This is made clear from the different paragraphs of the plaint, for instance, paragraphs 5, 9 and 12. The last paragraph, i. e., No. 12 mentions that the cause of action for the suit arose from 1901 to 1906 on the dates on which the appellant executed the promissory notes. The promissory notes referred to therein were notes executed by the appellant for the moneys advanced to him. One of these has been printed and our attention has been drawn to it by the learned Pleader for the appellant. That note goes to show that the previous accounts were settled and as a result of that, the promissory note in question was executed.

It was first of all contended before us that this was a case of open, mutual and current account, but upon the facts stated in the plaint it is difficult to say that this is so. What happened was the plaintiff used to send his goods to the defendant and to borrow from time to time on the security of those goods and for the balance that became due after taking accounts, he used to execute promissory notes. That would strongly suggest that there was no account left to be settled between the parties after the date when the last promissory note was executed.

Then it was argued that this was a case of agency, and the agency would not terminate until the defendant accounts for the moneys alleged to be due to the plaintiff. In support of this contention our attention has been drawn to two cases, one Babu Ram v. Ram Dayal (1) and the other of Fink v. Buldeo Dass (2). The learned Chief Justice of this High Court in Venkatachalam Chetty v. Narayanan Chetty (3) has dissented from the ruling in Babu Ram v. Ram Dayal (1), while Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar had to distinguish it from the case he had to deal with. It is unnecessary in view of the fact that, upon the allegations in the plaint itself to which our attention has been drawn, accounts must have closed sometime in 1906, to express any definite opinion whether the view of law laid down in Babu Ram v. Ram Dayal (1) and Fink v. Buldeo Dass (2) is correct. The question when an agency terminates must depend on the facts of each particular case, and there can be little doubt that in this case the agency had terminated sometime in 1906. We feel some doubt, however, whether the law laid in Babu Ram v. Ram Dayal (1) and Fink v. Buldeo Dass (2) is correct. We are inclined, as at present advised, to agree with the learned Chief Justice's view as expressed in Venkatachalam Chetty v. Narayanan Chetty (3).

It was further argued that there had been an acknowledgment of liability by

(1) 12 A. 541; A. W. N. (1890) 99; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 089.

(2) 26 C. 7 5; 3 C. W. N. 524; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1057.

(3) 26 Ind. Cas. 740; 28 M. L. J. 140; 39 M. 376.

SEW PRASAD v. RADHA MOHAN SAHAY.

the agent of the respondent. But the Subordinate Judge has found that the agent was not shown to have been authorised to make any acknowledgment and we think that this finding is correct. The Subordinate Judge's view of the power-of-attorney, Exhibit C, seems to us right. The appeal is dismissed with costs. The appellant must pay the Court-fee payable to the Government.

Appeal dismissed.

V. R. P.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 3380 OF 1914.

December 14, 1916.

Present: Mr. Justice Roe and

Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad.

SEW PRASAD AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS —APPELLANTS*versus*

RADHA MOHAN SAHAY AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 32—Account books, entries in, admissibility of.

Entries in an account book are inadmissible in evidence under section 32 of the Evidence Act, if it is not proved that the person who made them is dead. [p. 878, col. 1.]

Semle.—Entries of payments of money made through named persons in an account book kept by a deceased servant in the ordinary course of his business are admissible in evidence to prove the payments under section 32 of the Evidence Act; but persons through whom the payments were made must be called to prove that the payments were in fact made. [p. 878, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Saran, dated the 6th August 1914, confirming that of the Munsif, Siwan, dated the 27th January 1914.

Mr. Rajendra Pershad, for the Appellants.Mr. Harnarain Pershad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The appellants in this case, who are mortgagees, are aggrieved by a decree made by the Court below for the redemption of property which has been in usufructuary mortgage for some sixty years.

The pleas taken in the plaint were that the whole sum due upon the mortgage had been liquidated by the retention, in the hands of the mortgagees, of sums which the mortgagees had undertaken to pay as an annual quit-rent upon the property. The defendants-appellants pleaded in reply that they had in fact paid the quit-rent regularly and in addition had paid large sums as cesses, with the result that not only had the mortgage not been redeemed but a considerable addition had been made to the sum due upon the mortgage.

The lower Courts held as a fact that certain payments towards quit-rent alleged to have been made had not been made; that certain other payments said to have been made towards cesses had not been made and others had been made, and gave a decree for redemption to the plaintiffs on payment into Court of the amount found to be due to the mortgagees upon the account thus made up.

The mortgagors have accepted this decree. The mortgagees have appealed on four grounds, firstly, that inasmuch as two of their number had transferred their interests to a third party, who is not upon the record, the suit as a whole is not maintainable; secondly, that the payment of quit-rent might have been proved by entries in daily account books for thirty years and that those produced were admissible in evidence under section 34 of the Evidence Act without corroboration; thirdly, that in any case whether section 34 applied or not, it had been proved that the persons who made the entries in the books of accounts were dead and that the statements that these sums had been paid had been made in the account books in the ordinary course of business and were, therefore, admissible in evidence under section 32, and lastly, that the defendants should not have been directed to pay any part of the costs of the suit.

With regard to the first contention, the defendants have been in possession of the property mortgaged over sixty years and have never during this long period given notice to the mortgagor of the transfer of their interest in the property to a third party. Upon an examination of the facts the lower Court has arrived at the conclusion that the alleged transferees are not, and never have been, in possession of the property. In our opinion the lower Courts have arrived at the correct conclusion on this point.

The second and third grounds may be dealt with together. The question is whether the account books are to be received in evidence. With regard to the "C" and "D" series, they purport to have been written and kept by persons of whose death there is no proof and they are, therefore, inadmissible under section 32. This reduces the accounts to be considered to Exhibits A-1 to A-8. Assuming for the sake of argument that the deceased servant kept his master's accounts in the ordinary course of business, it is necessary to consider the nature of the statements of payments made in these account books. On an examination we find that the entries are of sums of rent paid through named persons. There is no evidence that any of those named are dead. It was clearly the duty of those who produced these account books to call the persons through whose hands these payments are said to have been made, to prove that the payments had in fact been made.

SHEONANDAN v. KASHI.

Having regard to the above findings we are of opinion that the defendants-appellants were rightly directed to pay costs.

The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
FIRST CIVIL APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 63
OF 1916.

December 4, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott and
Mr. Justice Walsh.

SHEONANDAN—DEFENDANT—
APPELLANT

versus

KASHI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—
RESPONDENTS.

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), ss. 16, 41, 42—Insolvent's property abandoned by Receiver, transfer of, validity of—Vendee, rights of.

Where a Receiver of the estate of an insolvent abandons a particular item of property as worthless and the insolvent after getting his discharge transfers the same, the transfer is not bad and the vendee is entitled to enforce his rights under the transfer. [p. 879, col. 2.]

First appeal against the order of the District Judge, Benares, dated the 23rd December 1915.

FACTS.—This was a suit for a declaration that the plaintiff was mortgagee of the house in dispute and for possession thereof as mortgagee. Pir Mohammad and Rahman mortgaged the house to one Bipat on 15th February 1907 for Rs. 330. On 30th October 1911, Madaran, one of the defendants, executed a kirayanamah in favour of Bipat. In the meantime, on 31st May 1907, one Jaikrishna Das obtained a money-decree against Pir Mohammad and on 13th January 1909 the house was sold subject to Bipat's mortgage and was purchased by Sheonandan appellant. On 12th June 1912, Sheonandan executed a mortgage in favour of Mariam, wife of Madaran. On 1st of October 1910, Bipat was declared insolvent and a Receiver was appointed of his property. The Receiver made a report on 15th February 1913, that the insolvent had no realisable assets and on 24th June 1912, the insolvent got his discharge after notice to all the creditors. He sold the house to Kashi plaintiff on 28th October 1914, and the latter brought the present suit for possession, alleging that Sheonandan never got possession and the proceedings taken by him after his purchase were taken in collusion with the judgment-debtors, Pir Mohammad and others. The first Court dismissed the suit, holding that plaintiff did not derive any title from Bipat as the latter had no interest in the house after discharge and so could not confer any title on plaintiff. The lower Appellate Court remanded the suit for trial on the merits, holding that Bipat became owner and could confer title on plaintiff. The defendant appealed to the High Court.

Pandit Baldeo Ram Dave, for the Appellant.—Bipat having been declared insolvent, all his property vested in the Receiver. Section 16 of the Provincial Insolvency Act provides that in such a case the property will vest either in the Court or, if a Receiver is appointed, in the Receiver. Here a Receiver being appointed, the property vested in him.

There is no order of the Court divesting the Receiver and vesting the property in the insolvent. He could, therefore, have no right in the property and the plaintiff has, therefore, no title to bring the suit.

It is only when conditions contemplated in sections 41 and 42 of the Insolvency Act exist that the insolvent gets back the property. If there is a surplus or if the debtor ought not to have been adjudged insolvent, the insolvent becomes entitled to that property. The Insolvency Act never contemplated that the insolvent could get his property while the creditors were still unpaid.

MAHAMAD MEERAN BIBI v. MAHAMAD ROWTHER.

Under the English Act if the insolvent wrongly gets an order of discharge and he is again adjudged insolvent, the original property would be taken possession of by the Court. I submit the same principle should be followed here.

The insolvent has not been re-conveyed the property and he has no title to it which he can transfer.

He has acted dishonestly and the Court should give no assistance to him.

[PIGGOTT, J.—The only question is that if the Receiver thinks that the insolvent has no realisable property and makes a report to that effect and the Court passes an order of discharge, what is the position of the vendee of any property which the Receiver previously thought to be unrealisable.]

I submit that the vendee shall have no rights. The property will vest in the Receiver.

Mr. Harnandan Prasad, for the Respondent, was not called upon.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of the litigation out of which this appeal arises are complicated; but the appeal before us raises a single and a simple point. One Bipat was declared insolvent on the 1st of October 1910. In his schedule he appears to have recorded among his assets his mortgagee rights under a certain mortgage of the year 1907. The Receiver, however, considered those rights worthless and after making such efforts as he thought proper to realize the insolvent's assets for the benefit of his creditors, the said Receiver reported to the District Judge that there were no other assets of the insolvent which, in his opinion, were capable of realization. Upon this Bipat was discharged by an order of the 24th of June 1913. Since that date, that is to say, on the 20th of October 1914, Bipat has found one Kashi who was willing to pay him Rs. 500 for his rights under the mortgage of 1907. The present suit was by Kashi to enforce the rights, if any, acquired by him under this transfer. The Court of first instance, although it framed a number of issues, dismissed the suit on the single finding that Bipat after his order of discharge had no rights left under the mortgage in question. The point taken was that Bipat's rights had vested in the Court or the Receiver under section 16 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, III of 1907, and that the order of discharge does not operate so as to revert those rights in Bipat. The learned District Judge in appeal has reversed this finding and has remanded the case to the first Court for trial on the merits. We do not know at present whether the plaintiff Kashi has got value for his money or not, that question depends upon the determination of the issues not hitherto tried. We think the District Judge was right. The Receiver having abandoned this particular item of property as worthless, Bipat became entitled to deal with it after the order of discharge, and if he succeeded in getting any one to pay something for his rights, the circumstance that he was declared insolvent in 1910 and got an order of discharge in 1913 would not in itself make the transfer in favour of Kashi bad. We, accordingly, dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1926 OF 1915.

October 26, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Spencer and
Mr. Justice Phillips.

MAHAMAD MEERAN BIBI AND ANOTHER

—DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 AND 11—

APPELLANTS

versus

Sheik MAHAMAD ROWTHER AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS NOS. 1 TO 3 AND DEFENDANTS NOS. 2 TO 6—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code Act V of 1908, s. 100—Appeal, second—Decision on issue by what law parties governed, whether decision on 'usage having the force of law'—Muhammadan Law—Will—Partition decree—Provision for payment of debts.

A decision on an issue in a suit that the parties are governed by one system of law and not by another, is not a decision on a 'usage having the force of law' within the meaning of section 100 (a)

MAHAMAD MEERAN BIBI v. MAHAMAD ROWTHER.

Civil Procedure Code, which the High Court can interfere with in second appeal. [p. 880, col. 2.]

The expression 'usage having the force of law' in the section means an usage set up in derogation of the ordinary law, and the decision which can be taken up in second appeal under clause (a) of the section is not only on the existence of the usage but also on its having the force of law. [p. 880, col. 2.]

Kakarla Abbayya v. Raja Venkata Papayya Rao, 29 M. 24; 16 M. L. J. 8, Kunhambi v. Kalanathar, 24 Ind. Cas. 523; 27 M. L. J. 154; 16 M. L. T. 17; 38 M. 1052; Ibrahim Rowther v. Mahomed Ibrahim Rowther, 30 Ind. Cas. 806; 29 M. L. J. 763; (1915) M. W. N. 864; 39 M. 664; Mohesh Chunder Dhal v. Satrugan Dhal, 29 C. 343; 29 I. A. 62; 6 G. W. N. 459; 4 Bom. L. R. 372; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 238, referred to.

Under Muhammadan Law, the estate of a deceased person must be applied to the payment of his debts and funeral expenses before the heirs can make partition of it. [p. 881, col. 1.]

Pathumabi v. Vittil Ummachabi, 26 M. 734, referred to.

Where a Muhammadan has by his Will bequeathed certain properties for payment of mahar and dower debts and his heirs have filed a suit for partition, it is open to the Court, at the time of passing the final decree, to ascertain the debts due by the deceased and to provide for their payment out of the estate before partition is actually effected. [p. 881, col. 2.]

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Trichinopoly, in Appeal Suits Nos. 520 and 549 of 1914, preferred against that of the Principal District Munsif, Kulitalai, in Original Suit No. 102 of 1912.

Dewan Bahadur Mr. L. A. Govindaraghava Aiyar (with him Mr. N. Rajagopalachariar), for the Appellants.

Mr. C. Padmanabha Aiyangar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The parties in this case are Muhammadans, that is, Labbais of Trichinopoly District, and in defence of a suit for partition, defendants set up the plea that they were governed by Hindu Law "in the matter of inheritance to the estate of a deceased person", and issue I was framed on that plea. Both the lower Courts have found that the plea is false and that the parties are governed by Muhammadan Law. In second appeal the learned Vakil for appellants seeks to re-open the question as being a question of law and not merely a question of fact. It is argued that the question at issue is whether the decision of the lower Courts is not against some usage having the force of law within the meaning of section 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Reliance is placed on the decision in Kakarla Abbayya v. Raja Venkata Papayya Rao (1), where it was held that an issue as to the existence or non-existence of a usage having the force of law could be decided in second appeal upon the evidence. In that case, however, the usage set up was one in derogation of the ordinary law and the question in issue was not only whether such a usage existed, but also whether it was a usage having the force of law. In the present case there is no question of a usage having the force of law, but the question at issue is whether the parties are governed by Hindu or Muhammadan Law, and no question can arise as to whether these systems of law have the force of law. In Kunhambi v. Kalanathar (2) it was held that the question whether Mappillas of North Malabar were governed by Muhammadan or Marumakkattayam Law was a question of fact, and this Court refused in second appeal to consider the question on the evidence. Similarly in Ibrahim Rowther v. Muhomad Ibrahim Rowther (3), the Chief Justice evidently held the same view as regards the question whether a Labbai family followed the Hindu Law of inheritance, for he remarks: "Of the later cases, this is the first to come before this Court on first appeal so as to enable the Court to appreciate the evidence for itself," and admittedly one at least of the previous cases had come up in second appeal. The question in Shaik Ibrahim Rowther v. Muhomad Ibrahim Rowther (3) was substantially the same as in the present case, and we accordingly think that it is a question of fact, which has been decided by the lower Courts and cannot be re-opened in second appeal. We are confirmed in this opinion by the observation of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Mohesh Chunder Dhal v. Satrugan Dhal (4) that the question as to the existence of a custom of lineal primogeniture as the rule of succession in a particular family was a question of fact. We have accordingly disallowed any argument for appellants

(1) 29 M. 24; 16 M. L. J. 8.

(2) 24 Ind. Cas. 528; 27 M. L. J. 156; 16 M. L. T. 17.

(3) 30 Ind. Cas. 806; 29 M. L. J. 763; (1915) M. W. N. 866; 39 M. 684.

(4) 29 C. 343 at p. 352; 29 I. A. 62; 6 G. W. N. 459; 4 Bom. L. R. 372; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 238.

RAMANI MOHAN ROY v. JAGUBANDHU KARMAKAR.

on the question of whether the parties are governed by Hindu Law, as the validity of the finding of the lower Courts is not impeached on any point of law.

The next point taken is that Exhibit III is not a Will, but a settlement of property which is to take effect in presenti, and is, therefore, not invalid under Muhammadan Law. We agree, however, with the lower Courts that on a proper construction of the document which purports to be a Will, it is a Will and there is no evidence as to the vesting of the gifts in presenti to show that that construction is wrong.

The property mentioned in the Will is in the possession of the first defendant and the recital in the Will is that the properties are bequeathed in order that the first defendant may discharge certain debts, one due on a hypothecation deed executed in favour of the eleventh defendant, one due to the first defendant on account of unpaid mahar, and one on account of dowry which the first defendant had brought with her on marriage. The lower Appellate Court has given the first defendant a charge on the plaint property as regards the mahar debt, and it is now contended that she is also entitled to a charge on the property mentioned in the Will for the debt in respect of dowry. It must be observed that the 11th defendant does not raise the same plea in respect of the debt due to him. Defendants Nos. 2 to 6 in their written statement denied the existence of the debt for dowry, but no issue was framed and no evidence has been let in as to the genuineness of the debt, nor did the first defendant in her written statement take the plea that she was at least entitled to a charge in respect of it. We do not, therefore, think that any charge can now be given. We may, however, observe that no final decree for partition has yet been passed, and under Muhammadan Law the estate of a deceased person must be applied to the payment of his debts and funeral expenses before the heirs can make partition of it [Pothumabai v. Vittil Unmachabi (5)], and although it has been held by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court [Iafri Begum v. Amir Muhammad Khan (6)] that on the death of an intestate the ownership of his estate devolves immediately on his heirs, and such devolution is not contingent upon, and suspended till, payment of his debts, we think it will be open to the original Court at the time of passing the final decree to ascertain the debts due by the deceased and to provide for their payment out of the estate before partition is actually effected.

(5) 26 M. 7-4.

(6) 7 A 822; A. W. N. (1885) 249; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 636.

In the result this second appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 555
OF 1914.

December 13, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice D. Chatterjee and
Mr. Justice Newbould.

RAMANI MOHAN ROY—DEFENDANT NO. 1
—APPELLANT

versus

JAGUBANDHU KARMAKAR AND OTHERS
—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11—Res judicata. Litigating under the same title, meaning of—Decree against person as heir of another wrongly described as dead, whether binding upon him when he becomes such heir.

Defendant No. 1 got a decree for khas possession of certain property in a contested suit brought against defendant No. 5 as the son and heir of the plaintiff who was wrongly described as dead. Subsequently the plaintiff, on return home from pilgrimage, instituted a suit against defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 5 for recovering possession of the property on declaration of his title, and got a decree. Defendant No. 1 thereupon preferred an appeal, during the pendency of which the plaintiff having died, defendant No. 5 was substituted in his place as his legal representative:

Held, that the decree obtained by defendant No. 1 against defendant No. 5 in the previous suit was not binding as res judicata upon defendant No. 5 in the subsequent litigation as he was not litigating under the same title in the two cases [p. 805, col. 1].

Appeal against the decree of the Sub-Judge, Bakerganj, dated the 13th November 1913, affirming that of the Officiating Additional Munsif, Barisal, dated the 23rd June 1913.

FACTS of the case appear from the judgment.

RAMANI MOHAN ROY v. JAGUBANDHU KARMAKAR.

Babu Gunada Charan Sen, for the Appellant.—The defendant No. 1, my client, got a decree for khas possession against the defendant No. 5, who is now the respondent in this appeal, having been substituted as the legal representative of his deceased father for this very property which is now the subject-matter of this appeal; and that decree is binding upon the defendant No. 5. He cannot in this appeal go behind that decree and say that as the legal representative of his deceased father he is entitled to recover the very property which has been taken away from him by a decree of Court in a contested suit between himself and my client, defendant No. 1. An Appellate Court is entitled to take notice of incidents which took place since the decision of the suit. [Refers to Ram Ratan Sahu v. Mohant Sahu (1), Abdul Rahaman v. Sarafat Ali (2), Rai Charan Mandal v. Biswanath Mandal (3)]. No doubt the plaintiff has obtained a decree for the recovery of possession of this property in a suit against my client to which the defendant No. 5 was added as a party, but he is now dead and is now represented by his son and legal heir, the defendant No. 5. How could defendant No. 5 claim the benefit of the decree obtained by his father in the face of the decree which my client defendant No. 1 has got against defendant No. 5 in respect of the same property? It will lead to needless litigation if the decree obtained by the plaintiff, the deceased father of defendant No. 5, is allowed to stand, for as soon as the defendant No. 5 will attempt to enforce this decree he will be met by the decree which my client has got against him. The judgment in the suit in which my client got his decree for khas possession against defendant No. 5 has been filed and is before your Lordships, and it shows that the defendant No. 5 would not be able to get this property as long as that decree stands.

[NEWBOULD, J.—Your argument is that the son is estopped.]

(1) 6 C. L. J. 74 at p. 75; 11 C. W. N. 732.

(2) 31 Ind. Cas. 896; 20 C. W. N. 667; 22 C. L. J. 412.

(3) 26 Ind. Cas. 410; 20 C. L. J. 107.

Babu Brojendra Nath Chatterjee, for the Respondent.—The defendant No. 5 is now appearing as the legal representative of the plaintiff, his deceased father, and as such will not be bound in this suit by any decision which was not in a suit between his father and defendant No. 1, the appellant. A decree may have been obtained by defendant No. 1 against defendant No. 5 but that decree cannot be res judicata against the plaintiff, and so it cannot be binding upon his legal representative. The defendant No. 5 in this appeal is litigating in a wholly different character from that in which he litigated in the previous suit between himself and defendant No. 1. The decree in the previous suit could never be enforced against the father of defendant No. 5, who was not a party to that suit, and, therefore, it cannot be binding upon his heir and legal representative, whoever he may be, whether the defendant No. 5 or anybody else. The principle of res judicata cannot apply here, as the defendant No. 5 is not claiming here in his own right but in the right of a person who was not a party to the previous suit. We do not know whether the previous decree obtained by defendant No. 1 against defendant No. 5 is still enforceable. The question was not raised or considered in any of the lower Courts, and your Lordships ought not be asked to decide a question raised for the first time in second appeal, a question which involves the consideration of many facts and circumstances which are not before the Court. I do not dispute that sometimes an Appellate Court can take cognizance of events occurring after the decision of the suit. This Court may take cognizance of the fact that plaintiff is dead and is succeeded by his son defendant No. 5, against whom a decree was obtained for this property by defendant No. 1, the appellant. But it cannot go further and hold that that decree would be binding as res judicata against the defendant No. 5 in a suit in which he is litigating as the legal representative of his father. No doubt defendant No. 5 is the same physical person in both the suits but in the eye of the law his legal individuality in the present appeal is not the same as that in the previous suit.

JAGAT MOHINI DASÍ v. MOHAMAD IBRAHIM HUSSAIN.

The only question for decision in this appeal is whether the lower Appellate Court rightly decided the appeal or not. The decision of the Court of Appeal below, as it is, is conclusive, and no attempt has been made by the other side to question the legality of that decision. But extraneous matters have been brought in, and your Lordships asked to decide a question like an Original Court.

Babu Gumada Charan Sen replied.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff was away from home for a number of years and during his absence his son defendant No. 5 managed his properties.

The plaintiff had a nimhowla within a certain osat taluk which was sold for arrears of rent. The purchaser served notices under section 167 of the Bengal Tenancy Act upon under-tenants and then sold the osat taluk to defendant No. 1. Defendant No. 1 brought a suit for khas possession against defendant No. 5 as the son and heir of the plaintiff described as dead and got a decree in a contested suit.

The plaintiff on return from pilgrimage brought the suit giving rise to this appeal for a declaration that he was not bound by the decree against defendant No. 5 and for recovery of possession. Both the Courts below decreed the suit of the plaintiff and defendant No. 1 appeals. It has so happened that pending the appeal the plaintiff died leaving defendant No. 5 as his sole heir and the contest is now between defendant No. 1 as the appellant and defendant No. 5 as the respondent.

It is urged before us that the decree for khas possession obtained by defendant No. 1 against defendant No. 5 in the previous suit is absolutely binding between the parties and defendant No. 5 cannot fall back upon the decree obtained by his father. The decision of this point depends upon whether defendant No. 5 litigates under the same title in the two cases. He was sued in the previous case as the heir of the plaintiff which he was not at the time and he comes in now as the heir of the plaintiff which he now is. Defendant No. 5 is not litigating under the same title in the two cases and it cannot be said that the matter is res udicata. We do not see how otherwise the decree can be absolutely binding. As the consideration of the facts subsequent to suit cannot help the appellant, it is not necessary to consider whether they should be considered in this case.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 188 OF 1916.

January 19, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chapman and
Mr. Justice Roe.

Musammât JAGAT MOHINI DASÍ—
APPELLANT

versus.

Syed MOHAMAD IBRAHIM HUSSAIN
KHAN alias MANJHE NAWAB AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182—Decree—Appeal—Execution—Limitation, commencement of.

Where an appeal is preferred against an entire decree, the limitation to execute it runs from the date of the final decree of the Appellate Court. [p. 884, col. 2; p. 885, col. 1.]

A mortgagee obtained a decree nisi on foot of his mortgage on 9th July 1902 against the mortgagor and some other persons interested in the mortgaged property. The mortgagor acquiesced in the decree, but the other defendants appealed against the entire decree and the dispute was finally settled by a decree of the Privy Council dated 17th January 1912. The mortgagee applied on 3rd May 1914 to have a final decree made in his favour, and accordingly the decree was made final on 31st March 1915.

Held, that inasmuch as an appeal was preferred against the entire decree, limitation began to run under Article 182 of the Limitation Act only from the date of the final decree, and the application was, therefore, within time. [p. 884, col. 2.]

Appeal against the order of the Sub-Judge, 2nd Court, Patna, dated the 27th May 1916.

Messrs. Purendra Narain Saha and Naresh Chundra Saha, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Fakhruddin and Amir Hossain, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

CHAPMAN, J.—This is an appeal against an order overruling an objection made in execution of a mortgage decree. The plaintiff in the mortgage suit was the assignee of the bond. The suit was no contested by the mortgagor except in so far as she claimed maintenance. It was contested by the other defendants who were interested in some of the mortgaged properties. These other defendants contested the genuineness and the bona fides of the mortgage-bond. The suit was decreed. The decree nisi directs that if the amount decreed is not paid within ninety days by the mortgagor, the mortgaged properties which are in possession of the mortgagor shall be brought to sale; that if one-third of the amount decreed is not paid by the defendants second party within the time allowed the properties in their possession shall be sold, and a similar order is made in regard to each of the properties in which the remaining defendants are interested. The mortgagor did not appeal against this order but the other defendants did appeal to the High Court. In their appeal they impugned the genuineness of the mortgage-bond; they also alleged that the plaintiff was not the assignee of it; they also alleged that the mortgage transaction was not bona fide, and that no consideration had passed. They raised other questions with which we are not at the present moment concerned connected with priority. The decree of the first Court had been made on the 9th of July 1902; the appeal to the High Court was disposed of by a decree dated the 3rd of March 1905, and the appeal to the Privy Council was decreed on the 17th January 1912, in which certain directions were made for an account of certain matters to be made by the Calcutta High Court. On the 29th of April 1913 the High Court disposed of the matter by an order directing that a certain sum should be refunded out of the Rs. 4,000 deposited in Court and that the property of the defendant-mortgagors should be sold in execution of the decree of the Subordinate Judge. On the 3rd of May 1914 an application was made to the Subordinate Judge to make the decree final. In accordance with this application the decree was made final on the 31st of March 1915.

JAGAT MOHINI DASÍ V. MOHAMAD IBRAHIM HUSSAIN.

The first objection taken before the learned Subordinate Judge was that the order of the Privy Council not having been transmitted under sub-rule 2 of rule 15, Order XLV of the Schedule to the Code of Civil Procedure, the Court had no jurisdiction to make the decree final in the case. The application for the decree to be made final has not been placed before us, but it appears from the application for execution that it was an application made with reference to the preliminary decree of the Subordinate Judge himself and not an application with reference to the decree of the Privy Council. It is also a fact that the High Court had given a direction that proceedings should be taken by the Subordinate Judge. Whether the order of the Privy Council was actually transmitted to the Subordinate Judge or not by the office, it does not appear. I am of opinion that the first objection was rightly overruled.

The second objection is one of limitation. It is said that limitation began to run from the decree of the learned Subordinate Judge dated the 9th July 1902 and that, therefore, the application for a decree final was barred in 1915, the period of limitation under the present Limitation Act of 1908 being three years. The decision on this point depends upon the terms of Article 182 of the Schedule to the Limitation Act. That Article provides a period of three years from the date of the decree, or order, or where there has been an appeal, from the date of the final decree or order of the Appellate Court. The question I have to determine is whether there was an appeal in this case against the decree. The argument is that the particular portion of the decree with which I am concerned in the present case was the decree against the judgment debtor, the mortgagor; that there had been no appeal against that decree so far as the mortgagor was concerned and that, therefore, the period of limitation began to run from the date of the decree, and not from the date of the final decree in appeal. It is true that the mortgagor did not appeal against the decree, but the terms of the Article are general and the question to be decided is whether there was an appeal against the decree against the mortgagor. The memorandum of appeal, as I have said, makes it clear that there was an appeal against the entire decree and not only against that portion of the decree which affected the judgment-debtors other than the mortgagor. The other judgment-debtors in the appeal to the High Court impugned the genuineness of the mortgage, the bona fides of the mortgage and the allegation of the plaintiff that he had purchased it. This was an appeal not merely against that portion of the decree affecting them but an appeal also against the decree as it stood against the mortgagor. It has been contended that that portion of the appeal was not pressed in the High Court. We are not concerned whether it was pressed or not. We have no doubt that there was an appeal against the entire decree; that being so, limitation does not begin to run until the date of the final decree, and the application in execution was not, therefore, barred.

KHATUN BEGAM v. EJAZ AHMAD.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

ROE, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEALS FROM ORDERS NOS. 131
& 132 OF 1916.

December 19, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Piggott and
Mr. Justice Walsh.

Musammât KHATUN BEGAM—

OPPOSITE PARTY—APPELLANT
versus

EJAZ AHMAD AND ANOTHER—APPLICANTS—
RESPONDENTS.

*Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), ss. 27, 32—
Minor—Guardian, appointment of—Trust—Mutawalli, minor entitled to be appointed—Court, power of.*

A guardian of the property of a minor interested in a trust can be appointed in respect of his interest under the trust, in order that the interest may be protected and the benefits thereof secured for the minor. [p. 886, col. 2.]

Where under the terms of a trust deed the mutawalli-ship devolves upon a minor in respect of whom a guardianship application is made, the District Judge is entitled to pass orders for the performance of the duties of the mutawalli pending either the coming of age of the minor or the institution of a regular suit by some person or persons interested in the endowment to contest the arrangement made by him. [p. 887, col. 1.]

First appeals from orders of the District Judge, Badaun, dated the 23th March 1916.

Mr. Abdul Raouf, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. M. Y. Hasan, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

PIGGOTT, J.—These are two connected appeals from orders passed by the District Judge of Badaun in connection with certain proceedings under the Guardians and Wards Act. By the first of these orders one Ejaz Ahmad was appointed the guardian of the property of three minors, two boys and a girl, children of his own brother, Huzur Ahmad. In so far as the petition of appeal before us is not connected with the other order presently to be considered, it amounts in effect to nothing more than this, that Ejaz Ahmad was not a suitable person to hold the guardianship of the property of these minors. If the record be examined from this point of view, it seems fairly clear from the evidence that no more suitable person for the guardianship of the property of the minors could have been found than Ejaz Ahmad. The appeal is complicated by being connected with the other appeal now before us, which is against a farther order passed by the District Judge, under the following circumstances. In Ejaz Ahmad's application to be appointed guardian of the property of these minors there was a specification of certain immoveable property as the property of these minors. This consisted principally of undivided shares in a number of villages. It came out in the course of the enquiry that the whole of this property was wakf property under the Muhammadan Law, that is to say, it had been made the subject-matter of a wakf or endowment of a semi-public and semi-private character of the kind legalised, if not previously lawful, by a recent Act of the Legislature on the subject of Muhammadan endowments. Under the terms of this trust one-third of the income of the property was to be distributed for the benefit of the poor, and the remaining two-thirds were to be applied for the maintenance and support of Huzur Ahmad and his children after him. Huzur Ahmad was appointed the first mutawalli or trustee of the endowment. There was a provision that after his death he would be succeeded in the trusteeship by one or other of his sons, and a further provision was made passing the succession to the brothers of Huzur Ahmad, in the event of the sons not being found suitable for appointment. The District Judge relied upon the authority of Mr. Ameer Ali's book on the Muhammadan Law (vide Volume I, page 445), and has held that the office of mutawalli in this case must have devolved on one or other of the minor boys in respect of whom the guardianship application was made. Consequently according to Mr. Ameer Ali, the mutawalli-ship itself was in abeyance, but it was the duty of the Civil Court, as representing the authority of the State, formerly administered by the Kazi, to appoint some person to perform the duties of the office until the minors come of age. Purporting to act under this authority, the District Judge has appointed Ejaz Ahmad, as he puts it, "to be the mutawalli of the wakf property during the minority of the sons of Huzur Ahmad." He has in effect done what Mr. Ameer Ali lays down as the duty of the Court in such a case.

KHATUN BEGAM v. EJAZ AHMAD.

Now it is contended before us, in respect of both the orders passed by the District Judge, that there can be no guardian appointed of the property of a minor in such a manner as to give the guardian any control over the wakf property. The first point taken is that the wakf property does not belong to the minors, but to the Almighty, and that there can only be a trustee or mutawalli to hold charge of the property, so that the question of appointment of such trustee lies wholly outside the scope of the Guardians and Wards Act. So far as this point goes, the contention seems open to an obvious answer. It may be that the case of a Muhammadan endowment, constituted in accordance with the authority recognised by the new Statute of the Legislature, will bring before the notice of the Courts a number of delicate points for legal determination. This much, however, is clear that endowments such as are now in question, are partly private trusts and partly religious or charitable endowments. Now the minors are persons interested in this trust. They are the principal persons for whose benefit the trust now exists. The immoveable property itself, the subject-matter of the trust, does not belong to the minors, but the property of the minors consists of their interest in the said trust, that is to say, the benefits which they are entitled to receive under the same. There seems no reason whatever for holding that a guardian of the property of the minors cannot be appointed in respect of their interests under the trust, in order that these interests may be protected and the benefits thereof secured for the minors. The further point raised is a somewhat more difficult one. It is contended that, whatever might be the authority of the District Judge of Budaun in the matter of dealing with this endowment, that authority was not called into requisition by the proceeding under the Guardians and Wards Act which was pending before him. The contention is that there should have been a regular suit, either under the provisions of section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure or under those of Order I, rule 8, clause (c) of the same Code, or under the Religious Endowments Act, XX of 1863. I do not think that for the purpose of disposing of the appeal now before us it is necessary to lay down principles of law generally applicable to the question of Muhammadan endowments, or to the particular species of Muhammadan endowments with which we are now concerned. The position taken up by the District Judge is that the interests of the minors in this trust require to be protected, and that it is necessary to put the guardian of their property in a position to do this. It has been shown to us that the person actually managing the property is the lambardar of the various mahals in which the undivided shares forming the trust property are situated. Indeed a point was made before us on behalf of the appellant, to the effect that the Revenue Court has refused to appoint Ejaz Ahmad lambardar of these mahals. There does not seem to be anything favourable to the appellant in this circumstance. The duty of the guardian of the property of these minors, or of the manager of this endowment, will be to see that the lambardar does not appropriate to himself the profits of these shares, but that he duly accounts for, and pays them over to some responsible person, in order that they may be applied for the purposes of the trust. Now, according to the principle laid down by Mr. Ameer Ali, the mutawalli-ship of this trust is at present in abeyance, but according to the terms of the trust deed, it should eventually devolve on one of the minors in respect of whom the guardianship application is made. Under these peculiar circumstances, it seems to me that the District Judge was so far seized of the question that he was entitled to pass orders for the performance of the duties of the mutawalli, pending either the coming of age of the minors, or the institution of a regular suit by some person or persons interested in the endowment to contest the arrangement made by him. In this view of the matter, the orders by the District Judge in this case seem to me appropriate and within his jurisdiction. He had before him all the parties directly interested in the administration of the trust, in so far as that trust is of a private and not of a public character. They had an opportunity of laying their case before him, and for the purpose of the proceedings in issue I think the order passed was within the competence of the Court. I would, therefore, dismiss both the appeals with costs, including fees on the higher scale.

ASNA BIBI v. JAIGUNNISSA BIBI.

WALSH, J.—I agree. The substantial result is clearly in the interests of the cestui que trust and of the minors, for they are both. Indeed it is not seriously disputed on that ground. Properly regarded the application and the order made upon it was merely one under the Guardians and Wards Act, and it is a mere accident that to complete the order of the Court and to make it really workable in the interests of the minors it was necessary to make the appointment of a mutawalli. The able argument addressed to us by Mr. Abdul Raoof raises a serious question of really considerable weight. Mr. Abdul Raoof is asking us to do just what the lower Court could not do, namely, to interfere by direct action with the management and charge of this trust. It seems to me that if his client wanted to raise this question it was his business to do so by an ordinary suit, under the Code of Civil Procedure or under the provisions of Act XX of 1863. Then, of course, the validity of this order qua the appointment of a mutawalli might be called in question and it might be that the Court would come to a conclusion that some other person ought to be appointed as such mutawalli. In that case the present appointment of mutawalli will lapse, and the guardian's duty will be to see that the mutawalli newly appointed carries out his duty so far as the trust in favour of the minors is concerned. But if Mr. Raoof's argument prevailed in the Court below, the Court would have been left in this unsatisfactory position that having appointed a guardian for the minor's interests, the guardian would have no power to protect the interests of those minors; that was clearly a matter which a Court charged with duties under the Guardians and Wards Act ought to provide for. I think the order of the Court below is perfectly right.

By THE COURT.—First Appeals from Orders Nos. 131 and 132 of 1916 are dismissed with costs, including fees on the higher scale.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE NO. 442
OF 1914.

July 14, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice N. R. Chatterjea and
Mr. Justice Sheepshanks.

ASNA BIBI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS

versus

JAIGUNNISSA BIBI AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11, O. XXI, rr. 60 to 63—Claim petition, order on—Res judicata—Wakf, validity of, when provisions not carried out by wakif's heirs.

An order in a claim case deciding the question of the validity of a wakf is not conclusive as res judicata in a suit between the same parties in which the property in dispute is not that which was the subject of the claim case though both were included in the wakf. [p. 888, col. 2.]

An order in a claim case is conclusive as between the parties only as regards the particular property in dispute. [p. 888, col. 2.]

Surnamoyi Dasi v. Ashutosh Goswami, 27 C. 714; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 469; Koyyana Chittamma v. Doosy Gavaramma, 29 M. 225; 16 M. L. J. 136 and Ramu

ASNA BIBI v. JAIGUNNISSA BIBI.

Aiyar v. Palaniappa Chetty, 8 Ind. Cas. 117; 35 M. 35; 8 M. L. T. 381; (1910) M. W. N. 589; 21 M. L. J. 756, distinguished.

Radha Prasad Singh v. Lal Sahib Rai, 13 A. 13; 17 L. A. 150; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 10; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 33 and Dinkar Ballal Chakradev v. Hari Shridhar Apte, 14 B. 206; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 595, followed.

The validity of a wakf is not in any way affected by the fact that since the death of the wakif his heirs have not carried out the provisions of the wakfnama but have treated the property dedicated as their own. [p. 829, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Jalpaiguri, dated the 5th June 1914.

Mr. A. Rasul (with him Babu Jyotish Chandra Sircar), for the Appellants.

Babus Jitendra Nath Roy and Nakuleshwar Mukherjee, for the Respondents

JUDGMENT.—In the suit out of which this appeal arises plaintiff sued as the residuary heir of one Shane Ali to recover his share of certain property left by Shane Ali. He has been found to be the residuary heir of Shane Ali, and this finding has not been challenged on appeal.

The learned Subordinate Judge has dismissed his suit holding that the property claimed is wakf property, and against this decision plaintiff appeals.

His main ground of appeal is that the question of the validity of the wakf is res judicata, the alleged wakf having been decided in a claim case brought in the course of previous execution proceedings not to have been a bona fide document, but to have been put forward for the purpose of defeating the claims of creditors. The property which was the subject of the claim case is not the property which is now in suit. It is argued in support of the appeal that, all the parties to the present suit having been made parties to the claim case, and the order in the claim case not having been challenged by a suit under Order 21, rule 63, that order is conclusive and operates as res judicata in respect not only of the property to which it related but of all the property included in the wakf. It is admitted on behalf of appellant that there is no authority which directly supports this argument. Reference, however, is made to Sinnamayi Dasi v. Ashutosh Goswami (1), Koyana Chittamma v.

Doosy Gavaramma (2) and Ramu Aiyar v. Palaniappa Chetty (3). None of these cases lends any support to appellant's contention. The first of them decides that an order in a claim case is conclusive against persons whose title is derived from the claimant, whether their position is that of plaintiffs or defendants. The second merely decides the effect of payment of the decretal amount when made more than a year after the order rejecting the claim. The third decides that persons claiming through the parties in a claim case do not cease to be bound by the order if they subsequently acquire other rights. There is nothing in any of these decisions which is of any assistance to appellant. In the present case the appeal must fail, for the reason that apart from any other considerations, an order in a claim case is conclusive only as regards the particular property in dispute: Radha Prasad Singh v. Lal Sahib Rai (4), Dinkar Ballal Chakradev v. Hari Shridhar Apte (5). In this case it is clear that the order in the claim case on the question of the validity of the wakf is not conclusive, the property in dispute not being that which was the subject of the claim case, and this ground of appeal fails.

It is next argued on behalf of appellant that the alleged wakf was in fact invalid and fraudulent, and was never acted upon. The evidence given by plaintiff's own witnesses is, as the learned Subordinate Judge points out, fatal to this contention. That evidence shows that effect was given in Shane Ali's lifetime to the provisions of the wakf, and that the property was in fact treated as dedicated property. There is nothing to show that the transaction was a fraudulent one. The property covered by the wakf comprised only a question of Shane Ali's property and there is nothing to show that, as is suggested on behalf of appellant, he was encumbered by debts and wished to defraud his creditors by means of a colourable wakf. This being so, the fact that defendants, since the

(2) 9 M. 225; 16 M. L. J. 136.

(3) 8 Ind. Cas. 117; 35 M. 3; 8 M. L. T. 381; 21 M. L. J. 756; (1910) M. W. N. 58.

(4) 3 A. 53; 17 L. A. 150, 5 Sar. P. C. J. 60; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 33.

(5) 14 B. 206; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 595.

(1) 27 C. 714; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 469.

IMAM BEE v. MOLLA KHASIM SAHIB.

death of Shane Ali, have not carried out the provisions of the wakfnama, but have treated the property as their own, does not in any way affect the validity of the wakf. The wakf was created by a living man, and is, therefore, irrevocable.

This ground of appeal, therefore, also fails. The result is that the appeal is dismissed. Having regard to the circumstances of the case we make no order as to costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 118 OF 1916.

September 6, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Spencer and

Mr. Justice Phillips.

IMAM BEE AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS NOS. 2 TO 5—APPELLANTS

versus

MOLLA KHASIM SAHIB AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS NOS. 1 TO 4—RESPONDENTS.

Muhammadan Law—Mujawar, eligibility of women for office of—Right to emoluments—Burden of proof—Custom.

Under Muhammadan Law, a woman can hold a religious office unless there are duties of a religious nature which she cannot perform in person or by deputy. [p. 89C, col. 1.]

Shahco Banoo v. Aga Mahomed Jaffer Bindaneem, 34 C. 117; 7 M. L. J. 52; 4 A. L. J. 30; 9 Bom. L. R. 85; 5 C. L. J. 134; 1 C. W. N. 297; 2 M. L. T. 49; 4 L. B. R. 66; 34 I. A. 46 (P. C.), followed.

Mujawar Ibrahimbi v. Mujawar Hussain Sheriff, 3 M. 95; 5 Ind. Jur. 190; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 63; Hussain Beebee v. Hussain Sheriff, 4 M. H. C. R. 23, explained.

The onus is on those who seek to exclude women, of proving that they are disqualified [p. 889, col. 2.] Tangirala Chiranjivi v. Raja Manikya Rao, 25 Ind. Cas. 283; 27 M. L. J. 179, followed.

Where the duties of an office are not very distinctly defined, the safest course to follow is to be guided by the custom of the institution. [p. 890, col. 1.]

The rights of women to hold the office of mujawar should be upheld where there is a usage in the institution of getting the duties performed by proxy or deputy, and, in such a case, there is no legal obstacle to their sharing in the endowments of the office and getting their duties performed by proxy. [p. 890, col. 2.]

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court, Kurnool, in Appeal Suit No. 27 of 1914, preferred against that of the District Munsif, Kurnool, in Original Suit No. 657 of 1913.

Mr. A. Krishnaswami Aiyar, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. Doraisami Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The District Munsif held that women were entitled to share in the profits of the nam lands attached to the office of mujawar of the suit mosque, as the evidence adduced in the case did not prove that women were prohibited from getting the duties of the office performed by deputies. The District Judge considered that the duties to be performed by the mu awar were of such a religious and spiritual character that the office could not be held by a woman, and, therefore, that women and persons deriving their title from them could not have any rights to the lands. Both Courts rightly placed the onus on those who sought to exclude women, of proving that they were disqualified [vide Tangirala Chiranjivi v. Raja Manikya Rao (1)]; and both found that a custom whereby women were excluded in this institution had not been proved.

On the facts, therefore, the finding is in the appellants' favour. On the question of law whether women should be excluded from the succession, a number of decisions have been cited on either side. Without enumerating them, it may be briefly stated that there is a considerable volume of judicial decisions to the effect that the duties of saiyadnasheen, or as it is sometimes called godd enasheen, the superior of an endowment and religious preceptor, cannot be discharged by a woman or by a deputy, as the trust involves certain special spiritual duties. On the other hand, it has frequently been held that a woman can be a mutawalli, or trustee, who has charge of the secular affairs of an endowment and sometimes has religious duties as well, and that there is no legal prohibition against a woman holding a mutawalli-ship where there is nothing to the contrary in the rules made by the founder or in the usage governing the particular institution.

As stated in the note at the foot of page 343 of Macnaghten's Principles and Precedents, "the office of trustee may be held by a woman, and the duties may be discharged by proxy, whereas the office of superior requires personal qualification: Vide App. Tit. End. 28, 31".

(1) 25 Ind. Cas. 283; 27 M. L. J. 179.

IMAM BEE v. MOLLA KHASIM SAHIB.

Now when we come to the office of mujawar we find two Madras decisions, Hussain Beebee v. Hussain Sherif (2) and Mujavar Ibrambibi v. Mujavar Hussain Sherif (3). In both of these decisions it was held in respect of the same endowment that a woman was not competent to perform the duties of mujawar. In accordance with these decisions, it is stated by Mr. Ganapathi Aiyar in his book on Hindu and Muhammadan Religious Endowments that the office of mujawar is a subordinate office, which entails on the holders the performance of religious duties and cannot, therefore, be held by a female.

If these two cases can be said to lay down the proposition enunciated by Mr. Ganapathi Aiyar, it seems to us that they go too far, as being opposed to the dictum of the Privy Council in Shahoo Banoo v. Aga Mahomed Jaffer Bindaneem (4) which lays down that an office can be held by a woman unless there are duties of a religious nature which she cannot perform in person or by deputy; but we do not think that they do lay down any such broad proposition.

When the case of Mujavar Ibrambibi v. Mujavar Hussain Sherif (3) is closely examined, it is seen that that was a first appeal and the learned Judges found on the evidence that it had not been proved that the plaintiff, who was a woman, had ever participated in the profits or performed the duties either in person or by proxy and that there was no evidence that the office of mujawar in this particular institution had ever been held by a woman. Reliance was also placed by the Judges on the previous decision to the same effect in Hussain Beebee v. Hussain Sherif (2). The earlier decision proceeded upon a comparison of the office of mujawar with that of gaddinasheen and upon the admission of Mr. Mayne, who appeared for the appellants, that he was unable to find any authority in Muhammadan Law for saying that a woman was competent to hold any religious office in connection with a mosque.

But in the case before us we have evidence, which both the lower Courts have accepted, that there is a usage in this institution of getting the duties of mujawar done by proxy, and in one instance a woman has enjoyed a share in the profits and has had the duties performed by a man who lived in her house. Even the 1st plaintiff now deposes somebody to read for him, as he cannot himself read.

From the description of the duties of the office, which include lighting and cleaning the mosque, spreading mats and feeding travellers, they appear to be more on a level with the secular duties of mutawalli than with the religious duties of sajjadanashen. It is true that the witnesses speak of certain members of their family also preaching and calling to prayers, but this they may have done because they were imams or muazzins and not by reason of their holding the office of mujawar. In fact, plaintiff's witness No. 3 says that his father acted as imam on behalf of Ismail Sahib and read the khutba and the fatiha during his period of delegation.

Where the duties of the office are not very distinctly defined, the safest course to follow is to be guided by the custom of the institution. This being in the present case in favour of deputies being appointed, we see no obstacle to women sharing in the endowments of this office and getting their duties performed by proxy.

Accordingly, allowing the appeal, we set aside the decree of the District Judge and restore that of the District Munsif with costs of the appellants in this and the lower Appellate Court.

Appeal allowed

V.R.P.

(2) 4 M. H. C. R. 23.

(3) 3 M. 95; 5 Ind. Jur. 190; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 623.

(4) 34 C. 118; 17 M. L. J. 52; 4 A. L. J. 20; 9 Bom. L. R. 85; 5 C. L. J. 134; 11 C. W. N. 297; 2 M. L. T. 49; 4 L. B. R. 66; 34 L. A. 46 (P. C.).

PANCHANAN MAHTO v. KUNAI MAHTO.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 69 OF 1916.

January 11, 1917.

Present:—Sir Edward Charnier, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Sharfuddin.

PANCHANAN MAHTO—

APPELLANT

versus

KUNAI MAHTO AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENTS.

Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI B. C. of 1905), ss. 212, 215—Sale in execution of decree—Right to deposit purchase-money—'Claims', meaning of—Jurisdiction of Court to determine whether person depositing money is interested in the holding sold—Appeal, whether lies—Jurisdiction.

A person cannot get a sale set aside under section 212 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act merely upon his putting before the Court a series of statements which may be totally untrue. The Court is bound to enquire into the truth of the allegations made in the application. [p. 892, col. 1.]

The word "claims" used in section 212 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act is used in the sense of asserting that a thing is one's own or affirming one's possession of a thing. [p. 892, col. 1.]

In execution of a decree for rent a tenure was sold. A person claiming to hold dar-mokarari interest in the tenure claimed to be entitled to deposit in the Court the sum indicated by section 212 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act to get the sale set aside. The first Court rejected the application but on appeal the Judicial Commissioner held that he was entitled to deposit the sum in Court:

Held, that an appeal lay to the Judicial Commissioner from the order of the first Court. [p. 891, col. 2.]

Letters Patent Appeal against the judgment of Mr. Justice Mullick, dated the 10th August 1916, reported as 36 Ind. Cas. 829, affirming the order of the District Judge, Manbhum-Sambalpur, dated the 22nd April 1915, reversing that of the Deputy Collector, Purnia, dated the 4th September 1914.

Mr. Naresh Chunder Sinha, for the Appellants.

Mr. Rajendra Prasad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

CHARNIER, C. J.—In execution of a decree for rent a tenure was sold to the appellant. Thereupon the respondents came forward and alleging that they held a dar-mokarari interest in the tenure under a certain person for whom, according to them, the judgment-debtors were benamidars, claimed to be entitled to deposit in Court the sums indicated by section 212 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act. The first Court rejected their application, but on appeal the Judicial Commissioner held that they were entitled to pay the money into Court and the Judicial Commissioner's decision was affirmed by a Judge of this Court sitting alone.

The first question argued before us was whether there was a right of appeal to the Judicial Commissioner. In my opinion there can be no doubt that there was a right of appeal, inasmuch as the order challenged by the appeal was plainly an order passed after a decree and relating to the execution thereof within the meaning of section 215 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act.

The second question argued before us was whether the respondents were entitled to make an application under section 212 of the Act. That section provides that

"When any immoveable property has been sold under this Chapter in execution of a decree, any person who owned such property immediately before the sale, or who claims an interest therein under a title lawfully acquired before the sale, may, at any time within a period of thirty days from the date of the sale, apply to have the sale set aside on his depositing in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner

(a) for payment to the purchaser—a sum equal to five per centum of the purchase-money, and

(b) for payment to the decree-holder the amount specified in the proclamation of sale as that for the recovery of which the sale was ordered, less any amount which may, since the date of such proclamation and sale, have been received by the decree-holder:

Provided that if a person applies under section 213 to set aside the sale of his immoveable property, he shall not be entitled to make an application under this section.

(2) If the said deposits are made within the said period, the Court shall pass an order setting aside the sale, and the provisions of section 315 of the Code of Civil Procedure shall apply in the case of a sale so set aside."

The contention put forward on behalf of the respondents, which has been accepted by two of the Courts below, is that the respondents were entitled to make an application under this section even though they may have no interest whatever in the property under a title lawfully acquired before the sale. It is not contended that they owned the property before the sale. It is contended that the word "claims" is sufficiently satisfied by an assertion in the application that the applicant is entitled to this or that interest under a title lawfully acquired before the sale, that the auction-purchaser has no right to challenge the correctness of the allegations made in the application, that the Court has no business to enquire into the truth of those allegations, and that all that the Court has to do is to see that the person making the application has alleged that he has an interest in the property under a title lawfully acquired before the sale. If this is the true construction, the section puts a high premium on false allegations and I cannot think that it can have been the intention of the Legislature to allow a person to have a sale set aside under section 212 merely upon his putting before the Court a series of statements which may be totally untrue. Attention was drawn to the fact that in a similar provision in the Code of Civil Procedure, namely, Order XXI, rule 89, the words employed are "holding an interest therein" by virtue of a title acquired before such sale, and that in a somewhat similar provision in the Bengal Tenancy Act (section 171) the words used are "having an interest which would be voidable on the sale." I am not prepared to admit that the difference in the language employed in these three provisions indicates any difference in intention on the part of the Legislature. The word "claim" is commonly used both in the sense of demanding delivery of a thing rightly or wrongly and in the sense of asserting that a thing is one's own or affirming one's possession of a thing. In my opinion there can be no doubt that the word "claims" used in section 212 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act is used in the sense of asserting that a thing is one's own. It seems to me that there can be no doubt that the Court to which an application is made under section 212 is bound to enquire into the truth of the allegations made in the application. In the present case no enquiry was held whatever. In my opinion the construction which has been placed upon the section by two of the Courts below is erroneous and the case should be sent back to the Court of first instance, in order that an enquiry may be held into the allegations made by the respondents. I would allow this appeal and order accordingly. Costs throughout should be costs in the cause.

SUBBA NAICK v. RAMA AIYAR.

SHARFUDDIN, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed; Case remanded.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No 931 OF 1915.

November 15, 1916.

Present:—Justice Sir William Ayling, Kt.,
and Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar.

SUBBA NAICK — PLAINTIFF —

PETITIONER

versus

RAMA AIYAR AND ANOTHER — DEFENDANTS

—RESPONDENTS.

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), ss. 7, 34—Guardian, conditional appointment of, when takes effect—Interim acts of natural guardian, validity of.

Where a guardian is appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act unconditionally the order takes effect at once, although under section 34 of the Guardians and Wards Act he may be required to furnish security subsequently; but where the order is conditional upon the furnishing of security, it does not take effect until the security has been furnished. [p. 894, col. 2.]

Goppammal v. Srinivasa Aiyangar, 34 Ind. 43; 30 M. L. J. 504; Mungairam Marwari v. Gursahai Nand, 17 C. 347; 16 I. A. 195; 13 Ind. Jur. 449; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 463; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 770; Gopri Chundar Bose v. Gonesh Chunder Srimani, 4 O. L. J. 112; Srinivas Prosad Singh v. Kesro Prosad Singh, 12 Ind. Cas. 745, 14 C. L. J. 489; D. Fries v. Creed, (1865) 34 L. J. Ch. 607; 11 Jur. (N. S.) 360, 12 L. T. 262; 13 W. R. 632; 146 R. R. 714; Edwards v. Edwards, (1876) 2 Ch. D. 291 at p. 296; 45 L. J. Ch. 391; 34 L. T. 472; 24 W. R. 713; In re Roundwood Colliery Company Lee v. Roundwood Colliery Co., (1897) 1 Ch. 373 at p. 393; 66 L. J. Ch. 186; 76 L. T. 641; 45 W. R. 324; Ridout v. Fowler, (1904) 1 Ch. 653, 73 L. J. Ch. 325; 90 L. T. 147, referred to.

There is nothing in section 34 of the Guardians and Wards Act taking away the general power possessed by the Court of imposing conditions upon persons who are appointed guardians, and any rule which makes the appointment of a guardian to take effect only on furnishing security is not ultra vires. [p. 893, col. 2; p. 894, col. 1.]

Where a guardian is appointed conditionally on his furnishing security, all bona fide acts done by the natural guardian of the minor before the security is actually furnished by the Court's nominee are valid. [p. 894, col. 2.]

SUBBA NAICK v. RAMA AIYAR.

Petition, under section 25 of Act IX of 1887, praying the High Court to revise the decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Ramnad at Madura, in Small Cause Suit No. 332 of 1915.

Mr. K. V. Krishnaswami Aiyar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. P. S. Vaidyanatha Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the facts are that a promissory note belonging to a minor was endorsed over by his mother, after it was decided in an application under the Guardians and Wards Act that a third party should be appointed guardian of the said minor. In the proceedings above referred to, the District Judge of Ramnad, Mr. Dutt, held on the 9th of January 1914 that the mother was not the proper guardian, and that one Srinivasa Aiyangar should be appointed guardian of the minor's property. It seems clear that the statement in the body of the judgment that "I appoint Srinivasa Aiyangar accordingly" has been inserted incautiously. The subsequent proceedings place it beyond doubt that it was not the intention of the District Judge to make any appointment on the date of the order. Srinivasa Aiyangar was directed to furnish security. The successor of the District Judge passed proceedings on the 26th September 1914 accepting the security-bond and issued an order of appointment to Srinivasa Aiyangar. The mother of the minor, who undoubtedly was the natural guardian of her son, endorsed the promissory note in favour of the plaintiff in this case in May 1914, that is, between the date of the order declaring that a stranger guardian should be appointed and the date on which the order entrusting the guardianship was actually issued to that stranger.

The question is whether the act of the mother is null and void. We are not concerned in this petition with the question whether the mother acted bona fide in endorsing the promissory note. We are only concerned with the bare legal question whether the endorsement was of no effect. Section 7, clause 2 of the Guardians and Wards Act, says that an order under clause 1 shall imply the removal of any guardian who had not been appointed by a Will or other instrument, or appointed or declared by the Court. It was argued that the moment the District Judge held that the stranger should be appointed in the place of the mother, the latter was impliedly removed from her natural guardianship. It is clear that the new guardian would have had no power to manage the minor's properties until he had furnished the requisite security. The result of holding that the natural guardian was removed by the bare declaration of the Court that a new guardian should be appointed, would be to leave the minor's properties unprotected and uncared for during the interval. It was suggested that as the Court is charged with the welfare of the minor, it may be expected to administer the minor's estate during this period. But the Court would not be cognizant of all the assets and effects of the minor and would not be in a position to direct the institution of suits which are likely to become barred, unless there is some party who is in a position to supply the requisite information to the Court. Reliance was placed upon certain observations of Sadasiva Aiyar, J., in the case reported as Goppammal v. Srinivasa Aiyangar (1). The learned Judge points out that the rules framed by the High Court, namely, rules 240 to 242 and forms in 92 and 93 are ultra vires. He says that the only provision for demanding security from the guardian is that contained in section 34, and that under that section, the security follows upon the appointment and does not precede it. With all respect, we do not think that section 34 compels us to hold that any rule which makes the appointment of a guardian to take effect only on furnishing security would be ultra vires. Section 7 gives an absolute discretion to the Court to appoint a guardian. The appointment may be absolute, as in the case of persons well known and respected, or it may be conditional, as in the case of person about whose solvency the Court has no knowledge. Clause (a) of section 7, which speaks of a guardian being appointed, does not negative the suggestion that such an appointment may be made conditional upon the furnishing of security.

(1) 34 Ind. Cas. 432; 33 M. L. J. 508.

SUBBA NAICK v. RAMA AIYAR.

Section 34 is a further provision which enables a Court to demand security even in the case of persons originally appointed unconditionally. It may be in the interests of the minor that there should be a prompt appointment of a guardian, and the Court may, after making the appointment to take effect at once, insist upon the guardian giving security. It is that class of cases that section 34 provides for. It does not take away the general power possessed by the Court of imposing conditions upon persons who are appointed guardians. The learned Vakil for the respondent drew our attention to the case of Mungriram Marwari v. Gursahai Nand (2). What was held in that case was that where there is unconditional order of appointment, the fact that it is not issued to the appointee does not take away his rights of acting under that order. It is not an authority for the proposition that a conditional appointment is effective before the condition is satisfied. There are certain observations in Gopal Chunder Bose v. Gonesh Chunder Srimani (3), which detached from the facts of the case might lend some support to the contention of the counter-petitioner. But it is clear that what the learned Judge intended to lay down was, that where an application was made before the ward attained the age of 18 years and a guardian was appointed subsequently, the order took effect as if on the date of the application so as to prolong the period of minority to 21 years. The exact point which we are considering was not in the mind of the learned Judge in that case. The analogy of Order XL, rule 1, as to the appointment of Receivers lends support to the view which we have stated. Mr. Justice Mookerjee, after a very elaborate examination of the case-law in India and in England, came to the conclusion in Srinivas Prosad Singh v. Kesho Prosad Singh (4) that if a Receiver is appointed without any direction as to security, the order takes effect at once and that he is validly in possession, though no security has been given; but that if the appointment is conditional upon the furnishing of security, the giving of security is a condition precedent, and that there would be no effective appointment till the security has been given. Applying that principle, we may say that where a guardian is appointed unconditionally, the order takes effect at once, although under section 34 of the Guardians and Wards Act, he may be required to furnish security subsequently. But where the order is conditional upon the furnishing of security, it does not take effect until the security has been furnished. That this is the view taken in England is clear from Defries v. Creed (5). In Edwards v. Edwards (6) Lord Justice James says that "A Receiver becomes such on giving security." In In re Roundwood Colliery Company, Lee v. Roundwood Colliery Company (7) Lord Justice Lindley says that the order of appointment would never be really effective until the security is furnished. That was followed in Ridout v. Fowler (8).

We see no difficulty in applying the analogy of these cases to a conditional order of appointment as guardian. In our opinion, therefore, the order appointing Srinivasa Aiyangar became effective only in September 1914, and as the promissory note was endorsed in May 1914, it is not prima facie invalid.

The order of the Subordinate Judge dismissing the suit must be set aside: and he will restore the suit to file and dispose of it according to law. Costs up to date will be costs in the cause.

Petition allowed; Case sent back.

V.R.P.

(5) (1865) 34 L. J. Ch. 607; 11 Jur. (N. S.) 360; 12 L. T. 262; 13 W. R. 632; 146 R. R. 714.

(6) (1876) 2 Ch. D. 291 at p. 296; 45 L. J. Ch. 391; 34 L. T. 47; 24 W. R. 713.

(7) (1897) 1 Ch. 373 at p. 393; 66 L. J. Ch. 186, 75 L. T. 641; 45 W. R. 324.

(8) (1904) 1 Ch. 658 at p. 663; 73 L. J. Ch. 325; 90 L. T. 147.

(2) 17 C. 347; 16 L. A. 195; 13 Ind. Jur. 449; 5 Sar. C. J. 463; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 770.

(3) 4 C. L. J. 112.

(4) 12 Ind. Cas. 745; 14 C. L. J. 489.

AKLU AHIR v. RAM LAKSHAN SAHU.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 3332 OF 1914.

December 11, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad.

AKLU AHIR AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAM LAKSHAN SAHU AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Estates Partition Act (V of 1897), Ch. VI—Landlord and tenant—Evidence of title—Batwara papers, admissibility of.

Batwara papers are admissible in evidence to prove a landlord's title against the tenants who were parties to the Batwara proceedings.

Appeal from a decision of the Additional District Judge, Shahabad, dated the 17th August 1914, affirming the decree of the Munsif, 3rd Court, Arrah, dated the 17th February 1914.

Mr. Monmotha Nath Mukerji, for the Appellants.

Mr. Harihar Pershad Singh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The respondent, who is the proprietor of Touzi No. 4076, brought a suit out of which this appeal has arisen, for a declaration that the land in suit was their zeraif land and was wrongly recorded in the Survey Record of Rights as the kasht land of the defendants. The prayer in the suit was for recovery of possession, which the plaintiffs said they had lost after the Survey Record of Rights on the 15th of December 1910. Both the Courts have held that the land in suit is the zeraif land of the plaintiffs; the defendants have appealed to this Court.

It is contended on their behalf that the lower Appellate Court has decided this case entirely on the basis of the Batwara proceedings under Act V of 1897 and that the Batwara papers cannot override the presumption raised by the Survey Record of Rights. The contention does not appear to be sound. In the first place, the Batwara papers under the present Act (Act V of 1897) are admissible in evidence against the defendants-tenants who were parties to the proceeding. Under Chapter VI of the Batwara Act a regular Record of Rights is prepared and is published in the locality and a copy of the entries is given to the landlords and the tenants concerned under section 48 of the Act.

PANCHANON v. RAMENDRA SUNDAR TRIBEDI.

It has not been seriously contended that the Batwara proceedings are not admissible in evidence against the defendants. The lower Court has not only decided this case on the basis of the Batwara papers but has also based its finding upon the oral and documentary evidence on behalf of the plaintiffs-respondents. It is contended that the lower Appellate Court has omitted to decide the question of limitation that arose in this case and, therefore, the point has been left undetermined. There is no reference in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court showing that this point was at all raised in that Court by the appellants. It further appears that in the face of the finding of the first Court that the disputed lands were in possession of the respondents and that they were dispossessed in 1910, the question of limitation does not arise and this may have been the reason of the point not having been raised in the lower Appellate Court. I, therefore, agree with the finding of the Court below and dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 1264 OF 1914.

December 5, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice D. Chatterjee and Mr. Justice Walmsley.

PANCHANON CHOUDHURY AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 TO 5 AND 7—

APPELLANTS

versus

RAMENDRA SUNDAR TRIBEDI AND

OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANT

No. 6—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Regulation VIII of 1819, ss. 8, 18—Co-sharer zemindars—Application for sale—Notice—Place of service.

When co-sharer zemindars jointly making an application for the sale of a patni under Regulation VIII of 1819 have several kutcheries, the notice required by section 8 of the Regulation must be served upon each kutchery and the service of notice at the kutchery of any individual co-sharer would not be a sufficient compliance with the provisions of the Regulation.

PANCHANON C. RAMENDRA SUNDAR TRIBEDI.

The provisions of Regulation VIII of 1819 must be strictly complied with.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Murshidabad, dated the 25th February 1914, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Murshidabad, dated the 31st March 1913.

FACTS of the case appear from the judgment.

Babu Mohendra Nath Roy (with him Babu Baranushibasi Mukerji), for the Appellants. — Various irregularities were alleged, but the findings are that all notices and proclamations were duly served; only the service at the zemindars' kutchery was defective in this that it was not served in the kutchery of the defendants Nos. 3 to 5. The finding, however, is that they are joint landlords with defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 6. On that finding separate service at three kutcheries was not at all necessary, the words of the Regulation being it "shall be stuck up at some conspicuous part of the kutchery", which contemplates only one kutchery.

Taking it for granted that the notice had not been served in order to set aside a sale under the Putni Regulation, a sufficient plea has to be established (see section 14, paragraph 2). Non-observance of every formality prescribed by the Regulation cannot be a sufficient plea for setting aside a sale, unless the plaintiffs allege and show substantial injury or likelihood of injury. They have neither alleged nor shown any. It does not appear how the plaintiffs were prejudiced by non-publication of the notice, when a similar notice was served in the neighbouring kutchery.

Babu Dwarkanath Chakraborty, (with him Babus Shih Prasad Bhattacharye, Hemendra Nath Sen and Gopal Chandra Chakraborty), for the Respondents, was not called upon to reply.

JUDGMENT.—The defendants Nos. 1 to 6 were the zemindars of a mahal, which was let out in putni to the plaintiffs. These zemindars had three kutcheries,—the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 had one kutcheri, defendants Nos. 3 to 5 had another near by, and defendant No. 6 had a third, and they used to realise the putni rent in certain proportions. They, however, joined in making an application for the sale of the putni under Regulation VIII of 1819 for arrears of rent for 1818 and the putni was sold and purchased by defendant No. 7. The plaintiffs brought a suit for setting aside the sale, and it has been held by both the Courts below that the notice required by section 8 of the Regulation to be served on the sudder kutchery of the zemindar was served on the kutchery of defendants Nos. 1 and 2, as also on the kutchery of defendant No. 6, but was not stuck up at the kutchery of defendants Nos. 3 to 5. The learned Subordinate Judge held that, as the kutchery of defendants Nos. 3 to 5 was adjacent to that of defendants Nos. 1 and 2, the service at the latter kutchery was sufficient; the learned Judge on appeal has held that it was not.

It is contended in second appeal before us that the learned Judge is wrong, that the only ground upon which he could set aside the sale, was that under section 14 there was a sufficient plea for adopting such a course and that this is not necessarily connected with the service of the notice under section 8.

We think that the provisions of Regulation VIII of 1819 for the sale of putni tenures are peculiarly penal and their destructive effect upon under-tenures is proverbial. The provisions of such a Regulation must be strictly complied with. Section 8 of the Regulation provides that "the zemindar shall be exclusively responsible for the observance of the forms above prescribed."

Now, "the forms above prescribed" include the notice to be served at the sudder kutchery of the zemindars. If they have several kutcheries, notice must be served upon each kutchery. So long as they choose to hold separate kutcheries, they may by contract realise rent separately. But when they have to make an application under Regulation XVIII, they must join and the service of notice at the kutchery of any individual co-sharer would not be a sufficient compliance with the provisions of the Regulation.

In this view of the case, we dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

RAMANATHAN CHETTY v. SOMASUNDARAM CHETTIAR.

NARAYAN DAS v. KHUNNI LAL.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL No. 29 OF 1916.

November 16, 1916.

Present:—Justice Sir William Ayling, Kt.,
and Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar.

RAMANATHAN CHETTY, MINOR, BY HIS NEXT FRIEND SEETHAI ACHI—

2ND COUNTER-PETITIONER—

APPELLANT.

versus

A. R. A. R. S. M. SOMASUNDARAM
CHETTIAR AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS

Nos. 1 to 5 AND 7 TO 9—RESPONDENTS.

*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 2, O.
XXI, r. 66—Proclamation of sale—Order fixing upset price—Decree—Appeal.*

An order of a Court tentatively fixing, for the purpose of an auction-sale, the market value of the property and deciding the figure at which the bidding should commence, cannot be regarded as a conclusive determination of any right of parties and is not a decree within the meaning of section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. No appeal lies against such an order.

Sivagami Achi v. Subrahmaniam Ayyar, 2 M. 259; 14 M. L. J. 57, referred to.

Deoki Nandan Singh v. Banshi Singh, 10 Ind. Cas. 371; 14 C. L. J. 35, followed.

Appeal against the order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Ramnad at Madura, in Civil Execution Petition No. 105 of 1915, (Original Suit No. 142 of 1912 on the file of the same Court).

Messrs. A. Krishnaswami Aiyar and M. Patanjali Sastri, for the Appellant.

Mr. C. S. Venkatachariar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal against a proclamation under Order XXI, rule 66, of the Code of Civil Procedure, fixing the market value and upset price of the property to be sold. The respondent takes the preliminary objection, relying on the Full Bench decision in Sivagami Achi v. Subrahmaniam Ayyar (1), that no appeal lies. To this, the appellant relies that this decision proceeds on the basis that such an order is administrative and not judicial, and that the deletion of the old section 283 from the present Code implies that the Legislature intended to stamp the order with a judicial character. However, this may be, (and we express no opinion on the point) we are clear that an order of the Court, tentatively fixing for the purpose of an auction sale the market value of the property, and deciding the figure at which the bidding should commence cannot be regarded as a conclusive determination of any right of parties, so as to come within the definition of a decree given in section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. This being so, no appeal would lie. The view we have taken is in consonance with that adopted by a Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Deoki Nandan Singh v. Banshi Singh (2), a case disposed of under the present Code of Civil Procedure.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

V.R.P.

(2) 10 Ind. Cas. 371; 14 C. L. J. 35.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 404 OF 1914.

December 6, 1916.

Present:—Sir Henry Richards, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Justice
Sir P. C. Banerji, Kt.

NARAYAN DAS AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS

versus

KHUNNI LAL AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—
RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 92, object of—Suit for private purposes—Abuse of process of Court—Legal Remembrancer, duty of—Good faith—Permission, when to be granted.

The institution of a suit, under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1903, for the private purposes of some individual or individuals is an abuse of the process of the Court. The section is intended to enable suits to be brought for the benefit of persons interested in a trust, and is not intended to enable persons to gain private ends by putting forward men of straw to institute suits to put their adversaries or the trust funds to wholly unnecessary and improper costs. [p. 899, col. 1.]

When an application is made to the Legal Remembrancer for permission to bring a suit under section 92, the applicants ought with the utmost good faith to set forth and specify in their petition the reason for and the object of the intended suit, and before granting permission the Legal Remembrancer should satisfy himself that the proposed suit is prima facie bona fide and that the applicants are interested in the trust. [p. 899, cols. 1 & 2.]

Ex parte Skinner, In the matter of Lawford Charity, (1817) 2 Mer. 453; 35 E.R. 1013, referred to.

(1) 27 M. 259; 14 M. L. J. 57.

NARAYAN DAS & KHUNNI LAL.

First appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Bareilly, dated the 4th of September 1914.

Mr. P. N. Banerji, Dr. S. N. Sen and Mr. Sarat Chander Chaudhari, for the Appellants.

Mr. B. E. O'Connor, Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru, Hon'ble Dr. Sunder Lal, Hon'ble Mr. Moti Lal Nehru and Rama Kant Malavaya, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit purporting to have been brought by the plaintiffs under section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The facts are that in the year 1826 Beni Ram and Tulsi Ram made a gift of certain property in Bareilly for charitable and religious purposes. The manager (sarbarakar) was directed to lay out a grove, construct a temple and a well on the land with the income of the gifted property, or with his own funds, for public benefit and worship. It seems that the sarbarakar did not carry out his trust, on the contrary the temple was not built the grove was not planted and the land (the subject-matter of the gift) was mortgaged and alienated. The result was that one Chote Lal and others obtained the sanction of the Legal Remembrancer and brought a suit under section 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1852, asking that the Manager, Bate Krishen, should be dismissed and praying for the appointment of a trustee in his place. A number of persons were made defendants to this suit as persons who had taken mortgages or become transferees of parts of the trust property. Amongst other defendants was Raja Lalta Prasad. This suit ended in a compromise decree which will be found at page 24 of the respondents' book. Bate Krishen was removed from the trusteeship, Khunni Lal was appointed trustee in his place, certain of the alienations and transfers that had been made were declared to be invalid, and the Raja was allowed to retain portions of the property in his possession on which he had built; the compromise went on to provide that Khunni Lal should obtain possession and commence constructing a dharamsala on the land decreed. It appears that Khunni Lal's father had made a Will leaving a sum of Rs. 40,000 to be disposed of for charitable purposes. It was intended that the dharamsala should be built and endowed out of part of this money. This settlement was undoubtedly a bona fide settlement, the public were represented by the plaintiffs in the suit. The new trustee was well provided with funds from his father's Will and the building of the dharamsala, (assuming that the sanction of the Municipal Board to its erection could be obtained,) would be of public benefit. The Court accepted the compromise and made a decree. It would rather appear that the new trustee's difficulties and troubles then began in real earnest. Opposition of various kinds was given to his efforts to obtain the permission to construct the dharamsala. At length, however, all these difficulties were overcome and the foundations of the dharamsala laid. Then the present suit was instituted and the complaint is that he did not build a temple, and that he is building the dharamsala on part of the land.

We have no doubt that it is his intention to build the temple. Photographs are in Court which show the temple in the course of construction, and the building of the dharamsala is one of the acts complained of. We are perfectly satisfied that the defendant Khunni Lal has not committed any breach of his duties as trustee, as laid down in the order of the Court in 1909 passed on the compromise. The present suit is in reality based upon the contention that inasmuch as in the original gift by Beni Ram and Tulsi Ram it was provided that the land should be used for the purpose of a temple, a grove and well, the building of the dharamsala is a departure. It may be conceded here that if the question bona fide arose as to whether or not there should be a departure from the original terms of the gift of Beni Ram and Tulsi Ram, the Court on being asked to settle a scheme would not depart from the original intentions of the donors. But the case does not come before us in that way. Section 92 provides that any two or more persons having an interest in the trust and having obtained in writing the consent of the Legal Remembrancer, may institute a suit for any of the purposes mentioned in the section. These purposes are the removing of a trustee, appointing a new trustee, vesting any property in a trustee, directing accounts and inquiries, declaring what proportion of the trust property or of the interest therein should be allocated to any object of the trust, authorising the whole or any part of the trust property to be let, sold, mortgaged, or exchanged, and settling a scheme. It seems to us that the only possible relief which the plaintiffs would be entitled to in the present case would be the removal of Khunni Lal from the trusteeship and the appointment of a new trustee in his place on the ground that he had committed a breach of trust. We may point out that if Khunni Lal owes his appointment to the order of the Court in the previous suit, he has committed no breach. We have no doubt that he intends to build the temple and the dharamsala, and as far as possible the grove also will be planted. The plaintiffs themselves in the plaint set forth that Khunni Lal was appointed under the order of the Court. To go back for a moment to the general merits of the case the only interest in the trust which the present plaintiffs have is as members of the public. In vain have we asked a suggestion of how the public have in any way been damaged by the building of the dharamsala. It is quite clear that so far from being damaged the public will largely gain. In the written statement it is clearly and distinctly stated that the real person behind this litigation is Raja Lalta Prasad. If this be the fact, we think that the bringing of a suit, under section 92, for the private purposes of some individual or individuals is really an abuse of the process of the Court. That section is intended to enable suits to be brought for the benefit of the persons interested in the trust. It is not intended to enable persons to gain private ends by putting forward nominees probably men of straw to institute suits which will put their adversaries or the trust funds to wholly unnecessary and improper costs. We are a little surprised that the sanction of the Legal Remembrancer was given to the institution of the present suit. We think that when an application is made to the Legal Remembrancer for permission to bring a suit under section 92, the applicants ought with the utmost good faith to set forth and specify in their petition the reason for and object of the intended suit and we think that before granting permission the Legal Remembrancer should satisfy himself that the proposed suit is at least prima facie bona fide and that the applicants are "interested in the trust." Under somewhat similar circumstances Lord Eillon said in the case of Ex parte Skinner, In the matter of Lawford Charity (1) "I desire to have it understood that no petition under the Act ought to receive that sanction (i.e., of the Attorney-General) except by the same deliberation that it would be thought fit to afford to the case if it were presented in the shape of an information" We imagine that if it had been brought to the notice of the Legal Remembrancer that in 1909 a suit brought in respect of this very charity had been compromised and that Khunni Lal had been acting in accordance with the order of the Court passed in that suit; and if his attention had been further called to the fact that the real object of the suit was to prevent a dharamsala being built on the land in accordance with the express terms of the compromise, he would never have given permission to the institution of the present suit. In our opinion it is sufficient, in affirming the decision of the Court below, to say that we do not believe that this is a bona fide suit brought for the purpose of obtaining any of the reliefs mentioned in section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

NARAYAN DAS V. KHUNNI LAL.

We believe that the suit has been brought not for any public purpose but for some private ends. We dismiss the appeal with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) (1817) 2 Mer. 453; 35 E. R. 103.

VENKATAKRISHNA PATTAR v. VENKATAKRISHNA PATTAR.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST APPELLATE ORDERS NOS. 83
AND 84 OF 1915

AND

CIVIL REVISION PETITIONS NOS. 704 AND 705
OF 1915.

September 21, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Oldfield and

Mr. Justice Krishnan.

S. VENKATAKRISHNA PATTAR—
DECREE-HOLDER AND 1ST ATTACHING CREDITOR—APPELLANT IN C. M. S. A. No. 83 OF 1915 AND PETITIONER IN C. R. P. No. 704 OF 1915
R. KRISHNA PATTAR—3RD ATTACHING CREDITOR AND 1ST DECREE-HOLDER IN
O. S. No. 25 OF 1913—APPELLANT
IN C. M. S. A. No. 84 OF 1915 AND PETITIONER IN C. R. P. No. 705 OF 1915.

versus

R. VENKATAKRISHNA PATTAR—

RESPONDENT IN ALL.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 2, 47, 73, 115—Rateable distribution applications, order on—Appeal—Revision.

Respondent, judgment-debtor, applied for payment to him of a certain sum of money lying in Court deposit and realised by the sale of his partition decree by the Court. Certain creditors who had applied for rateable distribution of the same objected to the application. The Court decided that the money was not attachable by the decree-holders as their decrees were against the respondent's family property, whereas the money in Court was his separate property. The decree-holders appealed against the said order. The Appellate Court held that no appeal lay and dismissed the appeals. They then preferred appeals and revision petitions separately to the High Court against the order in appeal.

Held, that the order was virtually one under section 47, Civil Procedure Code, and was appealable, and that no revision petition lay. [p. 902, cols. 1 & 2.]

Bithal Das v. Nand Kishore, 23 A. 106; Balmer Lawrie & Co., v. Jadu Nath Banerjee, 27 Ind. Cas. 644; 42 C. 1; 19 C. W. N. 1202; Kashi Ram v. Mani Ram, 14 A. 210; A. W. N. (1892) 56; 7 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 505 and Venkataperumal v. Venkata Reddi, 29 Ind. Cas. 231; 29 M. L. J. 96; (1915) M. W. N. 334; 17 M. L. T. 427; 39 M. 570, referred to.

Per Oldfield, J.—An order obtained by an attaching creditor under section 73, Civil Procedure Code, ordinarily embodies expressly or impliedly three distinct decisions (1) that his application for execution is generally valid; (2) that the fund in Court is available towards satisfying his claim; and (3) that he is entitled to a particular portion of it. When an objection to the order is based on the invalidity of the execution application or the character of the fund in Court, the question is between the judgment-debtor and individual creditors, not the creditors as a body, and the decision on it is really given under section 47, though it may be contained in an order passed ostensibly under section 73, Civil Procedure Code. [p. 901, col. 1.]

Per Krishnan, J.—The order, so far as it affected each decree-holder separately, was an order between him and the judgment-debtor and related to the execution of his decree, as it refused his prayer to pay towards his decree a certain sum of money of his judgment-debtor representing his rateable share in the whole amount, which he claimed was attachable. It is thus an order falling under section 47, Civil Procedure Code, and is clearly appealable. [p. 902, col. 2.]

In so far as an order under section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure can be treated as an order under section 47 between the parties to a suit, an appeal lies at the instance of either party, where such an appeal does not affect orders in favour of third parties such as other decree-holders. [p. 903, col. 2.]

Appeals against the orders of the District Court of South Malabar, in Appeals Nos. 647 and 625 of 1914, preferred against those of the Subordinate Judge, Palghat, in Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 1234 of 1914.

Petitions, under section 115 of Act V of 1908, praying the High Court to revise the order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Palghat, in Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 1234 of 1914, (Original Suit No. 27 of 1911.)

Mr. P. S. Narayanaswami Aiyar, (with him, Mr. O. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyar), for the Appellant.

Mr. K. R. Subramania Sastriar, (with him, Mr. N. A. Krishner), for the Respondent.

These appeals and revision petitions coming on for hearing on the 14th September, 1916 and having stood over for consideration till this day the Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT.

OLDFIELD, J.—The grounds, on which relief is asked for in these appeals, against appellate orders would justify interference under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It is, therefore, unnecessary to decide whether appeals will lie or whether the remedy in these cases should be sought in revision.

The appellants, petitioners, are two creditors, who hold decrees against the plaintiff, decree-holder in Original Suit No. 27 of 1911 on the file of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Palghat, and who apparently after obtaining transfer of their decrees from the decreeing Courts, are claiming rateable distribution of money belonging to plaintiff, which is in the Subordinate Judge's Court. This money represents the balance of plaintiff's share in family property, awarded to him by that Court on partition, and sold by it in order to discharge the claim of Government to a portion under Order XXXIII, rule 10. One creditor in Execution Appeal No. 529 of 1914 claimed rateable distribution; and, a fact which may be material when the merits are considered, the Subordinate Judge held in his order that he would be entitled to it, after the claim of Government had been satisfied. Later the plaintiff asked for a cheque for the amount standing to his credit; and, on the creditors opposing, the order we are concerned with was passed, rejecting their claims on their merits, because their decrees were against plaintiff's family property, whilst the money in Court belonged to him as a separated member. On appeal against this, the lower Appellate Court decided that no appeal lay; and we have to decide whether it was right. It proceeded, as plaintiff's argument has done here, on the ground that the Subordinate Judge's order, being one under section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure, is not appealable with reference to any special provision and is not an order under section 47, which would be appealable as a decree.

VENKATAKRISHNA PATTAR v. VENKATAKRISHNA PATTAR.

This takes no account of the fact, which in my opinion is material, that the order obtained by an attaching creditor under section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure ordinarily embodies expressly or impliedly three distinct decisions that (1) his application for execution is generally valid, (2) the fund in Court is available towards satisfying his claim, and (3) he is entitled to a particular proportion of it. For, though the special procedure prescribed requires that one order only shall be passed, that, as was held in Radha Gobind Shah v. Shaikh Oozer Jemadar (1) and Bithal Das v. Nand Kishore (2) cannot deprive the judgment-debtor of his right to a decision on the first two points above referred to; and the fact that those cases dealt with section 295 of the former Code of Civil Procedure does not affect their value as expositions of the principle involved.

The foregoing leads to a distinction between the third and the first and second of the points enumerated, because in a decision on the third only the creditors are interested, since, whatever the manner of division of the fund, the judgment-debtor's debts will be discharged to the same total extent, whilst in decision on the first and second each creditor is interested with him separately and directly and his and the creditor's interest would be the same, if there were no question of rateable distribution at all. Cases of collusion between him and an individual creditor will be subject to special considerations, on which it is unnecessary to enter for the present purpose. Here the conclusion must be that, when the objection to the order under section 73 is based on the invalidity of the execution application or, as in this case, on the character of the fund in Court, the question is between the judgment-debtor and individual creditors, not the creditors as a body, and the decision on it is really given under section 47, although it may be contained in an order passed ostensibly under section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

This was recognised directly in Balmer Lawrie and Co. v. Jadu Nath Banerjee (3) and is the foundation of the decision in Kashi Ram v. Mani Ram (4) where the question was of the validity of the execution application, but the judgment-debtor was not made a party and consequently the parties to the proceedings were not parties to any common suit. In this Presidency there is no doubt one case, Pungalur Chenamma v. Rajah of Karvetinagar (5) in which it was held generally that orders passed in connection with rateable distribution are not appealable, notwithstanding that the judgment-debtor was the respondent. But it does not appear that argument was attempted with reference to the distinctions drawn above or the nature of the question raised. Moreover in Venkataperumal v. Venkata Reddi (6) that decision was distinguished on the ground that in it the appellant was a decree-holder creditor to whom a suit was open. In any case, however, that ground of distinction was (with all respect) inadequate, since the suit contemplated in section 73 (2) is by a person entitled to receive part or all of the assets against a person not entitled to receive

(3) 27 Ind. Cas. 644; 42 C. 1; 19 C. W. N. 1202.

(4) 14 A. 210; A. W. N. (1892) 56; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 505.

(5) 23 Ind. Cas. 422; 1 L. W. 234.

(6) 29 Ind. Cas. 231; 29 M. L. J. 96; (1915) M. W. N. 334; 17 M. L. T. 427; 39 M. 570.

(1) 15 W. R. 219.

(2) 23 A. 106.

VENKATAKRISHNA PATTAR v. VENKATAKRISHNA PATTAR.

the same, and, apart from section 47, there is no reason why the judgment-debtor should not be covered by the first of these descriptions, if, as was alleged in Venkataperumal v. Venkata Reddi, (6) the creditors had received more than they were entitled to. That case related to the right of certain decree-holders to rateable distribution of the money in Court without making a fresh application, when their previous application had not been formally disposed of, although all the reliefs asked for in it had been given; and it would, it may respectfully be suggested, have been a sufficient ground of distinction that the real question, whether there was a valid execution application, was one of those above referred to as covered by section 47. It should be added that Venkataperumal v. Venkata Reddi, (6) is directly consistent with this view in so far as it recognises explicitly that orders passed under section 73 are appealable, if they affect parties to the suit and that in the absence of any denial in the section of the right of appeal to parties, who have it under section 47, they should not be deprived of it.

In these circumstances the conclusion must be in favour of the creditors' right of appeal. The lower Appellate Court's order is set aside and the appeals are remanded to it for re-admission and disposal on the merits, the Appeals against Appellate Orders being allowed with costs in this Court, costs in the lower Courts to abide and follow the event. The civil revision petitions are dismissed without costs.

KRISHNAN, J.—I agree with my learned brother that the appellants, decree-holders, had a right of appeal to the lower Court under sections 47, 2 and 96 of the Code of Civil Procedure against the order of the Subordinate Judge and that the District Judge was in error in rejecting their appeals as incompetent.

The order appealed against was passed on a petition by the respondent, the judgment-debtor, in the three decrees under execution in the Subordinate Judge's Court, which prayed that a certain sum of money realised by the sale of his partition decree by the Court should be paid out to him after deducting the sale expenses and the amount of Court-fees due to the Government and that the claim of the decree-holders to attach it should be rejected. That order decided that the money was not attachable by the decree-holders as their decrees were against the respondent's family property whereas the money in Court was his separate property. The Court, therefore, disallowed the claim for rateable distribution of all the decree holders and directed the money to be paid to the judgment-debtor. It seems to me quite clear that this order so far as it affected each decree holder separately was an order between him and the judgment-debtor and related to the execution of his decree, as it refused his prayer to pay towards his decree a certain sum of money of his judgment-debtor representing his rateable share in the whole amount, which he claimed was attachable. It is thus an order falling under section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure and is, clearly appealable.

Does the fact that the three decree-holders had applied under section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure for rateable distribution and that the Subordinate Judge had rejected the applications of all of them take away their right of appeal against their judgment-debtors? I do not think so. It is no doubt true that one decree-holder cannot appeal against another decree-holder from an order under section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure. That has been often laid down. See Kashi Ram v. Mani Ram (4) and also Balmer Lawrie & Co. v. Jadu Nath Banerjee (3). The ratio decidendi is that an order between two rival decree holders is not an order between parties to any suit and cannot, therefore, be treated as an order under section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A decree-holder's remedy against his rival decree-holder is by suit as provided for in section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure. But that cannot affect a right of appeal that he has against his judgment-debtor, under the other provisions of the Code. Such a right of appeal has been recognised in Sarab i Convaryi v. Kala Raghunath (7) and in the case of a judgment-debtor appellant in Venkataperumal v. Venkata Reddi (6). If a judgment-debtor has a right of appeal because the order falls under section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure the decree-holder must equally have that right. In fact as the learned Judges observe in the case last cited orders under section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure are appealable so far as they affect parties to a suit.

(7) 12 Ind. Cas. 911; 86 B. 156; 18 Bom. L. R. 1193.

VENKATAKRISHNA PATTAR v. VENKATAKRISHNA PATTAR.

The learned Vakil, for the respondent, relied upon the case of Pungalur Chennamma v. Rajah of Karvetinagar (5) for his contention that no appeal lay from any portion of an order under section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure at the instance of the decree-holder even as against his judgment-debtor. That decision was based on the ground that "every decree-holder (party to the order under section. 73) was interested in any order that might be passed in appeal." The facts of the case are not properly stated in the report but on examining the record in Court I find that the order appealed against held that there was no pending application by the appellant under section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure and it directed the whole money to be paid out to the other attaching decree-holder. The appellant sought in appeal to get that order reversed and his rateable share of the money paid to him, which had already been ordered to be paid to his rival decree-holder. The appeal though in form against the judgment-debtor was in substance to get back the money paid to the second decree-holder and was thus one in the result of which the latter was manifestly interested. Their Lordships dismissed the appeal. In the present case it is not necessary for us to consider whether we should follow this ruling as here we have a case in which the relief asked in appeal does not affect the rival decree-holders. The claim for the rateable distribution has been dismissed in toto. Each appellant in his appeal only asks that that portion of the judgment-debtor's money which would have fallen to his share if rateable distribution had been allowed should be paid over to him. There is thus in appeal no conflict between the interests of the decree-holders inter se but only between their interests and that of the judgment-debtor. It seems to me that the present case is thus clearly distinguishable from the case of Pungalur Chennamma v. Rajah of Karvetinagar (5) though it must be conceded, with due respect to the learned Judges, that the ground of distinction taken by them in Venkataperumal v. Venkata Reddi (6) is hardly valid. The fact that there is a remedy by suit available cannot affect a person's right of appeal as it is a right and not a matter of the Court's discretion in which case alone the existence of another remedy will be material. The case may, however, be distinguished on the ground that the appeal by the judgment-debtor did not in any way imperil the order passed in favour of the decree-holders not parties to the appeal; and no question between the decree-holders arose for decision in appeal.

For the purposes of the present appeals it is sufficient to hold, as I do, that in so far as an order under section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure can be treated as an order under section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure between the parties to a suit an appeal lies at the instance of either party where such an appeal does not affect orders in favour of third parties such as other decree-holders. For the same reason that an appeal lies to the lower Court a second appeal lies to the High Court and the civil revision petitions, therefore, fail.

I will, therefore, allow the second appeals against Appellate Orders and reversing the orders of the District Judge remand the appeals to him for disposal on the merits according to law. The respondent will pay the appellants' costs of the appeals in the High Court, costs in the lower Courts will abide and follow the result. The Civil Revision Petitions are dismissed without costs.

Appeal allowed; Revision petition dismissed.

V. R. P.

• •

KARIMUNNESSA v. EKIWA.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES NOS. 24 AND 63 OF 1915.

January 5, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and
Mr. Justice Richardson.

IN No. 24

Srimati KARIMUNNESSA CHOW-DHURANI WIDOW OF Syed MIR ALUM

—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Srimati EKIWA—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT

IN No. 63

Syed BADRUL HYDER CHOWDHURY AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

ALI ASHRAF CHOWDHURY AND OTHERS
—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Muhammadian Law—Waqf—Dedication, partial, to religious and charitable objects—Charge on property—Annuity, claim of, under waqf instrument—Interest, right to.

The question whether a waqf is valid or not must depend on the circumstances existing at the date of the execution of the deed. The true test is whether, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, the dominating purpose and intention of the grantor was to provide for charitable and religious objects. [p. 905, col. 2.]

Bazlul Ghana Mia v. Adak Patari, 19 Ind. Cas. 896; 17 C. W. N. 1018, referred to.

Where, under the terms of a waqf, a portion of the property was to go for religious and charitable objects, the main object of the settlor being to benefit his daughter and her successors:

Held, that the waqf was not valid as such, but the religious and charitable trusts constituted by it would be a valid charge on the property. [p. 906, col. 1.]

Mahomed Ahsanulla Chowdhury v. Amarchand Kundu, 17 C. 498; 17 I. A. 28; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 476; 8 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 871, Alamgir Khan v. Kamrunnessa Khanum, 4 C. L. J. 442, referred to.

A person claiming an annuity under the terms of a document in the nature of a waqf is not entitled to interest. [p. 906, col. 2.]

Appeals against the decrees of the District Judge, Noakhali, dated the 4th December 1914, affirming and reversing those of the Subordinate Judge of that District, dated the 25th February 1914, and the Munsif, Additional Court at Sudharam, dated the 24th November 1913.

FACTS appear fully from the judgment.

Moulvi Nuruddin Ahmed, for the Appellants.—The simple question for determination in this case is whether the waqfnama in question constitutes a valid deed of trust. The deed begins with the words, "As I desire to perpetuate my property, etc." That shows the object of the grantor. A waqf the main object of which is to make the property inalienable is invalid. The provisions relating to charity are very vague. I submit that there was no real gift to charity and the main idea running through the deed is to benefit the family of the grantor, and, therefore, the waqf should be considered as invalid. Moreover, the finding is that by a family arrangement to which the plaintiff was a party this waqfnama was treated as null and void. So the plaintiff is estopped from claiming any annuity under the trust. Again, under the Muhammadan Law no annuity can be created by a deed of trust amounting to a waqf.

[RICHARDSON, J.—What amounts to substantial gift to charity.]

As to that—see Bazlul Ghani Mia v. Adak Patari (1).

Moulvi Fazlul Huq, for the Respondents.—The latest case on this point is Mujib-un-nissa v. Abdur Rahim (2). If there is a substantial gift to charity, it does not matter to what extent the grantor's family is benefited.

[FLETCHER, J.—Quite so. But the gift to charity in this case is very insignificant and not at all substantial. Moreover, it was never the object of the grantor to make any such gift. In calculating the extent of the gift to charity the gift to the grantor's descendants in any shape whatsoever must be excluded.]

Moulvi Fazlul Huq.—Although the question of the interpretation of a document is a mixed question of fact and law, yet it may involve, as in this case, so many questions of fact that the finding of the lower Courts on the question of interpretation may be conclusive. See Bikani Mia v. Shuk Lal Poddar (3). On the merits I rely on Bazlul Ghani Mia v. Adak Patari (1).

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—These two appeals are preferred against a decision of the learned District Judge of Noakhali. The decision appealed against affirmed two other decisions; one of them being pronounced by

(1) 19 Ind. Cas. 896; 17 C. W. N. 1018.

(2) 23 A. 233; 28 I. A. 15; 5 C. W. N. 177; 11 M. L. J. 58; 3 Bom. L. R. 114; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 829.

(3) 20 C. 116; 10 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 79.

KARIMUNNESSA v. EKIWA.

the Subordinate Judge of Noakhali and the other being pronounced by the Munsif at Sudharam. The two cases in substance involve only one question and the rights of the parties must be governed according to the view that we take of a particular document called a wagf. The wagf in question is a document executed in the year 1291 by a Muhammadan lady named Srimati Budrunnessa Chowdhurani who was the daughter of Muhammad Afzul Chowdhuri and the wife of Sri Dowlut Gazi Chowdhuri. The deed after the appropriate recitals proceeds to state that the executant is in possession of the properties mentioned in the document. Then it states that she owes a particular debt of Rs. 310 but otherwise she is not indebted to anybody. Then the document runs in these terms:—
 “I have thought it proper that, in my lifetime, I should according to my Muhammadan religion, settle the property mentioned in the schedule hereinafter given according to the scheme herein laid down with the object of my future good as well as with the object of providing and not disappointing my successor or successors or other person or persons. To attain this object, I could not do any other act but make the wagf. Accordingly I have endowed and made for ever a wagf of the property mentioned in the schedule given below, names and details with sudder jama of which are also set forth. (2) “The income of the properties mentioned in Schedule I is reserved for the repairs to my dwelling house, repairs to the mosque in front of the dwelling house of my husband in Perganah Melorkul as also for repairs to the tank, as well as it is reserved for meeting the expenses of lightning, paying the wages of khatib, the expenses of Durga Bati of Sha Neamah, the expenses of travellers and guests, for khateni and maulood shariff and for charitable purposes. (3) The income from the property mentioned in schedule II is to be applied to providing breakfast during Ramzan and meeting the expenses of the two eads in the sum of Rs. 25 per annum making repairs to my dwelling house and the four enclosures in the sum of Rs. 100 per annum, paying to my daughter Srimati Karimunnessa Rs. 25 per month, to Ghani Mian, a member of my family, that is to say, the son born to my aforesaid husband from the womb of his khadema Rs. 8 per month, to Ahmed Mian Rs. 8 per month and to Yakina Banoo, the daughter born to my husband of the womb of his another khadema Rs. 10 and Srimati Hasina Banoo Rs. 4 per month.” It is not necessary to go through the rest of the provisions of the deed in detail. The mutwaliship was kept in the family. Clause (5) of the document contains a very significant provision, namely, that the husband of the executant with the consent of their daughter might make a Will, though it is not clear that the Will which he might make was to override all trusts or the other conditions of the mutwaliship. But the other clauses in the document show quite clearly that the intention was that the family house and the tank should be kept in repairs and that those should be enjoyed by the daughter and her successors and also that the income of the property and any portions that might be added thereto should go to the only child of the founder Karimunnessa and her successors. It seems to me quite clear on these terms that what the settlor had in view was that, although a certain portion of the property was to go for objects religious and charitable, the main object was the benefit of the daughter and her successors. The lady died and one of these suits was brought by Srimati Ekina Banoo who was the illegitimate daughter of her husband to recover the arrears of the annuity or stipend as it was called which was given to her by the deed. The first question is whether, having regard to the Privy Council decisions prior to the recent Act, this deed was a valid deed of endowment as a wagf. The Privy Council decisions laid down generally that the test as to whether a deed was a valid deed of wagf was whether the property in substance had been dedicated to religious and charitable purposes. The case in Bazlul Ghani Mia v. Adak Patari (1) is an illustration where that rule was applied but each case must depend on the circumstances existing at the date of the execution of the deed. The true test is whether, having regard to all the circumstances of the case the dominating purpose and intention of the grantor was to provide for the charities. Applying that test to the present case, I am of opinion that was not the purpose and intention of the grantor. The decisions of this Court, however, show that, even if the document may not be wholly good but there are religious and charitable trusts constituted by the document, these trusts may be declared to form a valid charge on the property. That is, I think, the view that we can take with regard to the religious and charitable trusts as set out in this particular document. This view relating to the charge was recognized not only in the case of Mahomed Ahsanulla Chowdhry v. Amarchand Kundu (4) but also in the case of Alamgir Khan v. Kamrunnessa Khanum (5). Now, what are the trusts in this case? The trust for keeping the mosque in repairs is, of course, a valid religious and charitable trust. No Muhammadan would argue otherwise. The question in dispute in this case is with reference to the annuity to Ekina Banoo who is an illegitimate daughter of the husband of the founder. The learned Judge has found that she was destitute and unprovided for by her father and that without the small annuity of Rs. 10 per month, she would have nothing to live on. In that view, I think the annuity in her favour and the other illegitimate children can be supported as a charitable gift. I think that we ought to affirm the decision appealed from as regards the arrears of the annuity due to Ekina Banoo. It is said that some observations have been made by the learned Judge with reference to these annuities having been satisfied by some other transactions the nature of which apparently the learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court was not aware of, nor are we. How, therefore, we can say that Ekina Banoo's annuity has been satisfied by some unknown other consideration, I do not know. That disposes of the suit brought by Ekina Banoo excepting that there is a cross-objection preferred by her claiming interest. The question of interest is a matter in the discretion of the Court and the Judges in the Courts below obviously were entitled to allow or refuse interest. What was the view of the learned Judges in refusing interest we do not know. It seems that they came to the conclusion that something had been given in lieu of interest. I do not think that in a case that arises out of a document of the character of a waqf, we ought to award interest in favour of the person claiming under the terms of the document.

SUBBA RAO v. PERUMAL REDDY.

The other appeal arises out of a suit brought by one Budral Haidar Chowdhuri and others to recover possession of the lands mentioned in the deed of waqfnama. The Judge of the lower Appellate Court has dismissed that suit holding that the waqf was good. In the view, we have taken, the waqf as regards the interest other than that validly dedicated was not a valid dedication by the founder. In that view, the plaintiffs are entitled to recover possession of those lands, although, of course, they are bound to satisfy and keep down the charges mentioned in the waqfnama which we have held to be valid in so far as they affect the lands which the plaintiffs are entitled to recover in this suit.

Only one other question remains to be dealt with and that is the question of costs. Both parties having succeeded in one portion, it will be convenient if we make no order as to costs in either appeal.

RICHARDSON, J.—I agree in the orders proposed.

Appeal No. 24 dismissed;

Appeal No. 63 allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITIONS NOS. 578, 583 AND 584 OF 1915.

September 11, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Oldfield and Mr. Justice Krishnan.

S. SUBBA RAO AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—PETITIONERS IN ALL

versus

N. PERUMAL REDDY—DEFENDANT

—RESPONDENT IN C. R. P. No. 578.

NARAYANA LAKSHMANA REDDY—

DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT IN C. R. P. No. 583.

P. MUNIAPPA REDDY—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT IN C. R. P. No. 584.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11—Res judicata—Jurisdiction, ouster of, by plea of res judicata—'Competency of Court'—Decision as to jurisdiction, affirmance of, by common Court of Appeal or Revision, effect of—Rent, suit for—Jurisdiction, finding on, whether res judicata in rent suits for later years—Civil (4) 17 C. 498; 17 I. A. 28; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 476; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 871.

(5) 4 C. L. J. 442.

SUBBA RAO v. PERUMAL REDDY.

or Revenue Court—Madras Estates Land Act (Mad. I of 1908), ss. 3, (2), 189—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 25.

The doctrine of res judicata does not apply to questions of jurisdiction, in other words, the plea of res judicata to oust or confer jurisdiction is an incompetent plea. [p. 908, col. 2.]

The finding of a Court on an issue joined by the parties that a particular Court or a particular class of Courts has jurisdiction to try a case or a case of a particular nature, is not res judicata in a subsequent suit, whether the decision was given purely as a question of law or on the facts found in the particular case. A Court cannot be compelled to try a case which it has in reality no jurisdiction to try by preventing the parties from proving the facts which show it. The finding cannot comply with the requirements of section 11, Civil Procedure Code, unless it is that of a competent Court, and the competency of that Court to record the finding has to be determined by the facts and considerations put forth in the later suit. [p. 909, cols. 1 & 2.]

Plaintiffs sued defendants for rent for Fasli 1322 in a Small Cause Court. Defendants pleaded that the suit was cognizable by the Revenue Court, as the land for which rent was claimed was an estate under section 3 (2) of the Estates Land Act. The plaintiffs urged that the plea was res judicata by virtue of the finding of the same Court in a prior suit for rent for Fasli 1321, which the High Court refused to disturb in revision under section 25 of Act IX of 1887:

Held, that neither the finding in the former suit nor the mere refusal of the High Court to interfere with it operated as res judicata. [p. 907, col. 2; p. 909, col. 2.]

Ledgard v. Bull, 13 I. A. 134; 9 A. 191; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 741; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 561; Minakshi Naidu v. Subramanya Sastri, 11 M. 26 at p. 36; 14 I. A. 160; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 54; 11 Ind. Jur. 393; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 18, referred to.

Per Oldfield, J.—The refusal of the High Court to interfere with the Munsif's decision under section 25, Act IX of 1887, did not supersede that decision or substitute any new decision for it. Although the High Court, as the appellate authority from both Civil and Revenue Courts, might have been a 'competent Court' and its confirming decision might have been res judicata between the parties if the question had been raised in an appeal, the decision relied on by the plaintiffs is useless for that purpose. [p. 907, col. 2.]

Per Krishnan, J.—The jurisdiction of a Court created by a Statute is determined by the Statute itself; it can neither be added to nor determined by any act of the litigant parties and such jurisdiction cannot be conferred on a Court by any estoppel operating between the parties. The plea of res judicata is really a plea of a species of estoppel, i.e., estoppel by judgment or verdict, and such a plea to oust or confer jurisdiction is an incompetent plea. [p. 908, col. 2.]

A Court of Appeal or Revision, when it comes to a finding of its own, really finds only what the Trial Court should have found if it was acting correctly and legally, and for purposes of res judicata, that finding can be treated as the correct finding of the first Court and not as a finding of the Appellate or Revisional Court as the Original Court. [p. 909, col. 2.]

Petitions, under section 25 of Act IX of 1887, praying the High Court to revise the order of the Court of the District Munsif, Sholingpur, in Small Cause Suit Nos. 741, 748 and 749 of 1914.

Mr. B. Narasimha Rao, for the Appellants.

Mr. V. Ramadoss, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

OLDFIELD, J.—These suits were brought to recover rent from defendants, and the question is whether they were rightly filed in the Court of the District Munsif, or should have been filed in the Revenue Court.

The first question is whether the matter is res judicata in plaintiffs' favour in consequence of the judgments in the litigation which ended in Civil Revision Petition No. 124 of 1913. There is first the judgment of the District Munsif. But it cannot comply with the requirements of section 11, Civil Procedure Code, unless it is that of a competent Court; and the competency of the District Munsif's Court is the very point in dispute and can only be determined as regards the former litigation with reference to the considerations applicable to that now before us. No clear authority directly in point has been referred to. But in the circumstances it is not possible to hold that the plea of res judicata based on the previous judgment of the District Munsif affords any separate ground for a decision in plaintiffs' favour. There is then the judgment of this Court in the civil revision petition above referred to. But it amounted merely to a refusal to interfere under section 25, Act IX of 1887, with the District Munsif's decision; and it accordingly did not supersede that decision or substitute any new decision for it. Although, therefore, this Court, as the Appellate Authority from both Civil and Revenue Courts, might have been a 'competent Court,' within the meaning of section 11, Civil Procedure Code, and its confirming decision as to jurisdiction might have been res judicata between the parties, if the question had been raised in an appeal, the decision relied on by plaintiffs, is useless for that purpose. In these circumstances the res judicata relied on is not established.

SUBBA RAO v. PERUMAL REDDY.

On the merits the Revenue Court's jurisdiction is now alleged on the ground not taken in the previous litigation, that plaintiffs, suing for rent as inamdars under a grant subsequent to the Permanent Settlement in 1802, are land-holders under the Estates Land Act. There is no question as to the law; and on the only question arguable in revision, whether Exhibits I, II and III, which refer only to the Hindu year, refer to that year in one cycle or another, we agree with the lower Court. Plaintiffs, therefore, must fail.

The civil revision petitions are dismissed with costs.

KRISHNAN, J.—The chief question argued before us in these revision petitions is one of "res judicata." The facts necessary to be stated to understand the plea are these. The present plaintiffs had previously sued the defendants in the Small Cause Court for tirwa or rent due by them as tenants of certain inam lands of theirs for Fashi 1321. Defendants had raised the plea that the Court had no jurisdiction as the suits were exclusively cognisable by the Revenue Court, the inam being an estate falling under section 3, clause 2, of the Madras Estates Land Act. On the evidence then adduced by the defendants the Court held that it was not such an estate and that it had jurisdiction to try the suits and gave the plaintiffs decrees for rent against the various defendants. These findings were accepted by the High Court and the revision petition filed by the defendant was dismissed. The plaintiffs have again sued the defendants in the Small Cause Court for the rent of the same lands for the succeeding Fashis 1322 and 1323; and it is from those suits the present revenue petitions have been filed.

Defendants again raised the plea that the Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction on the same ground as before and the plaintiffs have pleaded in answer that the defendants were barred by res judicata from raising such a plea on account of the previous decision as to jurisdiction. The Munsif overruled the plaintiffs' contention and allowed defendants to adduce evidence which they did more fully than before and found that the plaintiffs' inam was a dharimilla one given by the zemindar after the Permanent Settlement, that it was an estate within the meaning of section 3 clause 2 (d) and (e) of the Estates Land Act and that the suits were, therefore, not cognisable by him but only by the Revenue Court. He, therefore, returned the plaints to be presented to the proper Court.

It was argued before us that the question of Civil Court's jurisdiction was res judicata between the parties and, therefore the Munsif was wrong in allowing evidence and coming to a contrary conclusion. No authority has been cited to support the contention that the doctrine of res judicata applies to questions of jurisdiction. On principle it seems to me that such a contention cannot be valid. The jurisdiction of a Court like that of the lower Court created by Statute is determined by the Statute itself; it can neither be added to nor diminished by any act of the litigant parties. The Privy Council has laid down in Ledgard v. Bull (1) and again in Minakshi Naidu v. Subramanya Sastri (2) that no amount of consent or waiver of parties can give jurisdiction to a Court which has not got it, though, if a Court has jurisdiction, a party may be barred by his conduct from objecting to irregularities in the institution of the suit. The parties may make a judge their arbitrator and give jurisdiction to him as such but that question is not material here. It seems to me that, for the same reasons as in the case of consent and waiver, jurisdiction cannot be conferred on a Court by any estoppel operating between parties. The plea of res judicata is really a plea of a species of estoppel viz., estoppel by judgment or by verdict. I think, therefore, that such a plea is not available to give jurisdiction to a Court which it otherwise has not; in other words a plea of res judicata to oust or confer jurisdiction is an incompetent plea.

This view receives some support from the language of section 11, Civil Procedure Code, for under it, for a plea of res judicata to be upheld, the Court before which it is raised must first satisfy itself that the first suit was heard and decided by a Court competent to try the subsequent suit. It is only then that the bar by res judicata arises; and therefore, that bar cannot refer back to the competency of the Court itself; and the question of competency cannot thus be decided by the application of the doctrine of res judicata.

(1) 13 I. A. 134; 9 A. 191; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 741; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 561.

(2) 11 M. 26 at p. 36; 14 I. A. 160; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 54; 11 Ind. Jur. 393; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 18.

MAHADEO RAI v. KESHO PERSHAD SINGH.

It was, however, pointed out that in the present cases the jurisdiction itself depended on findings of fact as to the origin and the nature of the plaintiffs' inam and it was argued that the findings on these points should at least be treated as res judicata; and it was further urged by way of analogy with reference to cases which have held that, though the principle of res judicata may not apply to a pure question of law, see Parthasaradi Ayyangar v. Chinnakrishna Ayyangar (3) and Venku v. Mahalinga (4) and Chamanlal v. Bapubhai (5), it does apply to a mixed question of law and fact, see Koyyana Chittemma v. Doosy Gavaramma (6) and Bishnu Priya Chowdhurani v. Bhaba Sundari Debya (7) that it should be held to apply to a question of jurisdiction when it depended on facts as in the present cases, even though it may not apply if the question of jurisdiction was a pure question of law.

It seems to me this contention is untenable as the question of jurisdiction is essentially different from any mere question of law. Jurisdiction is the very foundation which entitles the Court to deal with a particular case and dispose of questions arising in it between the parties. If I am right in my view that jurisdiction cannot be conferred or affected by any estoppel between parties but is a matter the Court has to decide for itself, I do not see how the Court can be prevented from considering the real facts of a case or from allowing parties to prove such facts. A Court cannot be compelled to try a case which it has in reality no jurisdiction to do, by preventing the parties from proving the facts which show it.

I do not think the fact that the High Court in revision accepted the former finding of the Small Cause Court makes any difference on this question. Questions of res judicata have to be decided with reference to the findings of the Court that tried the suit in the first instance; and that, under Explanation II to section 11, Civil Procedure Code, irrespective of any provision as to the right of appeal, the Court of Appeal or of Revision, even when it comes to a finding of its own, really finds only what the Trial Court should have found if it was acting correctly and legally; and for purposes of res judicata that finding can only be treated as the correct finding of the First Court and not as a finding of the Appellate or Revisional Court, as the Original Court.

If plaintiffs' argument as to res judicata is accepted, it will nullify the effect of section 189 of the Estates Land Act between the parties with reference to the rent of the suit lands. I do not think a view which leads to this position should be adopted.

I agree that the plea of res judicata fails, that we should accept the finding of the lower Court that the inam is a dharimilla one and the Small Cause Court has no jurisdiction and that these civil revision petitions should be dismissed with costs.

Petitions dismissed.

V.R.P.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCE No. 5 of 1916.

December 13, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Roe and
Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad.

MAHADEO RAI—DEFENDANT—APPLICANT
versus

Maharajah KESHO PERSHAD
SINGH BAHADUR, DUMRAON—

PLAINTIFFS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B.C. of 1885), ss. 3 (5), 105
—Landlord and tenant—Holding declared kabil lagun —Rent assessed—Suit by landlord for damages for use

(3) 5 M. 304; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 211.

(4) 11 M. 893; 12 Ind. Jur. 421; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 274.

(5) 22 B. 669; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 1028.

(6) 29 M. 225; 16 M. L. J. 136.

(7) 28 C. 318.

MAHADEO RAI V. KESHO PERSHAD SINGH.

and occupation previous to assessment of rent, nature of — Small Cause Court, jurisdiction of.

Where a holding was entered in the survey as kabil lagan and a rent fixed for it under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and the landlord sued the tenant for damages for use and occupation of the land previous to the assessment of rent:

Held, that the sum claimed was 'rent' within the meaning of section 3 (5) of the Bengal Tenancy Act and therefore the suit was not cognizable by a Small Cause Court. [p. 910, cols. 1 & 2.]

Reference made on the 24th July 1916 by the District Judge, Shababad, against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Shahabad, dated the 8th March 1916.

Messrs. Sushil Madho Malik and Uma Charan Laha, for the Appellant.

Mr. Rai Krishna Saha, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This case comes before us on reference from the District Court of Arrah. The facts briefly are that the Dumraon Raj were plaintiffs in an action for damages for use and occupation of lands held by the defendant. These lands were entered in the survey as kabil lagan. A rent was fixed upon them in due course under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. For damages for use and occupation for the years previous to the proceedings under section 105, the present suit was brought by the plaintiffs in the Small Cause Court, the period of limitation claimed by the plaintiffs being six years under Article 120 of the Schedule.

The plaintiffs set forth in their plaint that the defendant had been in occupation of the lands without any kashtkari right with the permission of the Dumraon Raj since eight or nine years and that their possession over the said land was a permissive one. The defendant in his written statement contended that the decision of the Settlement Authorities that the land in respect of which damages had been claimed was kabil lagan was an erroneous decision. He reiterated the grounds taken in the proceedings under section 105 that these lands formed part of his ancestral holding and that he was liable neither for rent nor for damages in regard to his occupation of them. He asserted also that since this was a suit between landlord and tenant, the sum claimed must be classed as "rent" under the Bengal Tenancy Act and the suit was not cognizable by the Court of Small Causes. This objection was disallowed by the Small Cause Court Judge and the parties were directed to proceed to trial. On this the defendant left the Court and the suit was decreed ex parte against him. The defendant then took the case before the District Court and asked for a reference to this Court under Order XLVI, rule 7, of the Civil Procedure Code. The learned Judge has made the reference on the ground that as pointed out in the case reported in Lalji Panday v. Berhamdeo Panday (1), the suit was not cognizable by the Small Cause Court.

It must be conceded at the outset that the case referred to is by no means on all fours with the present case. In that case the suit was one for damages under section 156, clause 4, of the Bengal Tenancy Act and it is distinctly set forth in the section itself that the damages to be awarded under the section are to be awarded as rent. Clearly, therefore, damages awarded under section 156 are rent and the suggestion that a suit for such damages is cognizable by a Small Cause Court is untenable. The case before us is one of an entirely different character. If the sum claimed cannot be described as rent within the meaning of the Bengal Tenancy Act there is no bar to the trial of the suit in the Small Cause Court. Damages against a trespasser may be claimed in the Small Cause Court. The sole question for decision is a question of fact whether the defendant was a tenant or a trespasser. The written statement of the defendants, as I have stated clearly, claims a status as tenants under the plaintiff. In the plaint there is nothing that can be construed as a suggestion that the defendants were trespassers. The suit now before us is a suit by a landlord to recover damages from a tenant for failure to make an agreement with him to pay a fixed sum as rent during the period of his occupation. If the defendant is a tenant and if the plaintiff is a landlord the sum now claimed is a sum payable on account of the use or occupation of land held by a tenant and is rent within the meaning of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The plaintiff is undoubtedly the landlord. The defendant claims to be the tenant and is described by the plaintiff as holding under permission. That to my mind is indistinguishable from the position of a tenant. I would, therefore; set aside the decree made by the Small Cause Court and would direct that the plaint be returned to the Court having jurisdiction to try the suit. The plaintiff will pay the costs of this reference. Hearing fee two gold mohurs.

(1) 13 Ind. Cas. 29; 16 C. W. N. 89.

RAM SUNDER GOPE SIKDAR v. HARIBALA DHUBI.

Decree set aside; Plaint returned.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 556
OF 1914.

July 18, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice D. Chatterjee and
Mr. Justice Newbould.

RAM SUNDER GOPE SIKDAR AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

HARIBALA DHUBI AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 13, 35, 67—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 145, possessory order under, recital of claim in.—Admissibility in proof of title.

Recitals of the claims of parties contained in possessory orders passed under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, whether inter partes or not, are not admissible in evidence to prove title under section 13 of the Evidence Act or on general principles. [p. 912, cols. 1 & 2.]

Denomoni Chowdhurani v. Brojo Mohini Chowdhurani, 29 C. 187; 29 I. A. 24; 12 M. L. J. 83; 4 Bom. L. R. 167; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 224; 6 C. W. N. 386 and Basi Nath Pal v. Jagat Kisore Acharjee, 35 Ind. Cas. 298; 23 C. L. J. 583 at p. 585; 20 C. W. N. 643, referred to.

Neither are they admissible under section 63 as an account of the contents of a document, not being oral, nor as entries in a public record under section 35. [p. 912, cols. 1 & 2.]

Parbutty Dassi v. Purno Chunder Singh, 9 C. 586; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 338, distinguished.

Thama v. Kondan, 15 M. 378; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 616, disapproved.

Sunder Das v. Fatimul-ul-nissa Begam, 1 C. W. N. 513 and Isab Mondal v. Queen-Empress, 25 C. 348; 5 C. W. N. 65, referred to.

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, First Court, Mymensing, dated the 24th November 1913, reversing that of the Mansif, First Court, Kishoregunj, dated the 16th September 1912.

Babus Broja Lal Chuckerbutty and Birendra Kumar Dey, for the Appellants.

Babu Kali Kinker Chakraborty, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

D. CHATTERJEE, J.—The question in this case is whether the plaintiff has a jote right in the disputed lands. The lower Appellate Court has held that he has and that would ordinarily conclude a second appeal. It is contended, however, that for arriving at that finding the lower Appellate Court has relied upon the recital of a previous statement of the defendants contained in Exhibit 7, a judgment in a case under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, whereas that recital is not admissible in evidence. Reliance is placed in support of this contention on the case of Denomoni Chowdhurani v. Brojo Mohini Chowdhurani (1), in which the Judicial Committee held that orders under section 530 of the old Criminal Procedure Code (corresponding with section 145 of the present Code) are admissible on general principles as well as under section 13 of the Evidence Act to show the fact that such orders were made: "This necessarily makes them evidence of the following facts all of which appear from the orders themselves, viz., who the parties to the dispute were; what the land in dispute was, and who was declared entitled to retain possession." For this purpose and to this extent such orders are admissible in evidence for and against every one when the fact of possession at the date of the orders has to be ascertained, this enumeration does not include the claims of the contending parties. The proceeding under section 530 in that case was, however, not inter partes and the learned Vakil for the respondent has attempted to distinguish it on that ground from the present which is a case of an inter partes order. There is authority for holding that a recital in a judgment not inter partes is not admissible in evidence Basi Nath Pal v. Jagat Kisore Acharjee (2). The question raised in the present case is, however, as to the admissibility in evidence of a recital of the

(1) 29 C. 187; 29 I. A. 24; 12 M. L. J. 83; 4 Bom. L. R. 167; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 224; 6 C. W. N. 386.

(2) 35 Ind. Cas. 298; 23 C. L. J. 583 at p. 585; 20 C. W. N. 643.

RAM SUNDER GOPE SIKDAR v. HARIBALA DHUBI.

claim of one of the parties contained in a possessory order under section 145 inter partes. I think it makes no difference so far as this point is concerned as to whether the proceeding is or is not inter partes: the recital of the claims of the contending parties is however a part of the proceeding terminating in the judgment or judicial opinion pronounced by the Judge and the primary evidence of these claims is the pleadings of the parties. The recital of the claims in the judgment is the statement of the Judge as to what the said claims were, and must, therefore, be admissible or not as such statements. "There may be cases in which a judgment is the only proof of the assertions of the parties. But it may be objected that a claim is asserted or denied, in the pleadings, in the issues, or in the evidence given in support or denial of those issues. If these are available are not they the proper evidence of the claim made?" Woodroffe and Ameer Ali on Evidence under section 13, page 182, Fifth Edition. I think the proper evidence of the claims would have been the written statements, if available, and there is nothing to show they are not. But supposing that it were shown that the original written statement was not available; would the statement of the Judge or Magistrate as contained in the order be admissible as secondary evidence of the contents of the written statement. Section 63 of the Evidence Act makes oral accounts of the contents of a document given by some person who has himself seen it admissible as secondary evidence of the contents of the document. Even if we can take it for granted that the Magistrate had seen the written statement, the account is a written account and not an oral account. The distinction is important for an oral account must be given by a witness whose accuracy may be tested by cross-examination.

An attempt has been made in some cases to bring evidence of this kind under section 35 of the Evidence Act as an entry in a public record.

In the case of Parbutty Dassi v. Furno Chunder Singh (3), a recital in an old decree was held admissible under section 35 as under the old practice the Courts were enjoined to set out the pleadings in detail. The authority of this case has been doubted in the case of Sunder Das v. Fatim-ul-nissa Bagam (4) and even if it were good law, the order in this case is a very recent one and there is no law which directs the Magistrate in a case under section 145 to set out the pleadings of the parties. The Madras High Court followed the case of Sunder Dass in Thama v. Kondan (5), but with great deference, I do not see my way to the same conclusion. In the case of Isab Mandal v. Queen-Empress (6), a written statement of a party recorded by a Police Officer who was examined as a witness to say that the statement had been made was held not to come within the description of a record within the meaning of section 35. On principle also I think it would be very dangerous to allow such recitals to be used as evidence as the recital must be a very partial one and the whole written statement if produced might bear a different complexion altogether. In this view of the matter, I do not think that the learned Judge was right in using the recital in Exhibit 7 as evidence against the appellant. As the learned Judge places a very great reliance on this recital in deciding the question of title, I would allow the appeal and send the case back to the lower Appellate Court to decide the question of title independently of the recital in Exhibit 7. Costs to abide the result.

NEWBOULD, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed; Case remanded.

(4) 1 C. W. N. 513.

(5) 15 M. 378; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 616.

(6) 28 C. 348; 5 C. W. N. 65.

(3) 9 C. 586; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1038.

MUHAMMAD MAHBOOB v. BHAGOO MAHO.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2739 OF 1914.

December 19, 1916.

Present:—Sir Edward Chamier, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Sharfuddin.
Syed MUHAMMAD MAHBOOB—

APPELLANT

versus

BHAGOO MAHO—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—'Rent-decree', decree in suit for rent against some only of several joint tenants, whether is—Auction-purchaser, position of

Where all the persons entitled to a holding are not made parties to a suit for recovery of rent, the decree obtained in such a suit is not a 'rent-decree' and the auction-purchaser in execution of such a decree would at the most be entitled only to the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtors [p 912, col. 2]

Appeal against the decree of the Sub-Judge, Muzaffarpore, dated the 8th June 1914, confirming that of the Munsif, Muzaffarpore, dated the 13th September 1913.

Mr. Mustafa Khan, for the Appellant.

Mr. Baiyanath Narain Sinha, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

CHAMIER, C. J.—It appears that an occupancy holding which consisted of 6 bighas odd was the property of three persons, Chethru, Palukdhari and Dhanukdhari. Chethru was the nephew of Palukdhari and Dhanukdhari was some kind of cousin of Chethru and Palukdhari. The appellants in this case who are the 16-anna proprietors of the village in which the holding lies, brought a suit for rent in 1904 and obtained a decree in 1905. In the same year the defendants 1st party who appear to have purchased the interest of Dhanukdhari in the holding, paid the entire decree money into Court under section 171 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and subsequently obtained possession of the entire holding. Some years later the appellants brought another suit for rent in respect of this holding and obtained a decree in July 1908, in execution of which they claim to have bought the holding for Rs. 217. On attempting to take possession the appellants were obstructed by respondents 1st party and brought the present suit in September 1912. The Courts below have agreed in dismissing the suit. It is quite clear that the appellants brought this suit claiming that they had purchased the holding in execution of a rent-decree and were, therefore, entitled to disregard the rights of respondents 1st party altogether. Both Courts below have held that the decree was not what is called a rent decree and, therefore, the appellants must be taken to have purchased only the rights of the defendants to the second rent suit. The defendants to that suit were the two sons of Chethru, one of whom was at the time a minor. Palukdhari was dead at the time of that suit and had left no heirs. Dhanukdhari had died but had left a widow and daughters. The appellants did not implead the widow and daughters of Dhanukdhari as defendants to the second rent suit. On that ground the lower Appellate Court has held that the decree was not what is called a rent-decree and, therefore, the holding did not pass to the appellants at the auction-sale free of encumbrances. The lower Appellate Court also held that the decree was bad in consequence of the failure of the appellants to have a guardian appointed for Ram Saran, one of the defendants who was a minor.

It is unnecessary for us to go into the question whether the purchase at auction is rendered invalid by reason of the fact that no guardian was appointed to represent Ram Saran in the suit, for it is clear that on the findings recorded by the lower Appellate Court the heirs of Dhanukdhari were not parties to the suit. Therefore, all the persons entitled to the holding were not parties to the suit and the appellants must be taken to have purchased at most only the rights of the two sons of Chethru. It seems to follow that the appellants are not entitled to a decree for possession against the respondents 1st party. But it is contended that Dhanukdhari, Palukdhari and Chethru were all joint in estate and, therefore, the widow and daughters of Dhanukdhari took no interest in the holding. No such case as this was put forward in either of the Courts below and it is impossible for us in second appeal to presume that all three were joint in estate. I observe, moreover, that one of the witnesses called by the appellants at the trial who spoke to the relationship between the three persons, was extremely vague about it. It is impossible to ascertain exactly what relationship there was between Dhanukdhari and Palukdhari. It appears to me that the appellants must be taken to have acquired only the interests of the two sons of Chethru. The case as brought by the appellants has failed. In my opinion on the facts as found the decision of the lower Appellate Court is correct, and I would dismiss this appeal with costs.

GATIGANTI SUBBARAYUDU v. ARUMILLI SURAYYA.

SHARFUDDIN, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER NO. 244 OF 1915.

October 17, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Oldfield and

Mr. Justice Krishnan.

GATIGANTI SUBBARAYUDU AND OTHERS

— DEFENDANTS— APPELLANTS

versus

ARUMILLI SURAYYA— PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. II, r. 17—Plaint, amendment of, grounds for—Alteration necessitated by recent decision—Limitation—Discretion of Court.

The sanctioning of leave to amend a plaint is a matter within the discretion of the Court. [p. 915, col. 1.]

In certain circumstances, where no substantial change is made in the plaint averments and the claim was not barred on the day when the plaint was filed, leave to amend should not necessarily be refused on the ground that the plaint as amended would be barred by limitation [p. 915, col. 1.]

Mohammed Zahoor Ali Khan v. Musammatt Thakooranee Ruffa Koor, 11 M. L. A. 468; 4 W. R. (P. C.) 9; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 107; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 320; 20 E. R. 177, referred to.

Ordinarily, however, delay in asking for leave to amend and the resulting argument from limitation are not to be disregarded, when the Court is called on to exercise its discretion in the matter. Each case must be dealt with on its merits. [p. 915, col. 1.]

Mulla Veetil Seethi Kutti v. Korambath Parutholi Achutan Nair, 10 Ind. Cas. 218; 21 M. L. J. 475; Serugan Chetty v. Krishna Aiyangar, 13 Ind. Cas. 268; 10 M. L. T. 557; 22 M. L. J. 139; 36 M. 378, referred to.

Leave to amend a plaint on the ground that an alteration is necessitated in consequence of a recent judicial decision and that there was a pardonable mistake regarding it in the plaint, will not be granted after a long delay and where the decision has effected no change in the existing law. [p. 915, col. 1.]

Mulla Veetil Seethi Kutti v. Korambath Parutholi Achutan Nair, 10 Ind. Cas. 218; 21 M. L. J. 475; Narayanawami Aiyar v. Krishnamurti Aiyar, 26 Ind. Cas. 927; 17 M. L. T. 48; (1915) M. W. N. 122, Viswanathier v. Aiyarier, 26 Ind. Cas. 383, referred to.

Appeal against the decree of the Court of the Additional Temporary Subordinate Judge, Rajahmundry, in Appeal Suit No. 7 of 1915 (Appeal Suit No. 241 of 1914, on the file of the District Court of Godavari), preferred against that of the Additional District Munsif, Amalapuram, in Original Suit No. 24 of 1913.

Mr. B. Narasimha Rao, for the Appellants.

Mr. V. Ramadoss, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

OLDFIELD, J.—The plaintiff sued, alleging in his plaint that he had been obstructed by defendants in taking possession of property purchased by him in a Court sale held under a mortgage-decree, which he and others had obtained against the 6th and 7th defendants. He asked for possession and removal of the obstruction. The plaint averred that the sale by the 6th and 7th defendants to the 1st defendant and the re-sale by the 1st defendant could not affect the plaintiff. Issues were framed in 1911, and over two years later, though before trial, the plaintiff, apparently with reference to the decision in Kutti Chettiar v. Subramania Chettiar (1), which had been published in 1909, applied for leave to amend by substituting an averment that the sales to and by the 1st defendant were valid and a prayer for a direction to 1st to 5th defendants to redeem and for possession in case they failed to do so. The District Munsif refused leave to amend, apparently treated the original attack on the 1st defendant's title as abandoned and dismissed the suit. The lower Appellate Court held that the amendment should have been allowed, and remanded the suit for re-trial on that basis.

The amendment was allowed first on the ground that it consisted only in the insertion of a prayer for an appropriate instead of an inappropriate remedy. That was not the case, since, as pointed out above, it also involved the substitution of an affirmation of the validity of the 1st defendant's purchase for a denial of it, the foundation of the claim being thus entirely changed. Next, the lower Appellate Court thought it immaterial that the new claim proposed by the amendment would have been barred at its date, because it would not have been barred when the plaint was filed; and it has, no doubt, been recognised in a number of cases from Mohummud Zahoor Ali Khan v. Musummat Thakooranee Rutla Koer (2) onwards that in such circumstances leave to amend should not necessarily be refused on the ground of limitation. But it does not follow, and it is not the law, that delay in asking for leave to amend and the resulting argument from limitation are to be disregarded, when the Court is called on to exercise its discretion in the matter. Vide the observations in Mulla Veettill Seethi Kutti v. Korambath Paruthooli Achutan Nair (3). Each case must be dealt with on its merits; and it is possible that the extreme limit of indulgence was reached in Sevugan Chetty v. Krishna Aiyangar (4) on which the plaintiff has relied. But, although the facts there are obscure, they appear to differ from those in question before us, since they included no change in the plaintiff's averments, but only an addition to the claim made. Here there is no such recent decision as to the law and pardonable mistake regarding it as was in question in Mulla Veettill Seethi Kutti v. Korambath Paruthooli Achutan Nair (3) and Narayanawami Aiyar v. Krishnamurti Aiyar (5) and Viswanathier v. Aiyavier (6). On the contrary, there was great delay in asking for the amendment and no suggestion of any special reason for granting indulgence. The lower Appellate Court's order allowing amendment is, therefore, unsustainable and is set aside.

(1) 4 Ind. Cas. 1077; 10 M. L. J. 722; 32 M. 485.

AJODHYA PRASAD SINGH v. JAGDEO SINGH.

The District Munsif apparently did not deal with the merits of the plaintiff's original case or try the issues framed. It does not appear that that case was ever abandoned. The suit must, therefore, be remanded to the District Munsif for restoration to file and disposal on its merits on those issues. The plaintiff will pay the defendants' costs in the lower Appellate Court and here. Costs to date before the District Munsif will follow the result and be provided for in the decree to be passed.

KRISHNAN, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed; Case sent back.

V. R. P.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 3932 TO 3934
OF 1913.

December 12, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad.

AJODHYA PRASAD SINGH—

APPELLANT

versus

JAGDEO SINGH AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B.C. of 1885), s. 87—Abandonment—Forfeiture—Usufructuary mortgage with possession, whether amounts to abandonment.

Mere execution of a usufructuary mortgage and delivery of possession to the mortgagee of his holding by a tenant who continues to reside in the village, does not entail forfeiture of the tenancy nor does it amount to an abandonment of the holding within the meaning of section 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. [p. 916, col. 1.]

Upendra Nath Bose v. Bansi Tanti, 22 Ind. Cas. 416; 40 C. 870, referred to.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Darbhanga, dated the 19th September 1913, reversing that of the Munsif, Samastipur, dated the 13th February 1913.

Mr. Ganesh Dutta Singh, for the Appellant.

Mr. Chandra Sekhar Banerji, for the Respondents in No. 3933.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant in this case is the landlord of village Mathi, Perganah Saresa. The defendant No. 1 took a usufructuary mortgage from the defendant No. 2 of his rai-yati right in certain lands held by defendant No. 2 in village Mathi. This mortgage-bond was executed on the 13th September 1901, and defendant No. 1 is in possession of the lands from that time. The plaintiff has brought this suit for a declaration that the original tenant of the lands defendant No. 2 has abandoned his holding, by reason of his having executed the usufructuary bond in favour of defendant No. 1 and having parted with the possession of the holding. There is a prayer for recovery of possession

(2) 11 M. I. A. 468; 9 W. R. (P. C.) 9; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 167; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 320; 20 E. R. 177.

(3) 10 Ind. Cas. 218; 21 M. L. J. 475.

(4) 13 Ind. Cas. 268; 36 M. 378; 10 M. L. T. 557; 22 M. L. J. 139.

(5) 26 Ind. Cas. 927; 17 M. L. T. 48; (1915) M. W. N. 122.

(6) 26 Ind. Cas. 383.

JOYANUDDIN KHAN v. JAMIRUDDIN SARKAR.

also. The lower Appellate Court has held that the original tenant still resides in the village and that the transfer by usufructuary mortgage was only a partial transfer of the right of the original tenant. The lower Appellate Court, therefore, has come to the conclusion that the execution of the mortgage-bond and the possession delivered under that to the defendant No. 1 does not amount to an abandonment under section 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. There is no suggestion in the plaint that the original tenant abandoned his residence. The suit is not based upon that ground and I agree with the views of the lower Appellate Court that all the conditions required by section 84 have not been fulfilled in the case. It has been held over and over that mere execution of a usufructuary mortgage by a tenant and the delivery of possession to the mortgagee does not entail forfeiture of the tenancy nor abandonment of the holding vide Bhupendra Nath Bose v. Bansi Tanti (1) where all the authorities on the point have been referred to.

I, therefore, hold that there is no abandonment under section 87 and agree with the views of the lower Appellate Court and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 22 Ind. Cas. 416; 40 C. 870.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No 622 OF 1916.

January 9, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and

Mr. Justice Richardson.

JOYANUDDIN KHAN—DECREE-HOLDER—
PETITIONER

versus

JAMIRUDDIN SARKAR—

JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 17, sub-r. (1)—Execution, application for, rejected as not in accordance with law, whether saves limitation—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 112—Consent decree, execution of—Mistake or ambiguity—Executing Court, power of, to look into petition of compromise—Instalment decree—Default—Option of decree-holder to claim execution of whole amount.

An executing Court can go behind a consent decree and look at the terms of the compromise in accordance with which the decree was passed, in order properly to understand what the decree was. [p. 917, col. 2.]

An application for execution of a decree rejected by a Court under Order XXI, rule 7, sub-rule (1), as not being an application in accordance with law, will not operate to save limitation under Article 182 of the Limitation Act. [p. 917, col. 2.]

When, under a decree payable by instalments the whole decretal amount becomes due on default in the payment of one instalment, the decree-holder has not the option either to compel immediate payment of the whole amount due under the decree or to recover the money in accordance with the instalments. [p. 918, col. 1.]

Chunder Komal Das v. Bisassurree Dassia, 13 C. L. R. 243, not followed.

Rule against the order of the Subordinate Judge, Ranpur, in Miscellaneous Judicial Case No. 75 of 1915.

FACTS material to the report will appear from the judgment and the arguments.

Babu Hemendra Chandra Sen, for the Petitioner.—The learned Court was clearly wrong in going behind the decree. It is the decree and the decree only which he can look to. He cannot consider the solehnamah on which the decree is based. The learned Judge was not at all entitled to look into the terms of the compromise.

I am not barred by limitation, inasmuch as the application for execution of the 10th July 1914 was quite in accordance with law. I am perfectly within time. It is not necessary to apply for execution when the decree is one year old. The prayer for issue of notice is a step-in-aid of execution. Refers to Order XXI, rule 22, Civil Procedure Code.

[FLETCHER, J.—Order XXI, rule 17, says that the Court must first entertain the application. Order XXI, rule 22, is independent of rule 7.]

The whole decree is not barred, vide Chunder Komal Das v. Bisassurree Dassia (1), Bir Narain Pandia v. Darpa Narain Prodhan (2), Sitab Chand Nahar v. Hyder Malla (3), Rup Narain Bhattacharya v. Gopi Nath Mondol (4), Asmutullah Dalal v. Rully Churn Mutter (5). Article 72, Schedule I of the

(1) 13 C. L. R. 243.

(2) 20 C. 74; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 50.

(3) 24 C. 281; 1 C. W. N. 229; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 854.

(4) 11 C. W. N. 903.

(5) 7 C. 56; 5 Ind. Jur. 525; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 586.

JOYANUDDIN KEAN v. JAMIRUDDIN SARKAR.

Limitation Act, deals with instalment bonds and has nothing whatever to do with instalment decrees. But here we are concerned with an instalment decree and not an instalment bond. So how am I beyond time? Article 152, clause 7, applies to instalment decrees. The decree being an instalment decree, the decree-holder is entitled to the immediate payment of the whole amount or to the recovery of the money by instalments, vide Chunder Komal Das v. Bisassuree Dassia (1).

Babu Girda Prasanna Sanyal for Babu Atul Chandra Gupta, for the Opposite Party, was not called upon.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This is a Rule calling upon the opposite party to shew cause why the order complained of should not be set aside. The present applicant is a decree-holder. He brought a suit on the 10th May 1911 against five persons to recover certain moneys due on a promissory note. The suit was decreed on compromise. The compromise petition was dated the 1st July 1911 and the decree passed on the terms of the compromise was dated the 10th July of the same year. Under the terms of the compromise, it was provided that a certain sum should be paid by each of the various defendants and by instalments and that, default being made in the payment of one of the instalments, the whole amount would become due. The decree itself stated the instalments but it omitted, by an error presumably, to state the condition as to the whole amount becoming due on default being made by the judgment-debtors in the payment of the instalments. An application was made for execution on the 10th July 1914 against all the five defendants. That application was rejected by the learned Judge on the ground that the prayer for execution was not in accordance with the terms of the decree. The present application was then made on the 10th November 1915 against the defendant No. 2 alone and the learned Judge dismissed this application too on the ground that the decree is barred by limitation. Against this order the present Rule has been obtained.

The first point that has been argued is that the Court is not entitled to go behind the decree, but is bound to take the decree and not consider what appears in the solenamih or the petition of compromise. The order-sheet shows that the suit was decreed in accordance with the terms of the compromise and it was necessary for the Court, in order to properly understand what the decree was, to look at the terms of the compromise. That being so, the Judge was clearly entitled to consider the terms of the compromise.

The next point that was taken was that the application for execution dated the 10th July 1914 was an application made in accordance with law in a proper Court for execution and that, therefore, the limitation was saved by that application. But what happened in that case was that the application was dealt with by the learned Judge under the provisions of Order XXI, rule 17, sub-rule (1) of the Code of Civil Procedure, namely, that the Court having ascertained that the requirements of rules 11 to 14 of the said Order had not been complied with rejected the application. It is clear from the terms of sub-rule (2) of Order XXI, rule 17, that, when a Court rejects an application under Order XXI, rule 17, sub-rule (1), the application in that case shall not be deemed to have been an application in accordance with law, because that sub-rule shows that, when the Court permits an application to be amended and then receives it, the application then and only then can be deemed to have been an application in accordance with law. I am of opinion that in this case the application dated the 10th July 1914, having been rejected under Order XXI, rule 17, sub-rule (1), as not being an application in accordance with law, that application would not be one that would save limitation.

Then the next point that was argued was that, in any case, the decree being payable by instalments, the decree-holder had the option either to compel immediate payment of the whole amount due under the decree or to recover the money in accordance with the instalments. In support of that view, the decision of this Court in the case of Chunder Komal Das v. Bisassuree Dassia (1) has been relied upon. That decision has not been followed in many cases and I prefer to follow the decisions which have taken a contrary view.

DEVINENI PATTAYYA v. KANDUKURI KOTIAH.

In the result, the present Rule fails and must be discharged with costs, one gold mohur.

RICHARDSON, J.—I agree.

Rule discharged.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEALS NOS. 105 AND 106 OF 1916.

October 10, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Spencer and Mr. Justice Phillips.

DEVINENI PATTAYYA AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS IN L. P. A. No. 105
AND

CHELASANI BHADRAYYA AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS IN L. P. A. No. 106—
versus

KANDUKURI KOTIAH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT (IN BOTH).

Hereditary Village Offices Act (Mad. III of 1895), ss. 13, 21—Service inam lands, suit for recovery of—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.

A claim for the recovery of lands which are the emoluments of a service inam, must be laid before the Collector when the defendants contest the plaintiff's right to the office and allege an independent right in themselves. [p. 918, col. 2.]

In all cases where it is necessary for the plaintiff to allege, for the maintenance of his suit, that the land claimed is an emolument of a service inam, the jurisdiction is with the Collector under section 13 of Madras Act III of 1895. Where, however, the claim is to dispossess a trespasser and no question of title is involved, or where the land is claimed as the plaintiff's private property, the jurisdiction of Civil Courts is not ousted. [p. 918, col. 2.]

Kesiram Narasimhulu v. Narasimhulu Patnaidu, 30 M. 126; 16 M. L. J. 514; 1 M. L. T. 381; Muvola Seetharam Naidu v. Doddi Rami Naidu, 5 Ind. Cas. 137; 7 M. L. T. 181; 20 M. L. J. 91; 33 M. 208; Gavura Ramanna v. Adabala Rattayya, 5 Ind. Cas. 136; 7 M. L. T. 136; 20 M. L. J. 94; 33 M. 235; Kesaram Narasimhulu v. Vuddanda Narasimhulu Patnayudu, 16 M. L. J. 333; 1 M. L. T. 102, referred to.

Appeals, under clause 15 of the Letters Patent, against the judgment of Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyar, reported as 33 Ind. Cas. 658, in Civil Revision Petitions Nos. 924 and 925 of 1913, presented against the order of the District Court, Kistna at Masulipatam, in Miscellaneous Applications Nos. 28 and 29 of 1912, respectively (preferred against the order of the District Munsif, Bezvada, in Original Suits Nos. 388 and 392 of 1911, respectively),

Mr. V. Ramesam, for the Appellants.

Mr. V. Ramadoss, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—We are unable to agree with the opinion of the learned Judge that the suit in question was cognizable in a Civil Court. Essentially the suit was one to recover the emoluments of a carpenter's and blacksmith's service inam and thus the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is taken away by section 21, Madras Act III of 1895. We are of opinion that in all cases where it is necessary for the plaintiff to allege for the maintenance of his suit that the land in suit is an emolument of a service inam, the jurisdiction will remain with the Collector under section 13 of the Act. This is the principle laid down in the Full Bench decision in Kesiram Narasimhulu v. Narasimhulu Patnaidu (1). In suits where the plaintiff seeks to recover on the ground of a bare trespass and no question of title is involved, as in Muvola Seetharam Naidu v. Doddi Rami Naidu (2), or on the ground that the land is his private property, as in Gavura Ramanna v. Adabala Rattayya (3), the suit is not based on any cause of action arising out of the plaintiff's right to recover the property as an emolument of an office; and in such cases the Civil Court's jurisdiction may not be ousted. In such cases it is not necessary that the plaint should contain any mention of the fact that the land is an emolument of an office. But in the present case it was declared in the plaint that the plaintiff and his ancestors had been enjoying, as of right, the carpenter and blacksmith inam and had been rendering service in connection therewith, and that when the plaintiff demanded the defendants Nos. 1 to 4 and 7 to 9 to deliver over possession of the land, they ignored his right and intimated to him that defendants Nos. 7 to 13 had an independent right to the property. Where, as in the present case, the defendants set up a rival claim to the office, it is obviously necessary for the claim to be adjudicated by the Collector

(1) 30 M. 126; 16 M. L. J. 514; 1 M. L. T. 381.

(2) 5 Ind. Cas. 137; 33 M. 208; 7 M. L. T. 181; 20 M. L. J. 91.

(3) 5 Ind. Cas. 136; 33 M. 235; 7 M. L. T. 136; 20 M. L. J. 94.

ABDUL BARY V. BELAYAT ALI.

and not by a Civil Court. Mr. Ramadoss argued from the second proviso to section 13 that in a case where it is not disputed that the emoluments of the office consist of land, a suit will always lie in the Civil Court, because in such a case it is not necessary for the Collector to assume that the assignment of revenue constitutes the emoluments. This view found favour with Subramanya Aiyar, J., in Kesaram Narasimhulu v. Vuddanda Narasimhulu Patnayudu (4) and he consequently was of opinion that in all cases where the emoluments of the office consist of the land itself, the suit should be brought in the Civil Court. Moore, J., who sat with him did not agree in this view and when the case came up on appeal before three Judges in Kesaram Narasimhulu v. Narasimhulu Patnayudu (1), the opinion of Subramanya Aiyar, J., was overruled.

We allow these appeals with costs and restore the order of the District Judge, which supported the view of the District Munsif, that the suits were cognizable by the Revenue Court and that the plaint should be returned for presentation to such Court.

Appeals allowed.

V.R.P.

(4) 16 M. L. J. 333; 1 M. L. T. 102.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 134 OF 1916.

January 15, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and
Mr. Justice Richardson.

ABDUL BARY SADAGAR—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT

versus

BELAYAT ALI SADAGAR—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXVIII, rr. 5 (b), 6 (b) — Surety, withdrawal of—Order permitting withdrawal without notice to parties, effect of—Recission of order, legality of—Continuing guarantor, position of—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 150.

A person who stands surety for a judgment-debtor under Order XXXVIII, rule 5 (b), Code of Civil Procedure, cannot withdraw from the guarantee at any time by simply giving notice of his intention not to be a surety any longer. [p 90, col. 2]

Raj Narain Mookerjee v. Ful Kumari Debi, 29 C. 68; 6 C. W. N. 7, distinguished.

An order of a Court discharging a surety without notice to the parties can be rescinded on the application of any of the parties. [p. 920, col. 2.]

Obiter.—Where the guarantee is a continuing one the surety may withdraw as to any future transaction, but where a surety has given a guarantee to cover a definite case he cannot simply by a notice to the creditor withdraw the guarantee so as to nullify altogether the effect of the security. [p 92, col. 2]

Appeal against the order of the District Judge, Chittagong, dated the 14th January 1916, affirming that of the Munsif, 2nd Court at that place, dated the 17th July 1915.

FACTS material to the report will appeal from the judgment.

Babu Dwarkanath Chakrabarty (with him Babu Chandra Sekhar Sen), for the Appellant.—The question is whether the surety could be discharged at all; at any rate, if the surety could be discharged at all, whether the Court could do so without any notice to the decree-holder.

There is no provision in the Code for discharging a person who stood surety under Order XXXVIII, rule 5, though there is provision for discharging a person who stood surety for the appearance of a defendant (see Order XXXVIII, rules 2 and 3).

Section 130 of the Indian Contract Act is not applicable to the present case as the section only applied to a continuing guarantee, but in the present case the surety has given a guarantee to cover a definite case. Even assuming the guarantee to be a continuing one, the section only contemplates future transactions.

The case of Raj Narain Mookerjee v. Ful Kumari Debi (1) is not at all applicable to the present case. There the surety was discharged as to future transactions.

Moreover the Court had no jurisdiction to pass the order behind my back.

Babu Khitish Chandra Sen, for the Respondent.—The Court can discharge a surety (see Order XXXVIII, rule 3).

The case of Raj Narain Mookerji v. Ful Kumari Debi (1) is applicable to the present case, as the discharge there related to both present and future transactions.

(1) 29 C. 68 6 C. W. N. 7.

ABDUL BARY U. BELAYAT ALI.

At any rate when the Court had discharged the surety by its order and there was no appeal from that order, the decree-holder cannot make my client liable. The order is binding between the parties.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This is an appeal from a decision of the learned District Judge of Chittagong dated the 14th January 1916, affirming the decision of the Munsif of the same place. The appellant before us obtained a decree for money against one Nawab Ali. The respondent to the appeal was a person who stood surety for the judgment debtor Nawab Ali for the amount of any decree that might be passed against the judgment debtor. A case of that nature is no doubt a simple case; but in view of what happened in the Courts below the matter seems to have created some difficulty. The decree-holder, who is the appellant before us, made an application under the terms of order XXXVIII, rule 5, Code of Civil Procedure, for attachment before judgment. A Rule was issued and it was made absolute in the ordinary terms that unless the defendant gave security to the satisfaction of the Court for the amount of any decree that might be passed against him in the suit, his property should be attached. The defendant did give security, the surety being the present respondent to this appeal. Subsequently, on the 17th August 1914, the respondent, the surety, made an application to the Judge to be released from his security-bond. The Judge heard that application without issuing notice to the plaintiff, the present decree-holder, and made an order on the 15th August 1914 "that the defendant do file fresh security-bond for the same amount of money within a week, in default, the plaintiff's application for attachment before judgment may be granted. The plaintiff and his Pleader are absent. The surety be released from the terms of the security-bond." The order seems to have been made without notice to the plaintiff, who obviously had a considerable interest in the matter. Upon coming to know of that order, the plaintiff applied to the Judge to annul that order and the Judge on the 4th September 1914 annulled the order till the hearing of the matter, and it is obvious from another order of the same date that the defendant had failed to give any further security and the order of the 15th August was treated as annulled. The learned Judges in the Courts below seem to have considered that, in a case of this nature, the surety could withdraw from the guarantee at any time by simply giving a notice that he intended not to be a surety any longer. In my opinion that is not so. Section 130 of the Indian Contract Act only says that a continuing guarantee may be revoked at any time as regards future transactions. It is a well known class of cases and there have been many cases in the English Courts in which a surety has been allowed to withdraw, where the guarantee has been found to be a continuing guarantee, which the guarantee in the present case is not, as to any future transaction. But no case has ever established that where a surety has given a guarantee to cover a definite case, he can simply by a notice to the creditor withdraw the guarantee so as to nullify altogether the effect of the security. The decision in Raj Narain Mookerjee v. Ful Kumari Debi (1) has got nothing to do with this case at all. That decision shows that the guarantee that was given by the surety in that case was, in fact, a continuing guarantee and that the surety could withdraw not absolutely from the guarantee but with reference to any future transaction. That has got nothing to do with the point raised in this case. The Judge in the case, having made the order without notice to the other side that the surety could withdraw from the security, was obviously competent to rescind that order on the application of the plaintiff, the present decree-holder. He did do so, the effect being, as it ought to be, that the security given by the present respondent for the amount of any decree that might be passed against the defendant stands good and is a valid security. In my opinion, the decisions of the Courts below are wrong. We ought, therefore, to reverse them and allow the appeal with costs both in this Court as well as in the lower Courts. We assess the hearing-fee at fifty rupees.

RICHARDSON, J.—I agree. The order of the 15th August 1914 discharging the respondent was, as I understand, made without notice to the plaintiff. That order was at the best suspended by the order of the 4th

WALI MUHAMMAD V. DAULAT-UN-NISSA.

September 1914 and it was never revived. So far as I can see, the Courts below were wrong in law in the conclusion that they came to that the respondent had been, in fact, discharged.

Appeal allowed.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 5 OF 1913.

August 31, 1915.

Present:—Mr. Stuart, A. J. C., and Mr.

Syed Mohammad Ali, A. J. C.

Sheikh WALI MUHAMMAD AND
ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat DAULAT-UN-NISSA, DECEASED, AND AFTER HER DEATH MUNIR AHMAD,
AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation—Pauper-plaintiff paying Court-fee pending enquiry—Muhammadian Law—Will, acceptance of terms of, effect of—Estoppel.

Where a plaintiff applies in good faith for leave to sue as a pauper but, on his application being opposed, pays in the necessary Court-fee pending an enquiry into his pauperism, limitation runs against him only up to the date of filing the application and not up to the date of paying in the Court-fee [p 923, col. 2.]

Stuart Skinner v. William Orde, 2 A. 241; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 31 6 I. A. 126; 4 C. L. R. 331; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 627; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 68; Jankahary Sukul v. Janki Koer, 28 C. 427 and Amjad Ali v. Sarfaraz Ali, 4 O. C. 250, followed.

Abbasi Begam v. Nanhi Begam, 18 A. 206; A. W. N. (1896) 33; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 547, dissented from.

If a person entitled to succeed as an heir to a deceased Muhammadan who has left a Will, accepts the provisions of the Will and derives benefits thereunder, he is estopped from subsequently repudiating it and claiming the benefits of the Muhammadan Law of succession. [p 924, col. 1.]

Appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Rae Bareilly, dated the 23rd October 1912.

Syed Zahur Ahmad, for the Appellants.

JUDGMENT.—Appeals Nos. 5 and 9 of 1913* are concerned with questions of succession to the estate of a certain Mir Muhammad, who died on the 27th November 1899. It is agreed that Mir Muhammad was married to a certain Hakima Bibi, by whom he had two sons, Wali Muhammad and Amir Ahmad Raza, and that he eventually married a certain Daulat or Daulat un-nissa, by whom he had two legitimate sons called Munir Ahmad and Muhammad Raza and two legitimate daughters called Zubaida and Amina. He also had by Daulat-un-nissa four daughters called Zahida, Mukima, Wasila and Obedia. On the one side it is stated that these four daughters were born before their parents were married. On the other side it is stated that they were born in lawful wedlock. Mir Muhammad purchased a 4-annas share in the village of Ashrafpur in the name of his son Wali Muhammad, and he purchased a 3-annas 4 pies share in the same village in the name of his son Amir Ahmad Raza. Two years before the death of Mir Muhammad he executed a Will on 15th November 1897. Under the terms of this Will he confirmed the possession of Wali Muhammad and Amir Ahmad Raza over the shares in Ashrafpur which stood in their names and certain other plots of land which had been similarly purchased on their behalf. Mir Muhammad had purchased a 4 annas share in Ashrafpur in his own name. Under the terms of the Will he bequeathed a share of two annas, that is to say, half the share purchased in his own name to Munir Ahmad and the remaining share of two annas to Muhammad Raza. The interests in the village of Ashrafpur were divided in this manner. The remainder of his landed property, interests in mortgages, houses money and household goods, were divided under the terms of the Will into four equal shares to which his four sons succeeded. He deliberately excluded both his widows and his daughters from any share in the property, but he provided under the terms of the Will that the sons should support their mothers in suitable comfort, that the daughters should be supported in a similar manner from the income of the estate so long as they remained unmarried, that arrangement should be made for their marriages, and that a sum of Rs. 500 should be spent on the occasion of the marriage of each daughter. If the widows were unable to live happily in the family, provision was made for a small income to be settled upon them in event of their separation and if the daughters became widows or were ill-treated or neglected by their husbands, their brothers were to take them back into the family circle and support them or to give them a small allowance for their separate maintenance. The terms of this Will did not exclude the women of the family from reasonable benefit and, as we read them, left it an open question whether it would be for the greater benefit of a widow or a daughter to accept the advantages secured to her under the terms of the Will, or to reprobate its provisions and claim the share due to her under the Muhammadan Law. In the case of an intelligent and shrewd woman who could invest her capital, secure the proceeds of her investments, and manage her property to advantage, it would certainly have been better for her to reprobate the terms of the Will and insist on her rights under the Muhammadan Law of succession. But in the case of a woman who felt her incapacity to control a small capital, the prospect of securing a comfortable position for her life being placed beyond the possibility of want, and having nothing to fear from her own errors of judgment, might well be held sufficient reason for accepting the terms of the Will. Decision would largely depend on personal idiosyncrasies, and whereas one might be well advised in reprobating the terms of the Will, another might be equally well advised in approbating them. After the death of Mir Muhammad the whole of the family appear to have accepted his last dispositions and to have been perfectly contented to abide by them. But on the very last day within which such suits could be brought under the law of limitation, practically all the surviving members of the family instituted suits for their shares according to the provisions of the Muhammadan Law. It has been explained to us that the sons brought these suits as a precautionary measure, although they were satisfied with their position according to the provisions of the Will. They feared, however, that, if they did not bring these suits and the Will were found to be invalid, they might be deprived both of their rights under the Will and their rights under the law of succession. In the end most of the parties have arrived at arrangements which have satisfied them. Both two appeals have arisen against the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge who decided the case.

*See Infra page 926—Ed.

WALI MUHAMMAD v. DAULAT-UN-NISSA.

The first is appeal No. 5, which is brought by Wali Muhammad and Amir Ahmad Razi against the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge awarding Daulat or Daulat-un-nissa a share in the property under the provisions of the Muhammadan Law. After the institution of this appeal Daulat-un-nissa died and she is represented by her children as respondents. No appearance has been put in on their behalf and the appeal has been argued against them ex parte.

The second is appeal No. 9, which has been brought by Zahida Bibi, Mukima Bibi and Obeda Bibi, whose claims were dismissed by the learned Subordinate Judge on the finding that they were not born in lawful wedlock but had been born to Daulat-un-nissa before her marriage with Mir Muhammad. The facts so far stated are common to both appeals.

We now proceed to decide appeal No. 5 of 1913. The first point taken by the learned Counsel for the appellants is to the effect that the suit is barred by limitation. The plaintiff originally applied for leave to sue as pauper. Her application was opposed and before it was decided whether she was or was not a pauper, she paid in the necessary Court-fee. There has been no decision on her application for leave to sue as a pauper. On the date that she paid in the Court-fee the period of limitation for the suit had expired. Their Lordships of the Privy Council decided in the case of Stuart Skinner William Orde (1) that where a person, being at the time a pauper, petitioned under the provisions of Act VIII of 1859 for leave to sue as a pauper, but subsequently, pending an inquiry into his pauperism, obtained funds which enabled him to pay the Court-fee and his petition was allowed upon such payment to be numbered and registered as a plaint, his suit should be deemed to have been instituted from the date when he filed his pauper petition, and limitation ran against him only up to that time. In Ahbasi Begam v. Nanhi Begam (2) a Bench of the Allahabad

(1) 2 A. 241; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 31; 6 I. A. 126; 4 C. L. R. 331; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 627; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 685.

(2) 18 A. 208; A. W. N. (896) 33; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 843.

WALI MUHAMMAD v. DAULAT-UN-NISSA.

High Court [distinguished that decision and held that, where a person applied for leave to sue as a pauper for the recovery of certain dower alleged to be due to her and, upon her right to sue as a pauper being disputed by the persons proposed by her in her application for leave to sue as a pauper as defendants to the suit, paid into Court the Court fee necessary for a regular suit to recover the amount claimed, her suit was barred by limitation, because on the date when she paid in the Court-fee the period of limitation had expired. The learned Judges who decided this suit distinguished the ruling of their Lordships of the Privy Council on the grounds that the case of Stuart Skinner v. William Orde (1) was decided under a prior Code of Civil Procedure, and that it was decided apparently to some extent on the belief that there was a practice in the Courts in India which justified what had taken place in that case. They were of the opinion that the provisions of Act XIV of 1882 differed materially from the provisions of Act VIII of 1859 upon the point. The question came up again in the case of Janakdhary Sukul v. Janki Koer (3), before a Bench of the Calcutta High Court. The learned Judges who decided that case dissented from the view taken by the Allahabad High Court in the case of Abbasi Begam v. Nanhi Begam (2). They considered that the language of section 310 of Act VIII of 1859 was substantially the same as the language of section 413 of Act XIV of 1882, except that the words "unless precluded by the rules for the limitation suits" were excluded from section 413. The exclusion of those words in the latter Code appeared to the learned Judges not to strengthen the argument upon which the Allahabad decision proceeded. They decided that in such circumstances the period of limitation would run from the date of application for leave to sue as a pauper.

We have now to deal with the third Code. The provisions of section 413, Act XIV of 1882, have been reproduced in Order XXXIII, rule 15, of the present Code and there is no substantial difference between the words of the present Code and the words of the previous Code. We have examined the general provisions of Act VIII of 1859, upon the subject and we are satisfied that the law as it is upon the point in no way differs materially from the law as laid down in Act VIII of 1859. The principles laid down in Stuart Skinner v. William Orde (1) govern the present case. These principles were applied in the case of Anjad Ali v. Sarfaraz Ali (4). Their Lordships laid down that if there had been no fraud on the part of the plaintiff in filing his petition to be allowed to sue as a pauper, the limitation should run from the date of filing the petition to sue as a pauper. We find that in this case the plaintiff committed no fraud, and that her application to sue as a pauper was made in good faith. We agree with the decision in Janakdhary Sukul v. Janki Koer (3) and decide the point of limitation against the appellants.

The next point raised is that Musammât Daulat-un-nissa, having accepted the provisions of the Will, is debarred from asserting her rights under the Muhammadan Law of succession. We find on the evidence that Musammât Daulat-un-nissa became guardian of her sons Munir Ahmad and Muhammad Raza, who were then minors, and that, as guardian of her sons, she accepted the benefits of the Will on their behalf. She remained guardian from 1899 to 5th September 1904, and on the evidence she received the income of their portion of the estate on their behalf, and shared in the benefits of that income. Further she is proved to have lived at the expense of her sons, that is to say, to have lived out of the income of the estate from the date of the death of Mir Muhammad up to the date of her own death. If she had contested the Will both on her own behalf and on behalf of her sons, she would have reduced the shares of her sons to their shares under the Muhammadan Law, that is to say, they would have obtained a share of 7/20ths in the total property. Instead of this they obtained

(3) 28 C. 427.

(4) 4 Q. Q. 250.

GHASITA SINGH v. BHAGMANI KOER.

a share of 4 annas out of 11 annas and 4 pies in the village of Ashrafpur and a share of one half in most of the remaining property. If she reprobated the Will on behalf of herself and her sons, they ran the risk of obtaining less than 4 annas in the 11-annas and 4-pies share in Ashrafpur and nothing in the other plots purchased in the names of Wali Muhammad and Amir Ahmad Raza. For the Courts might have decided that the 4-annas share purchased in the name of Wali Muhammad was his separate property, and that the share of 3 annas and 4 pies purchased in the name of Amir Ahmad Raza was his separate property and that neither of those shares came into the succession. They might have decided similarly with regard to the other plots purchased in the names of these persons. If such were the case, her sons would have obtained a share of 7/20ths out of 4 annas in Ashrafpur instead of the whole of the 4-annas share and in any circumstances they would have obtained only 7/20ths instead of one-half in most of the remainder of the property. Thus her acceptance of the benefits of the Will may well have conferred a substantial benefit upon her minor sons. That benefit would have been greater or less according to the decision of the Courts as to the title of the shares in Ashrafpur and in certain plots purchased in the names of Wali Muhammad and Amir Ahmad Raza. The Subordinate Judge decided the point against Wali Muhammad and Amir Ahmad Raza, but his decision is open to question; but owing to the view that we take it is not necessary to decide the point. In any case her minor sons gained by accepting the terms of the Will and she as their guardian accepted that benefit on their behalf. Further as we have already noted in a previous portion of this judgment, she obtained a substantial return for foregoing her rights under the law of succession. She obtained a secured income, a secured position in the family, and a sheltered life up to the date of her death. In those circumstances we do not agree with the learned Subordinate Judge that she did not assent to the provisions of the Will. We find that she accepted the provisions of the Will not only on behalf of her minor sons but also on her own behalf, and that it was not open to her on the date on which she instituted the suit to reprobate the terms of the Will and claim the benefits of the Muhammadan Law of succession. In those circumstances her suit should have been dismissed for this reason alone.

We accordingly allow this appeal and direct that the suit of Daulat-un-nissa shall stand dismissed. Her heirs shall be liable to pay the costs of Daulat-un-nissa in the lower Court. The appellants are allowed their costs in both Courts to be obtained from such assets as may have been left in the hands of the heirs of Daulat-un-nissa from her estate.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 591 OF 1916.

December 5, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad.

GHASITA SINGH—APPELLANT

versus

Musammât BHAGMANI KOER AND ANOTHER
—RESPONDENTS.

Ejectment, suit for—Plaintiff to prove his title—Burden of proof.

In a suit for ejectment a plaintiff must succeed on the strength of his own title and cannot rely upon the weakness of the defendant's title. [p. 92f, col 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Sub-Judge, Arrah, dated the 14th March 1916, affirming that of the Additional Munsif, Sasaram, dated the 23rd December 1914.

Mr. Sarat Chandra Mukerji, for the Appellant.

Rai Tribhuvan Narain Sahni, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the appellant for declaration of his title to and for recovery of possession over a house. The house in dispute belonged originally to one Lila Sonar. He sold it to Musammât Pooyia on 23th March 1893, by a registered sale-deed. The plaintiff alleges that Musammât Pooyia had purchased the house out of the funds of her father Hardeyal and not out of her husband's money, and that he purchased the house from Musammot Pooyia by a kobala dated January the 2nd, 1912. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant No. 1 is occupying the house as a tenant of the plaintiff on a rent of 4 annas a month and had no right to the house beyond that of a tenant and that after the death of Musammot Pooyia the defendant No. 1 is asserting her own claim to the house and is refusing to vacate it. Musammot Pooyia was the widow of one Madho Sonar. Musammot Bhagmania, defendant No. 1, is the second wife of the said Madho Sonar. Defendant No. 2, Ram Dass Sonar, is the minor son of Madho Sonar by his second wife defendant No. 1. They are in possession of the house.

GHASITA SINGH v. BHAGMANI KOER.

On the above allegations the plaintiff brought this suit in the Court of the Munsif of Sasaram to recover possession of the house from the defendants. The defendants resisted the claim of the plaintiff on the ground that the house in dispute did not belong to Musammot Pooyia, the vendor of the plaintiff, that it was purchased by Madho Sonar with his own funds in Pooyia's name and that Musammot Pooyia had no right to sell the house to the plaintiff and the plaintiff's kobala of the 2nd of January 1912 was executed without any consideration. The defendants further claim to be in possession of the house as heirs of Madho Sonar.

The Munsif decided issue No. 7 against the plaintiff. This issue is: "Whether the kobala dated the 2nd of January 1912, in favour of the plaintiff is made for consideration or not, and whether it was good and binding or not?" The learned Sub-Judge in appeal has accepted this finding of fact of the first Court and it must be accepted as conclusive by this Court in second appeal. The plaintiff has, therefore, failed to prove his title based on the sale-deed of the 2nd of January 1912 executed by Musammot Pooyia, and cannot succeed in a suit for recovery of possession. It is, however, argued that as the first Court has held that Musammot Pooyia was not the benamidar of Madho Sonar, the husband of Musammot Pooyia, the plaintiff's vendor, which finding has not been rebutted by the learned first Appellate Court, the property in dispute was the stridhan of Musammot Pooyia and hence the defendants have no right in the property as not being the heirs to the stridhan of Pooyia. This contention is unsound.

In the first place the findings of the Munsif do not warrant a conclusion that the property in dispute is the stridhan of Musammot Pooyia. The Munsif held that the consideration money of the kobala was paid by Madho Sonar, the husband of Musammot Pooyia, and not by Musammot Pooyia or her father Hardeyal, as alleged by the plaintiff. The fact that Musammot Pooyia was not the benamidar of Madho Sonar does not go to show that it was the stridhan of Musammot Pooyia. It is neither the case of the plaintiff nor is there any finding of fact that the money with which the property was purchased, or that the property purchased, was given as an absolute gift to Musammot Pooyia by her husband. All that the Munsif says is that "it is undisputed law that a husband's gift of immoveable property to a wife does not make the said property to be her stridhan." This is a statement of law about which the Munsif may be right or wrong. But there is no finding anywhere that there was any absolute gift to the wife. The house was purchased by Musammot Pooyia with the money of the husband. She is dead. The house has, therefore, been inherited by the defendants, the widow and the son of Madho Sonar, and they are rightly in possession of the same.

In the second place, even if it be stridhan of Musammot Pooyia the plaintiff, who does not claim to be the heir of Musammot Pooyia, cannot evict the defendants, howsoever weak their title to the property may be. In a suit for ejectment the plaintiff must succeed on the strength of his own title and cannot rely upon the weakness of the defendants' title. It has concurrently been held by both the Courts below that the plaintiff has failed to prove his title based on the kobala set up by him. The suit has been rightly dismissed.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

ZAHIDA BIBI v. WALI MUHAMMAD.
 OUDEH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 9 OF 1913.

August 31, 1915.

Present:—Mr. Stuart, A. J. C., and Mr. Mohammad Ali, A. J. C.

Musammāt ZAHIDA BIBI AND OTHERS—
 PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

WALI MUHAMMAD AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Muhammadian Law—Legitimacy—Acknowledgment of parentage—Treatment,

It is open to a Muhammadan to legitimatise an illegitimate child by acknowledgment of his paternity, but to establish such legitimation it is necessary to prove an intention evidenced by a formal and deliberate act. [p. 932, col. 1.]

Khajah Hidayat Oollah v. Rai Jan Khanum, 3 M. I. A. 295, 1 Sar. P. C. J. 282; 18 E. R. 510; Mahomed Baiker Hoossain Khan Bahadoor v. Shurfoon Nissa Begum, 8 M. I. A. 136; 3 W. R. (P. C.) 37; 1 Suth. P. C. J. 400; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 728; 19 E. R. 481, Rook Begum v. Shahzadah Walagowhur Shah, 3 W. R. 187, Ashrafodd Dowlah Ahmed Hossein Khan Bahadoor v. Hyder Hossein Khan, 11 M. I. A. 4; 7 W. R. 1; (P. C.); 1 Suth. P. C. J. 659; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 223; 20 E. R. 37; J. P. Wise v. Sunduloonissa Chowdranee, 11 M. I. A. 177; 7 W. R. 13 (P. C.); 1 Suth. P. C. J. 667; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 249; 20 E. R. 18, Bibee Nujeeboonissa v. Bibee Zumeerun, 11 W. R. 426; Mahammad Azmat Ali Khan v. Lalli Begum, 8 C. 422; 9 I. A. 4; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 310; 6 Ind. Jur. 201; 17 P. R. 1882; 4 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 269; Sudakat Hossein v. Mahomed Yusuf, 10 C. 663; 11 I. A. 31; 8 Ind. Jur. 212; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 519; 5 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 446; Muhammad Allahdad Khan v. Muhammad Ismail Khan, 10 A. 289, 6 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 193; Abdul Razak v. Aga Mahomed Jaffer Bindanim, 21 C. 666; 21 I. A. 56; 4 M. L. J. 131; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 389; 10 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 1074 and Ghazanfar Ali Khan v. Kaniz Fatima, 6 Ind. Cas. 674; 32 A. 345; 14 C. W. N. 690 (P. C.); 7 A. L. J. 579; 11 O. L. J. 619; 12 Bom. L. R. 447; 8 M. L. T. 59; 20 M. L. J. 579; 13 O. C. 170, considered.

Where in a case it was found on the facts that a Muhammadan had seduced a maid-servant, who had grown up in his household and was considerably loved by him, had begotten children from her, and had then repaired the wrong by marrying her; that he had given food and shelter to those children; and that in a Will subsequently executed by him he had referred to them simply as his daughters and provided for their maintenance, marriages and support:

Held, that from the above circumstances it could not be inferred that he had intended to legitimatise those children. [p. 932, col. 2.]

Appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Rae Bareilly, dated the 23rd October 1912.

Mirza Sami Ullah Beg, for the Appellants.

Syed Zakur Ahmad, for Respondents
 Nos. 1 and 3 to 6.

JUDGMENT.—The circumstances in which this appeal has arisen are detailed in our decision of to-day's date in First Civil Appeal No. 5 of 1913* and need not be repeated. We have to consider, whether the learned Subordinate Judge arrived rightly at the decision that Zahida, Wasila, Mukima and Obeda were born to Daulat or Daulat-un-nissa and Mir Muhammad before the two latter became legally married, and are thus illegitimate.

The story told on behalf of the contesting respondents is that Mir Muhammad, who was a retired Government official of respectable standing and of some means and who was married to a lady called Hakima Bibi, took into his house about 1877 a girl of the Bhat caste who had been left an unprotected orphan, that she subsequently became converted to the Muhammadan religion and received the name of Daulat, that she worked in the house as a domestic servant and attracted the notice of Mir Muhammad who made her his mistress, and that as a result of this connection the four women whose names have already been enumerated were born to the pair. According to the story, the friends and neighbours of Mir Muhammad were scandalized on account of his connection with the servant woman, and as a result of their protests he subsequently married her by the forms of the Muhammadan religion. After their marriage two sons and two daughters were born to them. This is the story as told by the contesting respondents.

The appellants' case is that their mother was not a Bhatin, that she was not an orphan who was taken into the house out of charity but that she was the daughter of a respectable Sheikh, that she was married to Mir Muhammad over forty years ago, and that all of them were born in wedlock. Evidence has been called to support both stories, and the learned Subordinate Judge found that the evidence of the witnesses called to prove the story told by the defendants-respondents established the truth of their allegations. We proceed to examine this evidence.

[After discussing the evidence produced by the parties, the learned Judicial Commissioners proceeded as follow:—]

*See sheikh Wali Muhammad v. Musammāt Daulat-un-nissa, 37 Ind. Cas. 921; 3 O. L. J. 647—Ed.

ZAHIDA RIBI v. WALI MUHAMMAD.

We have now examined the evidence produced by the respondents and the evidence produced by the appellants, and we have no hesitation in agreeing with the learned Subordinate Judge that the evidence adduced by the respondents establishes the truth of their story, and that the evidence adduced by the appellants does not establish the truth of their story. The learned Subordinate Judge has laid stress on a document (Exhibit No. A 108), which purports to be the draft of a Will made by Mir Muhammad before his marriage with Daulat, in which he describes Daulat as his mistress and refers to the appellants and their deceased sister as his illegitimate children. There is a mass of evidence which we see no reason to discredit, which proves that this document is in the handwriting of Mir Muhammad and it was apparently found among his papers by the respondents. It is not signed by him, but its contents nevertheless go in some way to support the truth of the respondents' story. Apart from that fact, however, we are satisfied on the oral evidence that Daulat was originally a famine orphan, that she resided in the house of Mir Muhammad as a servant, that an illicit connection arose between her and her employer, that the three appellants and their deceased sister were born from that connection, and that Mir Muhammad married Daulat after they had been born. This is our finding on the facts.

The learned Counsel for the appellants has argued that the circumstances that Mir Muhammad treated these four girls as his daughters, that he arranged for the marriages of some of them to men of reasonable respectability, that he provided for their maintenance in his Will, and that he referred them in his Will as his daughters, are sufficient to establish their legitimacy.

With regard to the question of treatment, in so far as it is shown by the circumstances that Mir Muhammad provided these women with food and shelter, that he arranged for their marriages and that he made some provision for their support in his Will, we find that there is nothing in those incidents to show their legitimacy. On the facts that we have found Mir Muhammad was not likely to have treated the daughters born to him from his wife before marriage in a manner different to the manner in which he would have treated daughters born in wedlock. His connection with Daulat was not a mere casual intimacy. He evidently had considerable affection for her. She had grown up in his household. He seduced her, begot children from her, and then repaired the wrong by marrying her. The fact that he subsequently treated her in an honourable manner and gave her the rights and privileges of a wife would go to show that he would extend a similar treatment to the children born before wedlock, and nothing can be derived from the circumstance that he treated these women in this manner to show that they are legitimate.

The difficult point of acknowledgment in Muhammadan Law has been the subject of many decisions of their Lordships of the Privy Council. The first decision to which we refer is the case of 1844, Khajah Hiluyt Ollah v. Rai Jan Khanum (1). Here their Lordships found that the law as laid down by Mr. Macnaghten quoted at pages 317 and 318 is stated correctly. Their conclusion may be summarised in their own words at page 318: "The effect of that appears to be, that where a child has been born to a father of a mother, where there has been not a mere casual concubinage, but a more permanent connection, and where there is no insurmountable obstacle to such a marriage, then, according to the Muhammadan Law, the presumption is in favour of such marriage having taken place." At page 323 they stated: "With reference, then, to the law, as laid down by Mr. Macnaghten, and which appears to be acknowledged at the Bar to be law: without going into the question of the oral evidence, whether there was an express acknowledgment of the child by Fyz Ali Khan, as the son or not, there seems to be that which at least is tantamount to oral evidence of any declaration, because there is a consecutive course of treatment, both of the mother and of the child, for a period of between seven and eight years, under circumstances, in which it appears to their Lordships to be next to impossible that such a mode of treatment would have been continued, except from the presumption of the cohabitation, and of the son being the issue of the loins of Fyz Ali Khan." Their Lordships laid down in this case that, where a Muhammadan man and woman had been living together as man and wife by common repute, where the woman had been treated by the man as his wife, where her son had been treated as his son, and where there was no insurmountable obstacle on the evidence to a presumption that marriage had taken place, the Courts could rightly presume the existence of such a marriage under the Muhammadan Law. But obviously if there had been direct evidence that a marriage had taken place, and that the child had been born before the date of such marriage, there would be no presumption as to that child's legitimacy.

(1) 3 M. I. A. 295; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 282; 18 E. R. 510

ZAHIDA BIBI v. WALI MUHAMMAD.

In the next case, that of Mahomed Barker. Hossain Khan Bahadur v. Shurfon Nissa Begum (2), their Lordships of the Privy Council in 1860 decided that according to the Muhammadan Law the legitimacy or legitimation of a child of Muhammadan parents may properly be presumed or inferred from circumstances without proof, or at least without any direct proof, either of a marriage between the parents, or of any formal act of legitimation.

A Bench of the Calcutta High Court decided in 1865 in Rook Begum v. Shahzadah Walagowhar Shah (3) that according to the Muhammadan Law a public acknowledgment of paternity will of itself raise a presumption of marriage between the person who makes it and the mother of the child, without the father specifically connecting his paternity with any particular woman. To rebut this presumption, the onus of proving the impossibility of the marriage is on the other side.

We now come to a very important case, that of Ashrufood Dowlah Ahmed Hossein Khan Bahadur v. Hyder Hossein Khan (4). This case was decided in 1866. The facts were as follows. Hyder Hossein Khan claimed to be the son of Wazir Ameenood Dowlah and a woman who had entered the service of the Wazir as a cook in the days when he held the comparatively unimportant post of darogha. A nuta marriage had admittedly taken place between the Wazir and this woman at some period. The question for decision was whether Hyder Hossein Khan had been born before or after the date of that marriage. Their Lordships said at page 111: "It would be an easy matter to legitimize a child conceived before marriage by withholding proof of the time of marriage and resting on an inference from the marriage itself," and they found that although it was proved that Hyder Hossein Khan was the son of the Wazir and this woman, and although the Wazir and this woman had eventually become man and wife, it was not established that Hyder Hossein Khan was the legitimate son of the Wazir. The facts are similar to the facts in the present case, with one exception. Their Lordships found distinctly that there had been no acknowledgment by the Wazir of Hyder Hossein Khan as his son. There was proof of treatment and, to use their Lordships' own words (page 119), "there is proof of treatment strong enough to prove legitimacy in an ordinary case, but of treatment not inconsistent with the status of a son conceived before marriage." Thus the decision in that case would appear to tell against the claim of the appellants. But the learned Counsel for the appellants lays great stress upon certain words used by their Lordships at page 113, "The presumption of legitimacy from marriage follows the bed, and whilst the marriage lasts, the child of the woman is taken to be the husband's child; but this presumption follows the bed, and is not antedated by relation. An antenuptial child is illegitimate. A child born out of wedlock is illegitimate; if acknowledged, he acquires the status of legitimacy. When, therefore, a child really illegitimate by birth becomes legitimated, it is by force of an acknowledgment, express or implied, directly proved or presumed. These presumptions are inferences of fact. They are built on the foundations of the law, and do not widen the grounds of legitimacy by confounding concubinage and marriage. The child of marriage is legitimate as soon as born. The child of a concubine may become legitimate by treatment as legitimate. Such treatment would furnish evidence of acknowledgment. A Court would not be justified, though dealing with this subject of legitimacy, in making any presumptions

(2) 8 M. L. A. 136; 3 W. R. (P. C.) 27; 1 Suth. P. C. J. 40; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 725; 19 E. R. 481.

(3) 3 W. R. 127.

(4) 11 M. L. A. 94; 7 W. R. 1 (P. C.); 1 Suth. P. C. J. 659; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 223; 20 E. R. 37.

ZAHIDA BIBI v. WALI MUHAMMAD.

of fact which a rational view of the principles of evidence would exclude. The presumption in favour of marriage and legitimacy must rest on sufficient grounds, and cannot be permitted to override overbalancing proofs, whether direct or presumptive. The case of Mahomed Bauker Hoossain Khan Bahadoor v. Shurfoon Nissa Begum (2) affirms this principle."

We shall discuss later the rule that their Lordships laid down here.

The next case brought to our notice is a decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in 1867 in the case of J. P. Wise v. Sunduloonissa Chowdranee (5). This decision does not lay down any new principle. It lays down the principle already recognised in the previous decisions that, even in the absence of the proof of marriage, the evidence afforded by the conduct of the parties and by the treatment of the alleged wife and children is sufficient to establish the factum of a marriage by a presumption which becomes final being not rebutted.

The next decision is one of 1869 by a Bench of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Bibee Nujeeboonissa v. Bibee Zumeerun (6). In this decision Kemp, J., laid down: "According to the Muhammadan Law, a child born out of wedlock, if acknowledged, acquires the status of legitimacy." He gives no authority for this view but was probably following the decision in Ashrufood Dowlah Ahmed Hossein Khan Bahadoor v. Hyder Hossein Khan (4).

The next case is the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in 1881, the case of Mahammad Azmat Ali Khan v. Lalli Begum (7). In this it is laid down that the acknowledgment and recognition of children by a Muhammadan as his sons, giving them the status of sons capable of inheriting as being of legitimate birth, may, without proof of his express acknowledgment of them, be inferred from his treatment of such children, provided that certain conditions negating this relationship are absent; and that the question whether such acknowledgment should be presumed or not, depends on the circumstances of each particular case. The decision in this case does not touch directly upon the points before us, but it is valuable as showing their Lordships' interpretation of the passages in the case reported as Ashrufood Dowlah Ahmed Hossein Khan Bahadoor v. Hyder Hossein Khan (4). At page 433 their Lordships stated with reference to that decision: "The facts and questions in that case were very complicated, and some of the passages in the judgment referred to by the Judges below can only be understood by referring to the questions to which they were addressed."

The next case is one of 1883—Sadakat Hossein v. Mahomed Yusuf (8). The head-note of the report states as the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council that the acknowledgment and recognition of a "natural" son by a Muhammadan as his son gives him the status of a son capable of inheriting as a legitimate son; unless certain conditions exist. We do not find that this head-note accurately summarizes their Lordships' conclusions. In that case a certain Selim, who was beyond question the actual son of Amir Hossein by a woman known as Domni, had been recognized by Amir Hossein, so as to give him the status of a son capable of inheriting. It was set up that at the time that Selim was born Domni was the married wife of a man called Jummun, and, if Domni were the married wife of Jummun, Amir Hossein could not possibly have been married to Domni. Their Lordships found that it was not established that Jummun had ever been married to Domni, and, therefore, there was no insuperable bar to the presumption of a marriage between Domni and Amir Hossein before the birth of Selim. They did not find that Selim was the natural son of Amir Hossein, using the word "natural" in the sense of illegitimate. Selim was the son of Amir Hossein and Domni. There was no evidence as to whether the parties had or had not been married. It was an open question. They might have

(5) 11 M. I. A. 177; 7 W. R. (P. C.) 13; 1 Suth. P. C. J. 667; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 249; 20 E. R. 68.

(6) 11 W. R. 426.

(7) 8 C. 422; 9 I. A. 8; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 310; 6 Ind. Jur. 201; 17 P. R. 1882; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 260.

(8) 10 C. 663; 11 I. A. 31; 8 Ind. Jur. 212; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 519; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 446.

ZAHIDA BIBI v. WALI MUHAMMAD.

been married or they might not have been married, and from the presumption that Selim had been treated by Amir Hossein as his son their Lordships drew the inference that a marriage had taken place between his parents. But they did not lay down the proposition that a person who is proved to be the illegitimate son of a Muhammadan can be legitimated by his father by a subsequent acknowledgment.

In 1888 the whole question was considered very carefully by a Bench of the Allahabad High Court in Muhammad Allahdad Khan v. Muhammad Ismail Khan (9). Straight, J., discussed in detail the proposition whether the acknowledgment of a son renders that person the legitimate son of the acknowledger under the Muhammadan Law, although the person acknowledged was born out of wedlock. With special reference to the passage in Ashrufud Dowlah Ahmed Hossein Khan Bahadoor v. Hyder Hossein Khan (4), which we have already quoted at length, at page 317 Straight, J., interpreted the law as follows:—

"Birth during wedlock, that is to say, legitimate birth, necessarily confers a right to inherit; illegitimate birth, that is, without wedlock subsisting between the father and mother at the date of the child's begetting, confers no such right. But where there is no proof of legitimate birth or illegitimate birth, and the paternity of a child is unknown in the sense that no specific person is shown to have been his father, then his acknowledgment by another who claims him as his son, according to the authorities I have quoted from, affords a conclusive presumption that the child acknowledged is the legitimate child of the acknowledger and places him in that category."

The point was discussed with greater elaboration by Mahmood, J., in a separate judgment. The same passage in Ashrufud Dowlah Ahmed Hossein Khan Bahadoor v. Hyder Hossein Khan (4), to which reference has already been made, was considered by that learned Judge, who held at page 333 that it must not be understood loosely in the sense of being an abstract enunciation of the law applicable to all cases. He goes on to say:—"Illegitimacy under the Muhammadan Law, as indeed under other systems, arises from the absence of a lawful matrimonial relation between the parents of the child; and if illegitimacy which is proved and placed beyond doubt were no impediment to an acknowledgment, there would be no logical reason why the offspring of an adulterous or incestuous intercourse should not acquire the status of legitimate children when acknowledged by the father.

"After having carefully considered the various rulings of the Lords of the Privy Council in the cases to which I have referred, I am of opinion that their Lordships never intended to go the length of laying down the rule that a child who is proved to be illegitimate, either in consequence of marriage between his parents being disproved, or being unlawful, could be legitimated by an acknowledgment. All the cases which their Lordships had before them were cases in which the question of marriage itself was a matter in dispute and involved in obscurity with reference to the legitimacy of the child. In other words, those cases were such as left either the fact or the exact time of the alleged marriage a matter of uncertainty, that is, neither proved nor disproved; and their Lordships in dealing with those cases applied the principles of the Muhammadan Law of acknowledgment of parentage with reference to legitimacy for purposes of inheritance."

The learned Judge enlarged further upon the point, and it is only necessary to quote one or two passages from the remainder of his judgment. He says later:—"Nor can such children be made legitimate by any kind of acknowledgment where the illegitimacy is a proved and established fact. The Muhammadan Law of acknowledgment of parentage with its legitimating effect has no reference whatsoever to cases in which the illegitimacy of the child is proved and established, either by reason of a lawful union between the parents of the child being impossible (as in the case of an incestuous intercourse or an adulterous connection), or by reason of marriage necessary to render the child legitimate being disproved. The doctrine relates only to cases where either the fact of the marriage itself or the exact time of its occurrence with reference to the legitimacy of the acknowledged child is not proved in the sense of the law as distinguished from disproved. In other words, the doctrine applies only to cases of uncertainty as to legitimacy, and in such cases acknowledgment has its effect, but that effect always proceeds upon the assumption of a lawful union between the parents of the acknowledged child."

ZAHIDA BIBI v. WALI MUHAMMAD.

The next case is that of Abdul Razak v. Aga Mahomed Jaffer Bindanim (10) decided in 1893. In that case a Muhammadan had lived with a Burmese woman and a son was born to them. This Muhammadan referred to the child as his son on more than one occasion. Now there was no insuperable obstacle to the marriage of this Muhammadan with the Burmese woman. Their Lordships of the Privy Council said at page 678: "The learned Counsel for the respondents did not deny that Abdul Hadi might have married Mah Thai, as no doubt he might have done if she had embraced Islam, nor did they contend that the intercourse between Abdul Hadi and Mah Thai was of such a character as to prevent the possible legitimation of the offspring. Their contention was that there was no acknowledgment in the legal and proper sense of the word, although there may have been an admission of paternity."

"The learned Counsel for the appellant cited various texts, which, taken apart from the context, would seem to show that any admission of paternity, though made casually and not intended to have a serious effect, would be sufficient to confer the status of legitimacy. It is not in their Lordships' opinion necessary to examine these ancient authorities, or to inquire how far they are applicable to a state of society very different from that which existed at the time when they were promulgated. Their Lordships are bound by the decision of this Board which is clear upon the point. The question arose in the case of Ashrufud Dowlah Ahmed Hossein Khan Bahadoor v. Hyder Hossein Khan (4). There it was contended that the claimant, who was defendant in the suit and respondent ent on the appeal, had been acknowledged by his putative father. The fact of acknowledgment was denied by the appellant, and a deed of repudiation was set up, in which the father expressly repudiated the claimant as his son. An issue was framed in these terms: 'Has the deed of repudiation the effect of cancelling previous acknowledgment of defendant's legitimacy, if such were made?' In the course of their judgment (p. 104 of the report) their Lordships comment upon that issue. It was, they said, 'very correctly framed.' It substitutes, for the ambiguous word 'sonship' which might include an illegitimate son, the word 'legitimacy', and uses the word 'acknowledgment' in its legal sense under the Muhammadan Law, of acknowledgment of antecedent right established by the acknowledgment on the acknowledger, that is, in the sense of a recognition, not simply of sonship, but of 'legitimacy as a son.' It is clear that it is in that sense that the term 'acknowledgment' is used in a later passage of the judgment which has often been cited, where their Lordships say, 'a child born out of wedlock is illegitimate; if acknowledged, he acquires the status of legitimacy. When, therefore, a child really illegitimate by birth becomes legitimated, it is by force of an acknowledgment, express or implied, directly proved or presumed.'

(10) 21 C. 666; 21 I. A. 56; 4 M. L. J. 131; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 389; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1074.

"It cannot be contended that there was any acknowledgment of legitimacy in the present case. The so-called acknowledgment, even if the evidence on the part of the appellant is accepted as true in every particular, comes to nothing more than an admission of paternity, which was not intended to have the serious effect of conferring the status of legitimacy. A witness is produced who says he accompanied Abdul Hadi on his second visit to Mangi, and that Abdul Hadi told him that he was going to see his son. And there is some other evidence to the like effect..... Assuming, however, every word that is said about it to be perfectly true, the evidence falls very far short of such an acknowledgment as would confer the status of legitimacy upon an illegitimate child."

This decision appears to determine finally the point raised by the Allahabad High Court in Muhammad Allah-lad Khan v.

CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA v. NRITYA KALI DASSEY.

Muhammad Ismail Khan (9) and to lay down that even if a child of a Muhammadan father be proved to be illegitimate, he can be legitimated at the will of his father by a subsequent acknowledgment of the child as his legitimate child. But it is necessary that such an acknowledgment should be of a formal nature made by the person who makes it with a full appreciation of its consequences.

There is one more decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in a case which was decided in 1910, that is, the case of Qhazanfar Ali Khan v. Kaniz Fatima (11). In that case a Muhammadan had cohabited for many years with a woman who had originally been a common prostitute and a son was born from this connection. On more than one occasion the father had stated that the woman was his wife. On one occasion he had in the course of a deposition in a suit stated that she was his wife, but it was found that he had done so because he was ashamed to say in open Court that he was keeping a prostitute as his mistress. Their Lordships in this case considered the acknowledgment of no effect, the evidence to be derived from prolonged cohabitation of no value, the fact that two of the daughters of this woman were married to respectable men insufficient to prove legitimacy, and found the son to be illegitimate.

This concludes the authorities, and after their consideration we find that their Lordships of the Privy Council have decided that it is open to a Muhammadan to legitimate an illegitimate child, but that to establish such legitimation it is necessary to prove an intention evidenced by a formal and deliberate act. The only evidence of acknowledgment in the present case is that Mir Muhammad referred to these women in his Will as his daughters. He did not refer to them as his legitimate daughters. He did not do anything more than provide for their maintenance, their marriages and their support. He would have been obliged as a man of honour to provide for their maintenance, marriages and support, even if they were illegitimate, and there is nothing in the circumstances of the case from which it could be inferred that he intended to legitimate them.

It thus having been proved to our satisfaction that the appellants and their deceased sister were born out of wedlock, and that they had never been legitimated by any subsequent act on the part of their father, this appeal fails. It is dismissed accordingly. The appellants will pay their own costs and those of the contesting respondents.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

RULE Nisi No. 672 of 1916.

November 27, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice D. Chatterjee and
Mr. Justice Walmsley.

THE CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA—RESPONDENT—PETITIONER

versus

Srimati NRITYA KALI DASSEY—

APPELLANT—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Calcutta Municipal Act (III B. C. of 1899), ss. 152, 158, 160—Notice for re-valuation—Fresh notice, necessity of, when altering valuation from one basis to another.

Section 158 of the Calcutta Municipal Act provides only for the issue of a notice for re-valuation and there is no provision in the Act for the issue of a fresh notice when, after hearing objections under section 160, the Chairman alters the valuation already made by him. [p. 934, col. 2.]

Where, therefore, the Chairman of the Calcutta Municipal Corporation, after issuing a notice under section 158 of the Calcutta Municipal Act for the re-valuation of a holding on the basis of the cost of construction and value of land instead of on the rental value, made a certain valuation, and then after hearing objections of the owner, taken under section 160 of the Act, altered the valuation on the rental basis:

Held, that the notice given under section 158 was sufficient and not defective. [p. 934, col. 2.]

Rule against the order of the Court of Small Causes at Sealdah in Municipal Appeal No. 1 of 1916.

FACTS material to the report will appear from the following judgment of the Small Cause Court at Sealdah, to which an appeal was preferred by the opposite party against the valuation made by the Deputy Chairman of the Calcutta Corporation:—

(11) 6 Ind. Cas. 674; 32 A. 345; 14 C. W. N. 690 (P. C.); 7 A. L. J. 579; 11 O. L. J. 649; 12 Bom. L. R. 417; 8 M. L. T. 59; 20 M. L. J. 579; 13 O. C. 170.

CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA v. NRITYA KALI DASSEY.

"This appeal is in respect of premises No. 101, Monobur Pookur Road, Ward No. 21. The existing assessment was on an annual valuation of Rs. 245, and it was raised to Rs. 476 on the ground of rental value. The appellant objects to the same on two grounds, viz.—(1) that the notice under section 158 is bad in law, as the ground on which the increase was made had not been stated in the same as required under the section, and (2) that under section 152 there could be no fresh valuation and assessment in March 1916 after the valuation of 1910-11.

The first assessment was in September 1903, when the annual value was fixed Rs. 118. The annual value in 1909 was increased to Rs. 332, but there was an appeal to this Court, and it was found that the increased valuation could not stand. The amount was then reduced to Rs. 245. The time of expiry of the period of six years for that valuation was the 2nd quarter of 1915-16.

The next valuation was on 16th March 1916 and this objection is with regard to the same. On a careful consideration of the section, I am of opinion that the valuation made was in proper time and it is quite clear that the Act authorises the Chairman to revise the valuation and assessment at the end of six years, the time of expiry for the Ward No. 21 being 30th September every sixth year from the year 1903. Thus the Corporation was, in my opinion, quite justified in revising the valuation after September 1915, the time when the valuation of 1910-11 expired [vide section 152, clause 2 (c), of Act III of 1899].

The appellant, I think, should succeed on the other ground, and my finding on the point is that the notice under section 158 was not good. The increase was made on the ground of rental value, but the same was not stated in the notice as required. So the increased valuation must be cancelled, and cannot stand.

The appeal is allowed, but the parties shall bear their own costs."

Dr. Dwarkanath Mitter, for the Petitioner.—The Chairman of the Municipality gave notice under section 158 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, No second notice is provided by the same Act. The first notice was issued under section 158 of the said Act, under which the Chairman wanted to raise the assessment on the residential basis. The Deputy Chairman heard objections and based the valuation on the rental basis. The opposite party ventures to contend that as no fresh notice was issued as to valuation on the rental basis, the suit cannot stand. But under the law no fresh notice is necessary. (Reads section 158.) The opposite party objected under section 160. (Reads sections 160, 161, 162 of the Calcutta Municipal Act.) The Judge says that fresh notice should be given as the Deputy Chairman did not issue fresh notice under section 158. The Judge is obviously wrong, as the Act does not contemplate doing that. Taking the commonsense view of things, a second notice after the alteration to rental basis would be quite useless.

Babu Gunada Charan Sen (for Babu Mohini Mohun Chatterji), for the Opposite Party.—The grounds for the increment of assessment are given in section 151 of the Calcutta Municipal Act. The assessment can be made only on one of these two grounds; Section 158 lays down that the Chairman shall give special notice to owners stating the ground or grounds on which he makes the increase. This notice mentions ground 'b' of section 151 and not ground 'a'. I was asked to meet the case against one under 'b' and not under 'a'. The Chairman does not go into the evidence to alter the valuation to the rental basis. The notice required me to offer evidence, oral or documentary. The Chairman determined the principle in my favour, and altered the residential basis to the rental basis, but did not enter into details.

Dr. Mitter.—He was asked to adduce evidence in favour of his objection.

[CHATTERJEE, J.—If evidence was not produced, then what?]

Dr. Mitter.—The Chairman did not believe the evidence and decided in his own way.

Babu G. U. Sen.—If a fresh notice is served upon me, I shall know the case of the Municipality. (Refers to section 156).

[CHATTERJEE, J.—Where is the provision for fresh notice?]

The ground of increase on the rental basis was not stated in the notice, so there was no

CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA v. NRITYA KALI DASSEY.

"good" notice here, at least it was an irregular notice; so a fresh notice was necessary and the law clearly contemplates that.

Moreover, the present assessment has not been made within the time prescribed by the Act. The case did not fall within clause (c) of section 152 and the learned Judge of the Small Cause Court erred in holding that this was a case under section 152, clause (c). I can urge this ground in support of the decree made in my favour by the lower Court. The valuation made by the Calcutta Corporation cannot stand both because the notice was bad and because it was not made within the prescribed time.

JUDGMENT.

D. CHATTERJEE, J.—In this case a certain holding was to be re-valued on the expiry of 6 years from the last valuation. The Chairman of the Calcutta Municipality gave a notice under section 158 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, and the ground upon which the re-valuation was proposed to be made was that the valuation should be on the cost of construction and value of land instead of on the rental value, the premises being now occupied by the owner. The Chairman made a certain valuation, that is to say, fixed a certain value upon which the assessment was to be made. Then under section 160, a notice of objection was given by the opposite party and the opposite party was given a notice by the Chairman to be present with his evidence to be heard at a certain date before the Deputy Chairman. On the date so fixed, the Deputy Chairman made a valuation, accepting the principle for which the objector contended, that is, upon rental value.

Against this, there was an appeal to the Small Cause Court and the learned Judge has held that the notice under section 158 was not good and that, therefore, the increased valuation must be cancelled.

The Corporation has moved this Court for revising the said order of the Small Cause Court, and it is contended on behalf of the Corporation that the learned Judge's view of the law is wrong in that the Calcutta Municipal Act does not contain any provision for giving a further notice after an objection has been decided.

We find that section 158* provides for a notice. Upon that notice, a valuation is made and objections are then taken under section 160. After the decision of objections under section 160, any person dissatisfied with the order passed on his objection may appeal to the Court of Small Causes. The law does not contain any provision for a fresh notice, and this is as it should be; because the object of a notice is to make the party intended to be assessed acquainted with the action that the Municipality is going to take in respect of his holding; and when the Municipality has once given him notice and he has appeared and taken objections and the objections have been decided, no further notice is necessary. His only course is to appeal to the Small Cause Court as provided by section 162 of the Act. We think, therefore, that the notice under section 158 in this case was not defective and that the learned Judge of the Small Cause Court must try the case in due course of law.

Another objection was taken before us that the learned Judge of the Small Cause Court was wrong in holding that this case came within clause (c) of section 152, so that the present assessment was made within time. We think that the contention of the learned Vakil for the opposite party in this case is not sound. In this case the valuation was made in August 1909; and upon objection, and appeal to the Small Cause Court, it was ultimately reduced in 1910. Therefore, the valuation, as originally made, was cancelled and that is sufficient to let in the provisions of section 152 (c).

In this view of the case, we make the Rule absolute and direct that the learned Judge in the Small Cause Court should try the case on the merits in due course of law after considering such evidence as may be adduced by the parties.

We assess the hearing fee at two gold mohurs.

WALLSLEY, J.—I agree.

Rule made absolute; Case remanded.

SAMUNDAR SINGH v. MUKH LAL SINGH.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND APPEAL NO. 292 OF 1916.

November 30, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad.
 SAMUNDAR SINGH AND OTHERS—
 DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MUKH LAL SINGH AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

*Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), s. 25—
 Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 111 (g)— Landlord and tenant—Ejectment—Forfeiture—Denial of landlord's title, what amounts to.*

The denial of a landlord's title by a tenant, in order to involve forfeiture of the latter's interest, must be expressed and not implied and must precede the institution of the suit for ejectment on the ground of denial of title. [p. 937, col. 1.]

Harish Chandra Shaha v. Chandra Mohan Dass, 28 C. 113, relied upon.

Ektabar Sheikh v. Hara Bewah, 8 Ind. Cas. 680; 15 C. W. N. 335; 13 C. L. J. 1; Sheikh Miadhar v. Rajani Kanta Ray, 5 Ind. Cas. 708; 14 C. W. N. 339, distinguished.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Patna, dated the 9th December 1915, confirming that of the Munsif, 2nd Court, Patna, dated the 18th January 1915.

Mr. Ganesh Dutt Singh, for the Appellants.

Mr. Baidya Nath Narain Sinha, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the respondents in the Court of the Munsif of Patna for a declaration of their title to the lands in suit and for possession thereof. The lands in dispute consist of survey plots Nos. 951 and 952. They have been recorded in the names of the defendants as their mukadammi lands and are admittedly in their possession.

The plaintiffs' case is that the said lands in dispute form part of a 7 bighas mukadammi land purchased by them under a sale certificate dated the 7th of August 1872, and that the said plots Nos. 951 and 952 along with two other plots bearing Nos. 788 and 950 are held by the defendants as tenants of the plaintiffs at an annual rent of Rs. 9.

The defendants, on the other hand, contend that the lands in suit form part of their own mukadammi land of 5 bighas and they dispute the title of the plaintiffs to the said lands. The Survey Record of Rights have recorded the names of the defendants as the mukadammidars of the lands in suit.

The plaintiffs, therefore, brought this suit for the following reliefs:

(1) That it be declared that the lands in plots Nos. 951 and 952 belong to the plaintiffs as mukadammidars of the said lands;

(2) That it be declared that the said lands do not form part of the mukadammi lands of the defendants and that the survey entry in respect of the same in favour of the defendants is wrong; and

(3) On a declaration of the title of the plaintiffs over the land in suit as mukadammidars thereof, the plaintiffs be awarded khas possession of the said lands.

The defendants by their written statement deny the title of the plaintiffs as mukadammidars of the land and assert that they do not hold the lands at a rental of Rs. 9, but that they hold only .54 (decimal) at a rental of Rs. 4 under the plaintiffs.

Both the Courts below have held that the lands in suit form part of the 7 bighas purchased by the plaintiffs at a Civil Court sale in 1872, in respect of which the sale certificate has been produced by the plaintiffs-respondents. The Courts below have also held that the plaintiffs succeeded in this case in proving their title and in rebutting the presumption raised by the Record of Rights in favour of the defendants. On the basis of these findings the Courts below have given a decree in favour of the plaintiffs in respect of the lands in suit and have further directed that the possession over the lands be given to them by ejecting the defendants therefrom. The defendants have appealed to this Court. It is contended on their behalf that the findings of the Courts below are not sufficient in law to rebut the presumption afforded by the Record of Rights and that the sale certificate in itself is no evidence of title of the plaintiffs. No doubt the Courts below have not referred to the evidence in this case but they have sufficiently indicated in their judgments, particularly the Appellate Court, that there was sufficient material on the record to justify them to come to the conclusion that the plaintiffs proved their case satisfactorily and discharged the onus that was upon them of rebutting the presumption of the Record of Rights.

SAMUNDAR SINGH v. MUKH LAL SINGH.

With a view to satisfy myself as to the correctness of the finding, I have looked into the evidence on the record and find that there is abundant evidence of witnesses of the neighbouring lands as well as of the co-sharers in the village to prove the title of the plaintiffs in these lands. They prove that these lands are part of the lands purchased by the plaintiffs at the auction-sale in 1872 and that the plaintiffs had been in possession thereof as mukadammidars and the defendants were mere tenants on the said lands and were paying a rent of Rs. 9 to the plaintiffs. I have no doubt that the Courts below had sufficient material before them to come to the finding of fact that the plaintiffs' title over these lands has been proved and that the entry in the Record of Rights was wrong. The Courts below were, therefore, right in giving a declaration to the plaintiffs of their title over these lands and for possession as mukadammidars over these lands. The Courts below have, however, given a decree for ejectment of the defendants and for khas possession to the plaintiffs in this case. The order for ejectment is contained in the concluding portion of the judgment of the District Judge, which runs as follows:—

"I thus agree with the Munsif's finding of fact in issue No. 1 and in giving the plaintiffs a decree for ejectment, he was only giving them what they are legally entitled to, seeing that the defendants denied their title."

The order for ejectment has, therefore, been obviously based upon the denial by the defendants of the plaintiffs' title. I have very great doubts as to the correctness of this portion of the order of the Court below. Under section 25 of the Bengal Tenancy Act a tenant cannot be ejected from his holding except in execution of a decree for ejectment passed on the grounds specified in that section. These grounds are:—

(a) That the tenant has used the land comprising the holding in a manner which renders it unfit for purposes of the tenancy.

(b) That he has broken the condition consistent with the provisions of this Act and on breach of which he is under the terms of the contract between himself and his landlord liable to be ejected.

It is thus clear that the denial by a tenant of his landlord's title is no ground for forfeiture of his tenancy under the Bengal Tenancy Act. No doubt under section 111 (g) of the Transfer of Property Act based upon the English Law, a denial of the landlord's title is a ground for forfeiture of the tenant's interest. The introduction of section 136A by Act of 1907 B. C. into the Bengal Tenancy Act will also show that the landlord is entitled only to damages for the denial of his title by his tenant but is not entitled to eject the tenant on account of such a denial.

The learned Vakil for the respondents has referred to a series of rulings on this point, particularly the rulings reported as Ekabar Sheikh v. Hara Bewah (1) and Sheikh Miadhar v. Rajani Kanta Ray (2). A reference to these authorities will show that they do not bear out the contention of the learned Vakil for the respondents. In Ekabar Sheikh v. Hara Bewah (1) in a previous suit on the plea of the tenant-defendant it had already been held that there was no relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff and the defendant, and hence in the subsequent suit for ejectment by the landlord it was held that the plaintiff had forfeited his rights in the tenancy by reason, not of the denial of the landlord's title, but by an adjudication by a Court of Justice in a previous suit which operated as res judicata. The same appears to be the principle of the decision in Sheikh Miadhar v. Rajani Kanta Ray (2). The tenant had succeeded in a previous suit in resisting the claim of the landlord for rent by setting up a title in himself and denying the title of the landlord. It was rightly held that in a subsequent suit for ejectment the decision in the former suit precluded him from again asserting his right as tenant of the plaintiff. It is thus clear that a mere denial of the landlord's title in the suit itself will not entail a forfeiture of the tenancy.

In this case the plaintiff has admitted throughout in the plaint and in the evidence that the defendants hold these lands as tenants up to the present moment on payment of certain rent. The defendants have set up a title in themselves of mukadammidars. There is nothing on the record to show beyond the entry in the Survey Record of Rights that the defendants had denied expressly the title of the plaintiffs as landlords previous to the institution of this suit and following the decision in Harish Chandra Shaha v. Chandra Mohan Dass (3), I hold that the denial of the landlord's title must be expressed and not implied and that such a denial must precede the institution of the suit for ejectment on the ground of denial of the landlord's title. Several other authorities have been cited in this case, but they are all authorities of a time prior to 1907 when the Bengal Tenancy Act was amended and section 136A was added to it, and I do not think that they apply to this case nor do I think that they go far enough to hold that the denial in the same suit either in the written statement or in the evidence is a denial that will cause forfeiture of the tenant's interest. I, therefore, hold that the plaintiffs in this case are not entitled to get khas possession over the lands in suit by ejecting the defendants from the same and I modify the order and decree of the Court below to that extent.

(1) 8 Ind. Cas. 660; 15 C. W. N. 335; 13 C. L. J. 1.

(2) 5 Ind. Cas. 708; 14 C. W. N. 339.

MUHAMMAD ABU ZAFAR v. RAM PERSHAD KUMAR.

The plaintiffs will, therefore, be entitled to a declaration of their title over the lands as mukadammidars and will get possession over these lands of their proprietary interest, but shall not be entitled to eject the defendants who are tenants of the land. The plaintiffs are entitled to get rent only from them. With the above modifications I affirm the decree of the Court below.

The appeal is, therefore, partly decreed with proportionate costs.

(3) 28 C. 113.

Decree modified.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND APPEAL NO. 1821 OF 1915.

December 5, 1916.

Present.—Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad.

Syed MUHAMMAD ABU ZAFAR—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

RAM PERSHAD KUMAR—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT.

Bengal Village Choukidari Act (VI B. C. of 1870), s. 48.—Choukidari chakran land—Settlement with one of several zemindars, validity of.—Jurisdiction.

The Collector has no jurisdiction to settle village choukidari chakran land with only one of several zemindars under section 48 of Act VI of 1870. [p. 938, col. 2.]

Bejoy Chand Mahatab Bahadur v. Kristo Mohini Dasi, 21 C. 626; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1048, followed.

Appeal against the decree of the Additional Sub-Judge, Monghyr, dated the 25th April 1915, modifying that of the Munsif, 2nd Court, Beguserai, dated the 28th May 1914.

Syed Muhammad Tahir, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Baidya Nath Narain Sinha and Sivmandan Rai, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The dispute in this case is in respect of a choukidari chakran land, consisting of 1 bigha, 2 cottas and 16 dhurs. The appellant is one of the zemindars of the estate in which the land in dispute is situate. He owns 14 gandas share in the said estate. The respondent owns 3 gandas share in the estate. The land was transferred to the appellant by the Collector under section 48 of the Village Choukidari Act VI of 1870. The defendant-respondent had taken a settlement of the land in suit from the Collector subsequent to the settlement of it with the plaintiff. The defendant's settlement, however, was cancelled by the Collector at the instance of the plaintiff-appellant. The land is in possession of the defendant by virtue of his purchase against the previous choukidar who was in possession of the chakran land. The plaintiff has brought this suit for recovery of possession of the land on the basis of the settlement made with him by the Collector under sections 48 to 51 of the said Act. The lower Appellate Court has held that the defendant's possession as an auction-purchaser of the land is invalid as against the plaintiff inasmuch as the previous choukidar had no transferable interest in the land in suit.

MUHAMMAD ABU ZAFAR v. RAM PERSHAD KUMAR.

This view is correct. The learned Subordinate Judge has held that the defendant is entitled to remain in possession of the land to the extent of his share in the zemindari. This is also correct. He has, however, given a decree to the plaintiff to the extent of 14 gandas share in the land in dispute, representing his share in the zemindari. The defendant has been allowed to remain in possession of the rest of the land.

The plaintiff has appealed to this Court contending that the lower Appellate Court should have given him a decree for the entire land in suit on the basis of the settlement made with him by the Collector. The respondent has filed a cross-appeal contending that the entire suit should have been dismissed on the ground that the settlement by the Collector was invalid and also because the defendant's purchase in the mortgage decree was good and valid.

I agree with the finding of the lower Appellate Court that the previous choukidar had no transferable right in the land and hence the respondent cannot have any right in the land on the basis of his purchase at the auction-sale as against the plaintiff zemindar who took settlement of it from the Collector.

As to the validity and the effect of the settlement made by the Collector, I would refer to section 48 of the said Act. This section enacts that all choukidari chakran lands shall be transferred to the zemindur of the estate or tenure in which such lands may be situate. The Collector is bound to transfer the lands to the zemindar of the estate and to no one else. Vide Bejoy Chand Mahatab Bahadur v. Kristo Mohini Das (1). The word "zemindar" has been defined in section 1 of the Act to mean "the person whose name is registered in general register of estates paying revenue directly to Government as the proprietor of an estate" &c., &c. Both the appellant and the respondent are zemindars within the meaning of the term. Under section 14, Act I of 1899 as also under section 13, Act X of 1897, B. C. (General Clauses Act) words in the singular shall include the plural, and vice versa. The word "zemindar", therefore, under section 48 of the said Act means all the zemindars of the estate where there are several. The Collector, therefore, should have transferred the land to all the zemindars of the estate and not to one only in preference to the others. He was bound, therefore, to settle the lands with the defendant to the extent of his share in the estate. As a matter of fact the defendant did take settlement of the land from the Collector, but the Collector cancelled the settlement with him at the instance of the plaintiff. He was willing to take the settlement and the Collector had no right to refuse it. The settlement of the land with the plaintiff of the share of the defendant in the land is without any jurisdiction. The plaintiff has no right to take possession of the land to the extent of the share of the defendant. But the defendant's possession under his purchase at the auction-sale having been held invalid, he is not entitled to remain in possession of the land in excess of his 3 gandas share. Other zemindars of the estate have not come forward and it is not known whether they were willing or not to take the settlement. They are not even parties to this suit. The plaintiff is entitled to the possession of the land excluding only 3 gandas of it which represents the defendant's share in the estate. The settlement of the land with the plaintiff is not invalid in respect of the other shares of the other zemindars as the Collector could make settlement of that share with the plaintiff or any body else if the other zemindars did not take the settlement, vide Choukidari Manual of 1908 by Wheeler, page 46. The decree of the lower Court is upheld to the extent of 3 gandas share in the land belonging to the defendants, subject to the proportionate assessment of revenue over the share. The decree of the Court is modified to this extent that the plaintiff shall recover possession of the rest of the disputed land, deducting 3 gandas share of the defendants. The appeal is decreed in part with proportionate costs. The cross-appeal is dismissed with costs.

*Appeal decreed:
Cross-appeal dismissed.*

RAMADA SUNDARI MANDAL v. SHYAMA KANTA.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 1357
OF 1915.

December 5, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice N. R. Chatterjea and
Mr. Justice Newbould.

Srimati RAMADA SUNDARI MANDAL

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—

APPELLANTS

versus

SHYAMA KANTA CHAKRABARTTY

AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

*Co-sharer landlords—Partition, suit for, of fraction of joint estate, maintainability of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882)—Homestead lands, tenancy of, whether transferable before passing of Act.*A suit for the partition of a very small portion of a joint estate, in which alone the parties are jointly interested as putnidars is maintainable.Parbati Churn Debi v. Ain-ud-deen, 7 C. 577; 4 Shome L. R. 46; 9 C. L. 170; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 920, referred to.

Tenancies from year to year of homestead lands were not transferable except by custom previous to the passing of the Transfer of Property Act.

(10) 21 C. 666; 21 I. A. 56; 4 M. L. J. 131; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 389; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1014.

Madhu Sudan Sen v. Kamini Kanta Sen, 32 C. 1023; 9 C. W. N. 895; Ambica Prasad Singh v. Baldeo Lal, 36 Ind. Cas. 126; 20 C. W. N. 1113; 1 P. L. J. 253; Ananda Mohan Saha v. Gobinda Chandra Roy Choudhury, 33 Ind. Cas. 565; 20 C. W. N. 382, followed.

Appeal against the decree of the Additional Judge, Dacca, dated the 11th March 1915, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, 5th Court, at that place, dated the 29th of July 1914.

Babus Sarat Chandra Basak and Heramba Chandra Shaha, for the Appellants.

Babu Akhoy Kumar Banerjee, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit for partition and the appeal is against a preliminary decree passed in the suit. The subject-matter of partition is a small piece of land comprised in a revenue-paying estate. Plaintiff obtained a putni in respect of this land from the proprietors owning a 13-annas, 15-gandas share. Defendant No. 1 also was a putnidar under the 1-anna, 5-ganda proprietors. The remaining 1 anna belonged to the other defendants. Defendants Nos. 2, 3 and 4 claim a right to the land as usufructuary mortgagees from the old tenant and they further claim that they have been recognized by the proprietors other than those who are the lessors of the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1. The Courts below have given a decree for partition overruling the objections raised by the defendants. Defendants Nos. 1 to 4 have appealed to this Court.

It is contended that the subject-matter of the partition being a very small portion of an estate there ought not to have been a decree for partition. But this is the only property which is jointly owned by the plaintiff and the defendants, and they have no other property in common between them. Defendants are not interested in any other portion of the estate and there is, therefore, no risk of their being subjected to other partition suits as was suggested in the case of Parbati Churn Debi v. Ain-ud-deen (1). Defendants obtained a putni lease only in respect of their lessors' interest in the land and, that being so, we do not see any reason why the land should not be partitioned.

It is contended on behalf of defendants Nos. 2 to 4 that they are usufructuary mortgagees from the tenants but the finding is that the old tenant abandoned the land.

The last contention is that the land was transferable according to law. But the tenancy was created before the passing of the Transfer of Property Act; and upon the authorities, tenancies from year to year of homestead lands were not transferable except by custom previous to the passing of the Transfer of Property Act. See Madhu Sudan Sen v. Kamini Kanta Sen (2), Ambica Prasad Singh v. Baldeo Lal (3), Ananda Mohan Saha v. Gobinda Chandra Roy Choudhury (4), and the cases referred to therein.

The appeal, therefore, fails and is accordingly dismissed with costs. We assess the hearing fee at Rs. 48.

Let the record be sent down without delay.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 7 C. 577; 4 Shome L. R. 46; 9 C. L. R. 170; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 920.

(2) 32 C. 1023; 9 C. W. N. 895.

(3) 36 Ind. Cas. 126; 20 C. W. N. 1113; 1 P. L. J. 253.

(4) 33 Ind. Cas. 565; 20 C. W. N. 322.

BHARAT SINGH v. JAWALI.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 27 OF 1916.

November 23, 1916.

Present:—Sir Henry Richards, Kt., Chief Justice, and Justice Sir P. C. Banerji, Kt.

BHARAT SINGH—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

JAWALI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—

RESPONDENTS.

Appeal, second—Decree dismissing suit but granting permission to bring fresh suit, construction of—Appeal against granting permission to bring fresh suit, whether maintainable—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIII, r. 1.

A suit for redemption was deliberately dismissed by the first Court. Plaintiffs appealed and the lower Appellate Court upheld the decree by the following order: "However, in upholding the order of the lower Court, I order that the appellant hereby has permission to sue again when he has collected his evidence provided that this cause of action is still continuing." Defendants appealed against so much of the decree, as purported to permit the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit. A single Judge of the High Court held that no appeal lay treating the appeal as one against an order under Order XXIII, rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908. On an appeal under the Letters Patent:

Held, that the decree of the lower Appellate Court could not be treated as an order granting the plaintiff permission to withdraw the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit, and that, therefore, the appeal to the High Court was not an appeal from an order but an appeal against that portion of the decree of the lower Appellate Court which was in favour of the plaintiffs. [p. 941, col. 2.]

Genda Mal v. Pirbhu Lal, 17 A. 97; A. W. N. (1895) 17; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 387, distinguished.

Appeal under section 10 of the Letters Patent, against the decree of Mr. Justice Knox, dated the 1st February 1916.

FACTS.—The plaintiffs brought a suit for redemption. The Munsif dismissed the suit on the ground that there was no evidence of the existence of any mortgage. The plaintiffs appealed to the District Judge, who confirmed the decree of the Munsif, but gave them permission to bring a fresh suit. The plaintiffs acquiesced in this order which was incorporated in the decree; but the defendants appealed to the High Court on the ground that permission to institute a fresh suit could not be given as there was no formal defect in the frame of the suit. The learned Judge before whom the appeal came on for hearing remitted certain issues for trial to the lower Court. On receipt of the findings, the respondent for the first time raised a preliminary objection to the effect that the District Judge's order being one under Order XXIII, rule 1, no appeal lay to the High Court. The learned Judge acceded to this contention and dismissed the appeal. The defendants then preferred an appeal under section 10 of the Letters Patent.

Mr. S. K. Dar (for the Hon'ble Mr. Narain Prasad Asthana), for the Appellant.—The suit is on foot of an old mortgage. It has been instituted by certain speculators. The Munsif dismissed the suit as the mortgage was not proved. The lower Appellate Court had no justification to make an order allowing permission to the respondents to institute a fresh suit. The provisions of Order XXIII, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code, do not apply to the facts of the present case. There was no application, written or oral, for permission to withdraw from the suit. Moreover, the Judge expressed an opinion on the merits and the order was incorporated in the decree itself. It follows, therefore, that the defendant had a right of appeal.

Mr. N. Upadhyaya, for the Respondents.—The sole question is whether the defendants could appeal against an order passed under Order XXIII, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code. The order was not happily worded, but all the same it is an order giving permission to the plaintiffs to institute a fresh suit. The propriety of that order cannot be questioned by way of appeal.

[RICHARDS, C. J.—Plaintiffs cannot withdraw the suit because it has been actually dismissed. The Code gives no such power.]

We must take it that the Judge meant to set aside the order of dismissal when he gave permission.

[RICHARDS, C. J.—You did not appeal against this decree.]

I rely on Genda Lal v. Pirbhu Mal (1) and Jogadindro Nath v. Sarut Sunduri Debi (2).

[RICHARDS, C. J.—How can you bring a fresh suit, when this suit stands dismissed?]

Mr. S. K. Dar was not heard in reply.

JUDGMENT.—The facts connected with this appeal are shortly as follows:—The

(1) 17 A. 97; A. W. N. (1895) 17; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 387.

(2) 18 C. 322; 9 Ind. Dec (N s) 215.

BHARAT SINGH v. JAWALI.

plaintiffs claimed to be the purchasers of the equity of redemption under an alleged mortgage, dated about the year 1877. When they brought their suit they altogether failed to prove their mortgage. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on this ground. No application was made by the plaintiffs for permission to withdraw their suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit. On the other hand they appealed alleging that there was sufficient evidence to prove the mortgage; secondly, that the Court ought to have allowed them time to produce evidence. Thirdly, that the Court had taken a wrong view as to the burden of proof. Fourthly, (the same as the second,) that they should have been allowed further time. The Court of first appeal after considering these grounds gave judgment stating that the plaintiffs had been guilty of great laches and that he saw no reason for allowing the appeal. The judgment goes on: "However, in upholding the order of the lower Court, I order that the appellant hereby has permission to sue again when he has collected his evidence provided that this cause of action is still continuing." The judgment was followed by a regular decree which provides that the decree of the Court of first instance was upheld, but that the plaintiff had permission to sue again when he had collected his evidence. The plaintiffs did not appeal against this decree but the defendants appealed against so much of it as purported to permit the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit. When the appeal came before a learned Judge of this Court he referred certain issues, the finding on which was that the plaintiffs had come into Court without proper proof and they had disclosed no sufficient reason for not having their proof ready. The learned Judge of this Court, however, has held that no appeal lay, treating the appeal as one against an order under Order XXIII, rule 1. The defendant has preferred this appeal under the Letters Patent and contends that there has been a decree dismissing the plaintiff's suit, that there has been no order allowing the plaintiffs permission to withdraw the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit, and that, as a matter of fact, the plaintiffs neither applied to withdraw their suit nor were granted permission to withdraw. It seems to us that this contention has force. The Court of first instance deliberately dismissed the plaintiffs' suit. The lower Appellate Court upheld that decree. The result is that the plaintiffs' suit has been finally dismissed by both the Courts and the plaintiffs have preferred no appeal against the dismissal in the lower Appellate Court. The appeal to this Court was not an appeal from an order granting the plaintiff liberty to withdraw—it was an appeal against that portion of the decree which was in the plaintiffs' favour. Reliance is placed on the case of Genda Mal v. Pirbhay Lal (1). In that case the facts were quite different. The suit came before a Munsif and the plaintiff applied for permission to withdraw his suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit. The Munsif declined to give the permission and made a decree dismissing the suit. The plaintiff appealed and urged in the lower Appellate Court that there was sufficient ground for granting him permission to withdraw his suit and that the Munsif ought to have granted him that permission. The Court of first appeal thought that the contention of the plaintiff was right and that the Munsif ought to have allowed him to withdraw from the suit. He, therefore, set aside the Munsif's decree dismissing the suit and granted the plaintiff permission to withdraw with liberty to bring a fresh suit. It was against that order that an appeal was preferred to the High Court which held that no appeal lay under the circumstances. This was the only point that was decided in that case. In our opinion, it is quite impossible to treat the decree of the lower Appellate Court in the present case as an order granting the plaintiff permission to withdraw his suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit. If we are right in considering it a decree, an appeal clearly lay. We allow the appeal, set aside the decree of this Court and also of the lower Appellate Court and restore the decree of the Court of first instance with costs in all Courts.

Appeal allowed.

PRIYANATH MITTER v. ANATH NATH DEV.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES NOS. 2763
AND 2927 OF 1913.

December 12, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice D. Chatterjee and
Mr. Justice Walmsley.PRIYANATH MITTER AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 AND 3—APPELLANTS *versus*ANATH NATH DEV.—PLAINTIFF, ANNADA PROSAD BOSE—DEFENDANT
No. 2—RESPONDENTS.Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), s. 87—Landlord and tenant—Abandonment of holding—Waiver of abandonment, suit for rent, whether amounts to—Appeal, second—Adverse possession, plea of, whether open in second appeal.

Abandonment can be found without any reference to section 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, as the Act does neither lay down that an abandonment by a tenant can only be made according to the procedure prescribed by section 87 nor does it confine the tenant to that procedure [p. 944, col. 1.]

A suit for rent against a tenant, after he has abandoned the lease, without any knowledge of the abandonment on the part of the landlord, cannot operate as a waiver of the abandonment. [p. 944, col. 2.]

The question of adverse possession is a mixed question of law and fact and cannot be allowed to be raised for the first time in second appeal. [p. 944, col. 2.]

Appeals against the decree of the District Judge, 24-Parganas, dated the 28th July 1913, reversing a decision of the Subordinate Judge, 24-Parganas, dated the 29th June 1912.

FACTS material to this report are as follows:—

The land in suit is a garden situated in the suburbs of Calcutta of which Anath Nath Dev is the landlord. In January 1885 Anath granted a lease for eleven years to Priyanath. Fani is a brother-in-law of Priyanath and his case is that he took the lease jointly with Priyanath—although his name was not mentioned in the lease. In 1890 Priyanath and Fani let out the land to Annada. In 1908, Anath sued Priyanath for rent, as he had not realized any rent from him since 1898, and then found on enquiry that Priyanath was not in possession. He, thereafter, tried to take khas possession, and he sent his Darwan and servants for that purpose—who plucked some flowers from the garden. Annada who was then in actual possession settled the matter with Priyanath, and attorned to him directly for the land taken from him. Thereafter Anath brought this suit to eject Priyanath on the ground of abandonment and Fani as trespasser—while Priyanath and Fani brought a suit after notice to eject Annada on the ground that he was only an under-*rai*yat. In the pleadings Priyanath and Fani claimed to have acquired a right of occupancy to the lands in suit. The first Court dismissed the suit of Anath against Priyanath and Fani and decreed that of Priyanath and Fani against Annada. On appeal to the District Judge, the decision of the first Court was reversed. Hence this second appeal by Priyanath and Fani.

Sir Rash Behari Ghose (with him Babus Sarat Chandra Roy Chowdhury, Biraj Mohan Mazumdar, Tarakeshwar Pal Chowdhury, Dwijendranath Monkerjee and Satya Charan Singha), for the Appellants.—Upon the learned Judge's own finding, Priyanath, the defendant No. 1, never abandoned the holding so as to entitle the plaintiff to re-enter on the land. It is clear from the evidence on the record that lease was granted by the defendant No. 1, Priyanath, to the defendant No. 2, Annada, and the latter has been in possession of the holding under the settlement taken from the former. This means that the defendant No. 1 is in occupation of the holding by letting it out. That defendant No. 1 failed to pay rent to the plaintiff for several years is not by itself sufficient to hold that there has been an abandonment. This is clear from the wording of section 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The question whether or not there had been an abandonment by the defendant No. 1, must be decided in the light of the law laid down in the Bengal Tenancy Act. [Refers to Ram Pershad Koeri v. Jawahir Roy (1).]

The second point is that even assuming that the defendant No. 1 did abandon the holding, the plaintiff has by his conduct waived his right to re-enter on that ground. By suing the defendant No. 1 for rent in 1908 the plaintiff acknowledged the existence of a subsisting lease. After that he should not be allowed to turn round and to re-enter upon the land on the ground of his tenant's abandonment. After he had obtained a decree for rent against the defendant No. 1, the decretal amount was deposited in Court by Fani on behalf of the defendant No. 1, Priyanath, and the money deposited was withdrawn by the plaintiff. After having so acted, the plaintiff cannot claim re-entry on the ground of the tenant's abandonment. The plaintiff has by his own conduct waived his right to re-entry on that ground.

PRIYANATH MITTER V. ANATH NATH DEV.

The third and the last point is that the present suit is barred by limitation.

Babu Surendra Chandra Sen, (with him Sir S. P. Sinha, Babus Amarendra Nath Bose, Provosh Chandra Mitter, Narendra Kumar Bose), for the Respondents.—The question of limitation was not taken in any of the lower Courts.

Sir Rash Behari Ghose.—But the question may be taken at this stage if it can be decided on the face of the pleadings.

Assuming for the sake of argument that there was abandonment, the abandonment having taken place twelve years prior to the institution of the present suit, the suit is obviously time-barred. Plaintiff's right to recover possession has been completely extinguished by the operation of the Statute of Limitation. [Refers to the observation of Jenkins, C. J., in Prohabati Dasi v. Taibaturinessa Chaudhuri (2).]

Then again, the lease was expressly granted for agricultural and horticultural purposes, and it is an undeniable fact that it is being used for horticultural purposes. So the learned District Judge is obviously wrong in holding that the Transfer of Property Act is applicable to this case, and Bengal Tenancy Act has no application. The learned Judge in the Court of Appeal below ought to have found that Priyanath and Fani acquired a right of occupancy to the holding in question.

Sir S. P. Sinha.—Apart from the question of limitation raised for the first time here, the appeal is obviously concluded by findings of fact arrived at by the lower Appellate Court. It finds that no relationship of landlord and tenant exists between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1. This is a finding of fact which is conclusive in second appeal. [Refers to Sarat Chandra Roy Chowdhury v. Ratubuddin Mandal (3).]

(2) 20 Ind. Cas. 664; 17 C. W. N. 1088 at p. 1092; 19 C. L. J. 62.

(3) 17 Ind. Cas. 227; 16 C. L. J. 271.

As regards abandonment, the lower Appellate Court has found that there has been an abandonment of the holding. Abandonment is a question of fact and not of law. In England it is a question for the Jury. So the finding of the Court of appeal below on this point is conclusive.

[CHATTERJEE, J.—Why did the plaintiff sue Priyanath for rent up to 1908? What is the effect of the decree against Priyanath?]

Because prior to that we were not aware of the fact of abandonment. That is very clear from the finding of the lower Appellate Court. The learned Judge finds that Fani was in possession not as a tenant but as a trespasser. My suing Priyanath for rent does not get rid of the fact of abandonment. Abandonment is a finding of fact on the evidence and not a point of law. It cannot be questioned in second appeal.

Then it has been argued on behalf of the appellant that the plaintiff has waived his right to re-enter. But the question arises when did I come to know of my right to re-enter. No question of waiver can be raised unless it is found that the plaintiff did know of the fact of abandonment at the time of the institution of the rent suit against Priyanath in 1908. In the absence of any such finding the question cannot be raised for the first time in second appeal.

Then it has been argued (though for the first time in second appeal) that the plaintiff's suit is barred by limitation. Considering the nature and scope of the suit and the facts found the question of limitation cannot arise. Up to 1908 the plaintiff had no knowledge that Priyanath had abandoned the holding. He came to know of that fact in the course of the rent suit in 1908. So his cause of action arose then and then only. Hence the suit cannot be time-barred. [Prohabati Dasi v. Taibaturinessa Chaudhuri (2) distinguished]. The plea of limitation is not on the pleadings. It is not possible to decide this question upon the evidence on record. No such question can arise with reference to the scope and nature of the present suit. [Refers to Jadu Nath Belet v. Raj Narain Mukherjee (4).]

Babu Sarat Chandra Roy Chowdhury, in reply.—Abandonment is not a question of fact

(4) 19 Ind. Cas. 884; 17 C. W. N. 459.

PRIYANATH MITTER V. ANATH NATH DEV.

in India although it may be otherwise in England. The question is whether there has been an abandonment in law, and this question must be decided according to the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

JUDGMENT.

S. A. No. 2763 of 1913.

Three points were argued in this appeal; first, that the case was governed by the Bengal Tenancy Act and, therefore, Priyanath had occupancy rights and the plaintiff cannot ignore him and ask for khas possession; secondly, that, on the findings, no abandonment is made out and that even if it can be said that there was an abandonment, the abandonment had been waived by the suit for rent brought by the plaintiff in 1908; and thirdly, that upon the findings, the suit for recovery of possession against Fani is barred by limitation.

The learned Judge has found that Priyanath abandoned the lands immediately after the lease, that is about 1885.

It is contended, first, that no abandonment under section 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is made out; and, secondly, that if there was an abandonment, it had been waived.

The learned Judge has found abandonment without any reference to section 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and we think that he had every right to do so. There is nothing in the Bengal Tenancy Act which lays down that an abandonment by a tenant can only be made in accordance with the procedure prescribed by section 87. That section lays down a certain procedure to be adopted by the landlord under certain circumstances; it does not confine the tenant to that procedure. The tenant can give up the land; he can cut off all connection with the land; there is nothing to prevent him from doing it. Upon the facts and in the circumstances of the case, the learned Judge has found that Priyanath took no interest in the lease and abandoned the lands. Thus we have a sufficient finding so far as this case is concerned. If he abandoned the lands, then no question under the Bengal Tenancy Act arises; for then he cannot have acquired any right of occupancy, nor can he depend upon the same.

As regards the suit of 1908, the plaintiff's plea is that he was ignorant of what had taken place with regard to this land, and that in order to make out a waiver, it must be found that the plaintiff brought the suit of 1908 with full knowledge of the abandonment that had been made by Priyanath before that time. There is no finding in this case that the plaintiff had knowledge of the abandonment. That being so, there cannot be said to have been a waiver by the plaintiff of the abandonment that is found to have taken place immediately after the lease.

This disposes of the first and second grounds.

The third ground is that if Priyanath abandoned in 1885 or thereabouts, and if Fani has been in possession ever since, then Fani's possession is adverse and he has acquired a statutory title by that possession. This plea, however, was not raised in any of the Courts below. In this Court it was not taken in the grounds of appeal but was taken with notice to the respondent. If it had been a pure question of law independent of any finding of fact, it would have been open to us to consider it and to give it effect. The question of adverse possession, however, is a mixed question of law and fact. We do not know what evidence would have been produced by the parties if the plea had been taken in the Courts below. It may be that the possession was not adverse, because Fani did never deny any body's title. This being so, we do not think that it would be proper to give effect to this plea without further evidence on the point; and since the plea has been taken at a very late stage of the case, we do not think that an opportunity should be given to re-open the whole case and let in fresh evidence. This disposes of the third ground.

In this view of the case, we dismiss the appeal with costs.

S. A. No. 2927 of 1913.

This appeal is governed by the same reasons as in Second Appeal No. 2763 of 1913. The title of Priyanath failing, his right of eviction also fails. This appeal also is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MOTI RAIJI v. LALDAS JIBHAI.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 49 OF 1915.

September 28, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Beaman and Mr. Justice Heaton.MOTI RAIJI—DEFENDANT NO. 2—APPELLANT
versus

LALDAS JIBHAI AND ANOTHER—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Widow—Surrender of estate to reversioners—Acceleration, when valid—Alienation and acceleration, distinction between—Legal necessity—Adoption—Adopted son, rights of, to question alienations before adoption—Maxim 'a man cannot take advantage of his own fraud,' applicability of.

There are only two ways in which a Hindu widow in the enjoyment of the normal widow's estate can convey a greater interest than that which she herself has, the one is by acceleration, the other by alienation for legal necessity. [p. 946, col. 1.]

The notions conveyed by the said two terms are not only irreconcilable, but virtually antagonistic. In strictness no acceleration can be an alienation and no alienation can be an acceleration. [p. 947, col. 2; p. 954, col. 2.]

The true doctrine of acceleration, which has been incorporated with the general body of Hindu Law by the decision of the Privy Council in Behari Lal v. Madho Lal Ahir Gayawal, 19 I. A. 30; 19 C. 236; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 88; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 603, is no more than the English doctrine of merger subjected to the peculiar conditions and requirements of the law of the joint Hindu family. It amounts in effect to this, that a Hindu widow enjoying the normal Hindu widow's life-estate may, if she please, surrender it in favour of the next reversioner, and, if she does so, it amounts in law precisely to the same thing as though the widow had at that moment died a natural death. Its essential condition is that the interposed life-estate should be entirely withdrawn and not merely a fractional part of it. [p. 947, col. 2; p. 948, col. 1.]

Behari Lal v. Madho Lal Ahir Gayawal, 19 I. A. 30; 19 C. 236; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 88; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 603, dissented from.

For the purposes of an alienation, if the widow is to convey more than her life-interest, it must be for purposes of legal necessity. [p. 948, cols. 1 & 2.]

The consent of the reversioners to a Hindu widow's alienation is no more than a factor in the proof of legal necessity. It may always be used in support of the alienee's contention that there was legal necessity, but per se it will not be sufficient to do away with all other proof. [p. 948, col. 2.]

Nobokishore Surma Roy v. Hari Nath Sarma Roy, 10 C. 1102; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 737, disapproved.

The maxim that 'a man shall not take advantage of his own fraud' is quite distinct from the doctrine of estoppel. Two things have to be looked at in applying the maxim, (1) whether the person against whom this maxim is sought to be used has ever committed any fraud at all; (2) whether assuming that he has committed constructive fraud, that has given him any advantage in the particular issue he is contesting. The maxim applies to a great number of cases in which there need be no estoppel at all. [p. 951, cols. 1 & 2.]

An adoption will not divest estates vested before it was made. The adopted son can, however, question an alienation as void and not binding on him as and from the date of his adoption, as an alienation requires for its validation legal necessity. [p. 953, col. 2; p. 954, col. 1.]

One B, a Hindu widow, having mortgaged her husband's estate in 1893 to 1st defendant, the plaintiffs as next reversioners sued in 1893 for cancellation of the mortgage. The matter was referred to arbitrators, who in December 1894 drew up an award whereby (1) plaintiffs were to redeem the mortgage on payment of Rs. 1,700 to 1st defendant and the latter was to reconvey the properties to them; (2) out of the properties so reconveyed the plaintiffs were to give to the widow a house and 18 bighas of land for her maintenance. Nothing, however, was done upon the award for many years, nor did the parties get it made a rule of Court. The 1st defendant, mortgagee, sub-mortgaged the property for Rs. 1,000 to one D and under that mortgage he attorned to the latter. In 1906 the widow sued to redeem the mortgage, ignoring the award. That suit was dismissed on the ground that by the award there was no right of redemption in the widow. About this time, plaintiffs obtained a conveyance of the properties from 1st defendant which they got compulsorily registered. Under its terms they redeemed the sub-mortgage to D, but the 1st defendant refused to deliver the properties to the plaintiffs. In 1909, the widow adopted the 2nd defendant, the son of 1st defendant, and the properties were delivered to him by the latter. Plaintiffs instituted the present suit for possession, alleging that the effect of the award was an acceleration of their rights and that the subsequent adoption of 2nd defendant could not defeat the estate already vested in them. They also alleged that the adoption was a fraudulent act of defendants acting in concert to defeat plaintiffs and that 2nd defendant could not be permitted to take advantage of his own fraud:

Held, (1) that the award of 1893 was in no sense an acceleration as the entire interest of the widow did not pass to the plaintiffs, but there was provision for the immediate restitution to her of a substantial portion of the property, which violated the fundamental basis of the theoretical doctrine of acceleration; [p. 950, cols. 1 & 2.]

(2) that the transaction could only be regarded as an alienation by the widow, to validate which the plaintiffs were bound to show legal necessity; [p. 948, col. 2; p. 950, col. 2.]

(3) that the 2nd defendant, as adopted son of the last male owner, was entitled to question the alienation as being void against him as from the date of his adoption; [p. 954, col. 1.]

(4) that as the adoption was legal per se, the resort to it as a means of asserting one's rights did not amount to fraud and the Court could not consider the meanness about the line of conduct pursued by the 1st defendant to get his son adopted by the widow. [p. 953, col. 1; p. 954, col. 2.]

Anant Sitrambava Pujari v. Ramchandra Atmaram, (1897) P. J. 273; Hillaya Subbaya Hegde v. Narayanappa Timmaya, 12 Ind. Cas. 913; 36 B. 189; 13 Bom. L. R. 1200, referred to.

MOTI RAJJI v. LALDAS JIBHAI.

Appeal under the Letters Patent from the decision of Mr. Justice Batchelor in Second Appeal No. 473 of 1914, confirming the decree passed by the District Judge, Broach, in Appeal No. 13 of 1912, reversing the decree passed by the first class Subordinate Judge, Broach, in Civil Suit No. 253 of 1910.

Mr. G. K. Parekh, for the Appellants.

Mr. G. S. Rao, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BEAMAN, J.—There are only two ways, we think, in which a Hindu widow in the enjoyment of the normal widow's estate can convey a greater interest than that which she herself has, the one is by acceleration, the other by alienation for legal necessity. In the present case, limiting the contest to the appellant, defendant No. 2, and the plaintiffs, there can be no question of legal necessity. Both have pleaded at various stages that the original alienation by the widow, Bai Lala, of the year 1893 was without consideration. It does not lie, therefore, in the mouth of the plaintiffs now to contend that that alienation was for legal necessity.

The only question remaining to be answered is whether as a result of the alienation of 1893, the widow accelerated her estate in favour of the plaintiff. In order to make what follows clearer, we shall briefly state the material facts upon which this question arises.

Bai Lala, the widow of one Rajji, was left in possession of a widow's estate in all his property. He died leaving no issue. In 1893, Bai Lala mortgaged the whole estate to one Bechar for a sum of about Rs. 3,500. Almost immediately the plaintiffs, who claimed to be the next reversioners, and in the course of all subsequent proceedings appear to have been admitted to be so, brought a suit to set aside this alienation on the ground that it was a hollow transaction, and that the widow had received no consideration. The suit was, on the face of it, premature, since at that time it may be doubted whether the plaintiffs had any locus standi. But with that we are not now concerned. What actually happened was that the matters in dispute were referred to arbitration, and an award was given by the arbitrators out of which all the subsequent rights of the parties inter se are held to have flowed. That award was not brought into Court or converted into a decree, but it has been confirmed, to some extent at any rate, by a decree of this High Court in the year 1911. In effect the award ordered that the plaintiffs should be allowed to redeem the estate mortgaged to the defendant No. 1 Bechar for a sum of Rs. 1,700, and that on this being done Bechar was to convey the mortgaged estate, not to the original mortgagor Bai Lala, but to the plaintiffs, and that Bai Lala was to surrender all her right, title and interest in it, and that thereupon the plaintiffs in turn were to give to Bai Lala a house and 18 bighas of land, out of the estate so re-conveyed to them by Bechar, for her life as maintenance. The award fixed the term within which the plaintiffs were to pay Rs. 1,700 to the original mortgagee Bechar, and that term ended with Magsar 1894. Such were the terms of the award. Nothing was done upon it for many years, and it appears that the mortgagee Bechar sub-mortgaged the property to one Desai for a sum which we will state roughly at Rs. 1,000. Under that mortgage Bechar attorned to his mortgagee Desai, and at a very much later period Desai actually brought a suit to recover one year's rent from Bechar and got a decree. That was somewhere in the year 1907, long before which the other transactions had occurred which we will now mention.

Between 1894 when the time limited by the award had expired, and the year 1906, all parties interested in the award appear to have rested on their rights, and taken no steps to enforce them. About that period the widow Bai Lala brought a suit to redeem the mortgage, ignoring the award and the suit in which it had been given. That was the case which came up ultimately on second appeal to this High Court in the year 1911, and was decided by a Bench consisting of Chandavarkar and Heaton, JJ. Those learned Judges limited their conclusion most strictly to this, that the effect of the award had been to transfer the equity of redemption from Bai Lala to the plaintiffs; and, therefore, that her suit to redeem must fail. I neglect any obiter dicta in the judgment of Chandavarkar, J., MOTI RAIJI v. LALDAS JIBHAI.

which go beyond this conclusion. At or about the same time the plaintiffs bestirred themselves and attempted to obtain a conveyance from Bechar of the whole mortgaged property. This was about the month of April 1906. Bechar refused to consent to the registration of this conveyance, although he admitted that he had executed it. The plaintiffs got it registered. In this conveyance we find a term authorising the plaintiffs to redeem out of the sum of Rs. 1,700, which they had under the award to pay to Bechar, the sub-mortgagee Desai, and this they appear to have done early in the year 1907, and obtained for themselves a reconveyance from the sub-mortgagee, including of course such landlord's rights as had come into being between the sub-mortgagee Desai and the original mortgagee, Bechar under the latter's mortgage to the former. In 1909 or thereabouts, the widow Bai Lala appears to have adopted the present defendant No. 2, who was the natural son of the original mortgagee. The plaintiffs appear to have taken no steps under their conveyance to regain possession of the property, nor did they then or at any time before the institution of this suit pay to the original mortgagee Bechar Rs. 700 which were still due to him under the award, in which this payment had been made a condition precedent to calling upon him for a reconveyance, and so obtaining possession of the mortgaged property. Before this suit was instituted, it would appear that defendant No. 1 Bechar made common cause with his natural son, defendant No. 2, appellant here, and his guardian the widow Bai Lala, and let defendant No. 2 into nominal possession at least of the mortgaged property by the widow his guardian. Thereupon the plaintiff brought this suit to recover possession of the mortgaged property under the award of 1893, and was resisted by the defendant No. 2 who is the appellant here. The appellant, defendant No. 2, has set up a title paramount both to that of the mortgagor and the mortgagee, treating the plaintiff under the award of 1893 as mortgagor. His contention is that the whole transaction of 1893 was a hollow sham, and that he as the adopted son of Bai Lala was entitled from the moment of his adoption to challenge, and making his challenge good, to set it aside. That was the position when the parties went to trial.

We now revert to the first question we have to answer. Was the transaction which resulted from the suit of 1893 an acceleration of Bai Lala's estate in favour of the plaintiffs, the next reversioners? We have been referred to several cases in the Calcutta and Madras High Courts in which the topic of acceleration has been, if not exhaustively considered, glanced at, in connection with another feature of the Hindu Law, which, in the gradual progress of judicial decisions, seems to have got inextricably confounded with it. We are unable to agree with the decisions either of the Calcutta High Court, which appear to us to overlook almost entirely the essential conditions of a true acceleration, or the decision of Sir Sankaran Nair, J., in the Madras Full Bench case of Rangappa Naik v. Kamti Naik (1), in which he treats the facts before him as indubitably constituting a true acceleration. In our opinion that was not a case of acceleration at all, as we shall presently show, and neither of the two other learned Judges who made up the Full Bench placed their decision upon that ground.

In order to understand the great confusion of thought that appears to have gathered about the subject, extremely simple in itself, it is necessary to remember that the conflict of judicial authority which has been supposed to exist between the Calcutta and the Bombay High Courts for many years is upon a point which has really nothing to do with acceleration at all. We began by saying that there are only two ways in which a widow in possession of a life-estate can convey a greater interest than that which she herself has, the one being acceleration, the other alienation for legal necessity. A moment's analysis of these legal notions will show that they are not only irreconcilable, but virtually antagonistic. In strictness no acceleration can be an alienation and no alienation can be an acceleration. The true doctrine of acceleration which has been incorporated, and speaking for myself, I think very unfortunately incorporated, with the general body of Hindu Law by the decision of the Privy Council in Behari Lal v. Madho Lal Ahir Gayawal (2) is no more than the English doctrine of merger subjected to the peculiar conditions and requirements of the law of the joint Hindu family. It amounts in effect to this, that a Hindu widow enjoying the normal Hindu widow's life-estate may, if she please, surrender it in favour of the next reversioner and if she does so, it amounts in law precisely to the same thing as though the widow had at that moment died a natural death. Its essential condition is that the interposed life-estate, which prevents the family property taking its normal course and going into the hands of the next reversioners, members of the same family, should be entirely withdrawn. Both theoretically and for obvious reasons of practical policy it is indispensable that this condition should be found to exist. It will not do for a widow, as appears to have been supposed in one judgment at least of the Calcutta High Court, to accelerate a fraction of her life-estate. That is utterly opposed in theory to the English doctrine, which is thus being transferred bodily and made an integral part of the Hindu Law of the joint family. It is also open to the most obvious practical objections, and that is why the Privy Council laying down the limitations of the rule of acceleration in the case of Behari Lal v. Madho Lal Ahir Gayawal (2) insist in language, which we do not think could have been made clearer, that for a good acceleration in law it is absolutely necessary that the entire interposed life-estate should have been withdrawn. But what has happened throughout the course of decisions both in Calcutta and Madras has been a blending of a totally different set of considerations with those plain and easily intelligible limitations placed upon the doctrine of acceleration.

(1) 31 M. 366; 18 M. L. J. 309; 3 M. L. T. 355.

MOTI RAIJI v. LALDAS JIBHAI.

For the purposes of an alienation, if the widow is to convey more than the estate which she herself has, that is, an estate co-extensive only with her own life, the rule of Hindu Law from the very first, a rule we believe universal over the whole country, has been that such alienation must be for purposes of legal necessity. Now it will be observed that considerations applying to alienations of that kind would necessarily be totally different from considerations applying to a case of true acceleration. For in a case of acceleration the property remains in the family where it was originally acquired, whereas in a case of alienation, if that alienation be shown to have been for legal necessity, the property is finally gone out of the family. That is why rigorous insistence has always been placed by the Courts upon the proof of legal necessity. But in Calcutta from a very early period all the Judges appear to have leaned strongly to the view that any alienation made by a widow, tenant for life, with the consent of the next reversioners would on account of that consent per se be a good absolute alienation so far as the reversioners, the original members of the family, were concerned. The reasoning was this, that since the reversioners themselves who were expectant upon the widow's life-estate had consented to her transferring the whole or any part of the property, in which she had that life-estate, to a stranger from whom neither they nor any other member of the family could ever afterwards recover it, the inference must be irresistible that they agreed with the widow that there was legal necessity. The Bombay High Court on the other hand never went that length, and has never fallen into the same confusion which characterises the dicta of many eminent Judges both in Calcutta and Madras upon questions which may belong really to the doctrine of acceleration rather than that of alienation for legal necessity. The Bombay view has always been, and speaking for myself, I again say that, in my opinion, it has been logically correct throughout, that the consent of the reversioners to the Hindu widow's alienation is no more, and never ought to be anything more, than a factor in the proof of legal necessity. It may always be used in support of the alienee's contention that there was legal necessity, but per se it will not be sufficient to do away with all other proof. The substitution of the mere consent of the next reversioners for the proof of legal necessity is the main point of difference between the current of decisions in Calcutta and in Bombay, and the confusion which has resulted both in the application of the law appropriate to cases of true alienation and in cases which are supposed to be cases of acceleration is easily discernible as soon as the leading cases in Calcutta and Madras are subjected to critical consideration. Thus we find Garth, C. J., and Mitter, J., in one Calcutta case, viz., Nobokiskore Sarma Roy v. Hari Nath Sarma Roy (3), stating that inasmuch as it is now an admitted feature of Hindu Law that the widow may accelerate her life-estate in favour of the next reversioner, it is impossible to assert that the consent of the next reversioner to the alienation by the widow, of a part of the whole estate in which she has a life-interest will not validate and make such alienation absolute. So far from that being, in my opinion, a correct statement either of the law or its reason, it is quite easy to show where the fallacy lies. It is one thing for the next reversioners to receive the property into their own hands through any act which is tantamount to the civil death of the tenant for life, but it is a very different thing to say that because this may occur, it necessarily follows that the consent of the next reversioners will validate the absolute alienation to an outsider of the entire estate in which the widow has a life-interest, and that is a point which deserves the more weight if we allow that acceleration may be for valuable consideration. In strictness, speaking for myself again, I doubt whether acceleration proper ought to have any connection with valuable consideration, but in actual practice it would be impossible, I suppose, to draw a line of that kind. Admitting that a widow may accelerate for valuable consideration, it is obvious that if we by a loose analogy extend the doctrine so far as to say that by purchasing for like consideration the consent of the next reversioner she may dispose of the whole estate so as to take it out of the family and hand it over to an outsider, the door is at once thrown wide open to many transactions of extremely doubtful morality. To give an instance which may illustrate my meaning, there might be a young widow left with a life-estate in a great property, and the next reversioner might be an old man of seventy years of age with no reasonable expectation of surviving her. She might very easily purchase his consent at a nominal figure and sell the entire estate of her deceased husband for a great cash consideration to be spent by her upon her own pleasures and indulgences. Now such a case brings out clearly the radical distinction between true acceleration and alienation. In all accelerations to talk of, the consent of the person in whose favour the acceleration is made is to use words without meaning. Commonly he who is put in possession of an estate immediately for which he might otherwise have had to wait many years will consent, and that consent can have no legal significance whatever; nor is there any distinction to be drawn in cases of alienations for legal necessity, between the alienation of a whole or part of the estate in which the widow has a life-interest. If the necessity goes the length of compelling her to alienate the whole estate, that alienation will be as valid in law as the alienation of a part. But as we began by saying, it is different in a true case of acceleration. For there the indispensable condition is the withdrawal of the entire life-estate, an obstruction which prevents the property taking its normal course, and there can be, in our opinion, no such thing as an acceleration of a part of the life-estate or of a part of the property over which the life-estate extends, although that view has led to very confusing dicta to be found in the judgments both of the Calcutta and Madras High Courts. There is of course no analogy between the case of acceleration which requires the surrender of the entire life-estate and the case of alienation for legal necessity which might cover the smallest fraction or the whole, and yet it appears to have been seriously argued in one judgment, at any rate, to be found in the Calcutta Law Reports that because in case of acceleration the whole life-estate has been withdrawn, therefore, a widow may not alienate for legal necessity anything less than the whole estate in which she has her life-interest. Such a contention, we do not think, was ever made before. It certainly never has been made in this High Court and never seriously been considered here.

(2) 19 I. A. 50; 19 C. 236; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 88; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 603.

MOTI RAIJI v. LALDAS JIRHAI,

(3) 10 C. 1102; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 737.

MOTI RAIJI v. LALDAS JIBHAI.

Having thus endeavoured to make as clear as possible the fundamental distinctions between a true acceleration and an alienation for legal necessity, having endeavoured to show that neither in principle nor in practice have they any logical connection with each other, we will return to the facts of the present case, in order to decide whether those facts do reveal and constitute a good case of true acceleration. The learned Judge below has laid down the conditions of acceleration with perfect correctness. So far we are in entire agreement with him. But we do not think that the facts fulfil those conditions. If we look at the award itself out of which this acceleration is said to have arisen, we feel quite incapable of separating its parts and giving it a different construction as a result of this separation from that which read as a whole it seems naturally to bear. What the widow had to do was to surrender her life-interest in the whole of her husband's mortgaged estate to the plaintiff, the next reversioner, upon the plaintiff having redeemed that estate, at about half the figure at which it was mortgaged, from the mortgagee, and thereupon the plaintiff in turn had to restore to the widow what amounts roughly to about one-third of the entire estate, and we cannot allow ourselves to be blinded by mere formulary expressions to the true nature of the entire arrangement contemplated by the parties. That appears to us to be so plain upon the face of the document that it can admit of no serious doubt. The learned Judge below supposed that if consideration were needed for acceleration at all, the consideration to be found here was the redemption of the property by the plaintiffs for a sum of Rs. 1,700. Without going too closely into that, and allowing that it might in one view be regarded as consideration, it is strange that the learned Judge should apparently have overlooked what is so obviously the substantial, natural and true consideration flowing from the plaintiffs to the widow. That, beyond all question or doubt, was the immediate restitution to her for her life of one-third of the entire estate, and we can see no difference in principle between such an arrangement and a reservation at the time of an intended acceleration by the life-tenant of a substantial interest in the estate so accelerated. Stripping off all verbiage, it comes to this and no more. The widow might have said: "I will surrender two-thirds of my husband's estate to the next reversioner retaining one-third for the remainder of my life." The addition of the word "maintenance" in the award really makes, we think, no difference whatever. The two acts are reciprocal, and the test is simple. If the widow had refused to carry out her part of the agreement, would any Court have compelled her to do so without at the same time compelling the plaintiff to perform his? The result thus arrived at is precisely that which, upon a true application of the principle of acceleration, makes a nominal acceleration of this kind bad and void in the eye of the law. For for reasons of policy, as indicated by their Lordships of the Privy Council, it is absolutely necessary that the widow should withdraw her entire life-estate, this being the only guarantee that the acceleration is genuine, and not made from corrupt motives in order to favour a special reversioner. Entertaining doubt, as I do, of the desirability of ever introducing this doctrine of the English Law into the Hindu Law of this country (I do not think that it ever really was a part of the Hindu Law), I feel no doubt whatever that its application must be confined within the narrowest limits. Any undue loose extension of it might give rise to dishonest transactions and complicated litigation. Whether or not consideration ought to be regarded at all as part of a good acceleration, this much is certain that consideration of the kind we find expressed in this award is really no consideration, but a reservation in the widow's interest of a very substantial part of her original life-estate, and that violates the fundamental basis of the theoretical doctrine of acceleration. In our opinion that alone is sufficient to show that this was in no sense a case of acceleration, and we are not disposed to stretch the law so as to include a single doubtful case, nor do we consider that there are any merits or equities in the plaintiffs' favour which require us to do so.

There remains one other point, and that a point of considerable nicety, to be dealt with before we come to our final conclusion. In the Court of First Appeal, as well as in the lower Court, the learned Judges appear to have thought that upon the general ground that no man shall take advantage of his own fraud, the defendant No. 2 cannot in this suit at any rate contest the plaintiffs' claim to possession, and the learned Judge of second appeal relies upon two cases, one of Anant Sitarambawa Pujari v. Ramchandra Atmaram (4), decided by Farran, C. J., and Candy, J., and another much more recent case, Hillaya Subbaya Hedge v. Narayanappa Timmaya (5), decided by Russell, J., and Chandavarkar, J. In the first of these cases the learned Judges held that the defendant being a tenant of the plaintiff, and having let in fraudulently and collusively the 2nd defendant who denied the landlord's title, the latter could not be allowed to resist the landlord's suit to recover possession, but must first surrender, and then set up any title he had in a separate suit. This proceeds merely upon the ground of constructive estoppel as between landlord and tenant, although their Lordships appear to have put it upon the much wider ground of the maxim that no man shall take advantage of his own fraud.

MOTI RAJJI v. LALDAS JIBHAI.

The second was a case of a mortgagor retaining possession of his land, against whom the mortgagee brought a suit upon the mortgage for possession. The mortgagor was found to have let in another person who claimed by title paramount, and the Courts held that that person could not resist the mortgagee's suit. He was first to give over possession and then sue on his own title. The latter case goes very far and the learned Judges expressly put it upon the ground of estoppel. It is a somewhat confusing case, because there is much in the judgment of the learned Judge who delivered judgment which is difficult to reconcile with the statement of facts upon which the judgment is based. However that may be, assuming that any given case is not one of estoppel, but referable to the general maxim that a man shall not take advantage of his own fraud, there are obviously two points first to be looked at, one is whether the person against whom this maxim is used has really committed a fraud at all; and the next is whether, assuming that he has committed a constructive fraud, that has given him any advantage in the particular issue he is contesting. Now it is perfectly obvious upon examination not only of the case-law on the subject, but of the theoretical test of the notion embodied in the maxim, compared with that of estoppel, that the two are quite distinct. The maxim applies to a great number of cases in which there need be no estoppel at all. It being remembered that estoppel is always and in strictness no more than a rule of evidence, it is clear that its operation would hardly extend to cases which yet might well fall under the broad equitable maxim. It is easy to put cases of that kind in which there could have been no misrepresentation by the alleged fraud-feasor, in which his conduct may have been throughout wholly unknown to the plaintiff who seeks to shut him out of Court on the ground of his fraud. But there are cases, such as those which I have already mentioned, relied upon by the Courts below in which the two grounds of exclusion may appear to overlap, and certainly are not easy to keep definitely and distinctly apart. That is because of the ease with which a constructive estoppel is raised and entertained by the Courts. Allowing the fullest weight both to the legal maxim and to cases of constructive estoppel, we still have to deal with the facts before us, and we shall deal with them particularly with reference to the two points we have noted, first, whether the defendant No. 2 has really been guilty of any fraud at all; secondly, whether, if so, that fraud has given him any advantage in the special issue to be determined between him and the plaintiff. This is clearly not a case now of constructive estoppel, such as might be extracted from the mortgagee in possession fraudulently and collusively handing over the security to a third party, knowing that party is not claiming through him and intending to resist the mortgagor, should he seek to redeem, by paramount title. For, as far as we can see, whatever relation between the mortgagor and mortgagee might have been brought into existence by the award of 1893, that must clearly have come to an end, when the defendant No. 1 Bechar reconveyed the property to the plaintiff by a registered instrument in 1906. The matter has been complicated by the introduction of the sub-mortgagee, and it is only by reason of that introduction that the Courts below appear to have found their way without much difficulty to the conclusion that the original mortgagee Bechar being the plaintiff's tenant, since the sub-mortgagee assigned to the plaintiff, there arises a constructive estoppel against defendant No. 2 who has thus been let into the tenant's possession. That might be so, if we assume that the assignment of the sub-mortgage by Desai to the plaintiffs really conveyed to the plaintiffs any subsisting rights against his own mortgagee, the defendant No. 1. But if we look to the terms of the conveyance itself, and if we look further back to the origin of the rights of the parties in the award of 1893, we find some difficulty in coming to this conclusion. Although in this suit the plaintiff is not ostensibly suing as a mortgagor to redeem, that is the only true legal ground upon which his right in this suit can be placed. Under the award he had the right, we will say, to redeem Bechar on payment of Rs. 1,700, and he had no other right whatever. Accordingly, in 1906, although by that time any right which he may have had on the award of 1893 had long been time-barred, he actually does obtain a conveyance from the mortgagee on consideration of his paying off the sub-mortgagee and at the same time handing over the balance to the original mortgagee. Looked at as a whole then, the result of this transaction appears to be that the payment by the plaintiff to the sub-mortgagee Desai was no more than a payment by the mortgagee's agent to his sub-mortgagee, and any benefit arising from such payment ought certainly to have gone to the mortgagee and not to the plaintiffs, mortgagors. Look at the transaction a little more closely, and it comes to this. The plaintiffs had to pay Bechar Rs. 1,700. Bechar, in anticipation of receiving that sum, reconveys the whole property to the plaintiffs, which we may observe he was not bound to do. Suppose the plaintiffs, Bechar and Desai had all three met together at this time, and pursuant to the true and honest intent of the parties, the plaintiffs had handed Rs. 1,700 to Bechar, and Bechar thereout had immediately given Rs. 1,000 to Desai, can it be said that the plaintiffs by such a payment would have acquired any of the rights of Desai against Bechar? We think there can be but one answer. We think that that is in effect what happened, though it has been obscured by the forms through which the parties have gone. The money paid to Desai was not in any real sense the plaintiffs' money. It was Bechar's money paid in advance for Bechar, not money paid by the plaintiffs independently on their account to Desai. Therefore, we think that the plaintiffs cannot take advantage of the assignment which Desai then gave them, if they seek to use it adversely to Bechar. We think that the moment Bechar reconveyed the mortgaged estate to the plaintiffs, he ceased to fill the character of a mortgagee at all and in any view can be on no higher footing than that of a lienor for the unpaid balance of the purchase-money. And, speaking for myself, I am not aware that the person so situated would be under any fiduciary obligation to the owner of the property. So far from that being the case, by surrendering the property to another person claiming by title paramount he would only jeopardise his own lien. By this analysis, we have surmounted most of the difficulties arising out of the case-law which doubtless appeared so insurmountable to the two lower Courts of Appeal, and led them to the conclusion that Bechar stood in a fiduciary relation to the plaintiffs, that he betrayed that relation in making over possession to defendant No. 2, and that as a result of that breach of trust defendant No. 2 has gained a substantial advantage by being on the record of this suit at all, and, therefore, must not be allowed to contest the plaintiffs' claim. We think that the whole of that reasoning is erroneous, as we have shown. But even assuming for a moment that there may have been some fiduciary relation, constructive probably, if at all, between Bechar and the plaintiffs, and supposing that that has been used so as to bring the defendant No. 2 upon the record, we should still have to ask ourselves whether in the very definite issue between himself and the plaintiffs, he has gained any advantage whatever. Speaking for myself again, I should doubt it. It is quite true that had this been a mortgage suit, and nothing more (whereas in form it is a suit in ejectment and nothing more), a person claiming by title paramount both to mortgagor and mortgagee finds no place in such a suit. But in a suit in ejectment it may be doubted whether the plaintiff could fairly say that the defendant's position is not stronger here than it would have been had the defendant No. 1 been no more than a transferee since 1906, and gone out of possession and let the defendant No. 2 in. There is a very definite issue to be tried between defendant No. 2 and the plaintiffs, and whether it were tried in this or another suit, I cannot see that the de facto possession of the one or the other party would be of the least advantage in obtaining a determination of that issue. The defendant No. 2 comes in as an adopted son claiming to divest from the moment of his adoption the widow's estate, and, therefore, to challenge all alienations made by her. Now the plaintiffs admittedly were not in possession of the property which they sue to recover as mortgagors. They are met by the adopted son claiming to be in possession, and the most that the plaintiffs could say, as far as I can see, would be that but for the defendant No. 2 having been let into possession by defendant No. 1, he could not have appeared in this suit at all. Then at any rate he would have appeared very shortly in another suit, and there could be no question of limitation in the matter, so the issue raised would again have been raised there, and as I said just now the de facto possession of one or the other party would have been entirely irrelevant, and certainly could not have given a party so placed any advantage over the other.

(4) (1897) P. J. 273.

(5) 12 Ind. Cas. 913; 56 B. 185; 13 Bom. L. R. 1200.

MOTI RAIJI v. LALDAS JIBHAI.

MOTI RAJJI v. LALDAS JIBHAI.

Divesting, by an after-made adoption, estate which had in the meantime vested, is a question we should have had to consider had we found that the award of 1893 was a true acceleration. It came in for a good deal of discussion in the course of the argument, and I should like to make one or two observations upon it.

Courts usually answer it uniformly and with much confidence, it may, indeed, be regarded as settled law, that a subsequent adoption will not divest estates vested before it was made. And the question often takes the awkward and inexact form of whether a given adoption is a valid adoption to the property of the deceased adoptive father.

Such a case as that of an acceleration first taking place, and then the widow adopting, has, we believe, never formed the subject of judicial decision. The point of difficulty is to find any single, clear and uniform principle upon which (a) to rest the law commonly favoured in the Courts where it is a case of after adoption, and (b) to distinguish such a case from that of a posthumous natural son. In the latter case, it could only be on the assumption that his rights arise upon his conception, that he could be put upon a different footing from an after-adopted son. But I doubt whether that ground can be justified in the Hindu Law proper.

Suppose a Hindu begets a son and dies next day. What difference in principle can there be between his case, and that of a son adopted exactly nine months after the death of the adopted father? The rule in the Tagore case [Jotindra Mohan Tagore v. Ganendra Mohan Tagore (6)] puts after-adopted and posthumous natural sons on the same footing as donees, and exactly the same principle would, it is submitted, have to be applied to cases of the kind we have in view. Reasoning to be found in some of the reported cases against allowing an after-adopted son to divest estates vested in the meantime, will not do. There we find it said that the true reason is that until a widow does adopt no one can say whether she will or not. But it is as true to say that a widow left pregnant cannot say, nor can any one say, whether she will give birth to a child at all, or if she does whether that child will be a son. A son adopted fifteen years after his adoptive father's death would certainly not be allowed to divest estates which during that period might have vested more than once in others. But a posthumous son born a week after his father's death, almost certainly would.

(6) 18 W. R. 359; 9 B. L. R. 377; Sup. Vol. I. A. 47; 2 Suth P. C. J. 692; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 82.

MOTI RAJI V. LALDAS JIBHAI.

Yet a very little reflection will show that the element of time has really nothing to do with the operation of any uniform principle rightly applicable to all cases of the kind. Nor upon a rigorous analysis is it easy to discover any ground upon which to distinguish the case of an after-adopted from that of an after-born son.

Holding as we do that there has been no acceleration here, it amounts to this and no more than that there has been an alienation of two-thirds of the property to reversioners, and we are unable to draw any distinction between an alienation to a reversioner and an alienation to a third person. If the alienation be in any true sense an alienation, then it must be governed by the general law which requires for the validation of all such alienations legal necessity, and we have already, we think, given sufficient reasons for holding that in this case legal necessity cannot be said even to be alleged, much less proved, while the doctrine of acceleration will not assist the plaintiffs. The conclusion we have come to upon the whole case is that the defendant No. 2, appellant here, is entitled to resist the plaintiffs' claim as the adopted son, that he is entitled to allege that the widow's alienation of 1893 under the award was not for legal necessity, and as such became void against him at the moment of his adoption. He is, therefore, now, in our opinion, entitled to have that alienation set aside in his favour. We must, therefore, allow the appeal and dismiss the plaintiffs' claim with all costs.

HEATON, J.—I agree in the conclusions arrived at. I feel no doubt whatever in my own mind that this is not a case of acceleration. In the case referred to, viz., Behari Lal v. Madho Lal Ahir Gayawal (2), in the judgment of the Privy Council, it is said: "It was essentially necessary to withdraw her own life-estate, so that the whole estate should get vested at once in the grantee. The necessity of the removal of the obstacle of the life-estate is a practical check on the frequency of such conveyances." That clearly brings out the idea that for an acceleration there must be an absolute annihilation of the widow's interest, as complete as if she were dead. In this case it seems to me from the terms of the award that there was no annihilation of the widow's interest. Far from that there was a securing to her of a life-interest of about a third of the entire estate, and to regard that as an acceleration seems to me the same as allowing to be done by means of a trick or device that which is forbidden by law. Having once arrived at the conclusion that there is no acceleration, we simply have to deal with an alienation. That, I entirely agree, is something different from, and antagonistic to, an acceleration. Having only an alienation to deal with, we have the very common case of an adopted son seeking to set aside an alienation made by his adoptive mother before the adoption and when it is admitted, as it is in this case, that there was no necessity for the alienation, that alienation can be set aside. I also think that the circumstances of the case show that there is nothing in equity which should prevent us from dealing with the defence set up by the defendant No. 2 and deciding the case on that defence if it is made good, as in this case it has been made good. It seems to me quite wrong to describe what has happened as a fraud which has been participated in not by defendant No. 2 himself, for he is a minor, but by his guardian. It is perfectly true that from a certain point of view there might appear some degree of meanness about the line of conduct which defendant No. 1 Bechar, the natural father of the adopted boy, has pursued. Failing to get what he considered his rights by any other means, he adopted the expedient of giving his son in adoption to Raiji's widow Lala. But, however mean a transaction this may appear to be, it is perfectly legal. The adoption is a perfectly good adoption, and converts the defendant N. 2 into the son of Raiji with the rights of a son. So long as the thing is legal, I cannot see that to resort to it as a means of asserting one's rights can be termed a fraud. There is also another point of view. If one were to analyse the conduct of the different parties who have taken part in this long series of transactions, the litigation, the devices, the delays, the refusal for years to give effect to the award which had been assented to by all, it seems to me that it is drawing very fine distinctions to single out any one particular party and describe his conduct as fraudulent in comparison with that of the others. For these reasons, and others which my learned colleague has stated much more fully and analytically, I agree in the decree which has been ordered.

MOHAMMAD LATIF KHAN v. BAJO KOIRI.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 552 OF 1916.

December 8, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad.

MOHAMMAD LATIF KHAN—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BAJO KOIRI—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT.

Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI B. C. of 1908), s. 208—Bengal Rent Recovery Act (VIII of 1865), ss. 11, 4, 16—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 138—Auction-purchaser, rights of—Suit for possession—Limitation.

A purchaser under a sale held under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act is entitled to be put in possession of the property purchased by him under section 11 of the Bengal Rent Recovery Act. If he fails to obtain possession under that Act, his remedy to obtain possession by a civil suit is not barred, if the suit is brought within twelve years of the sale as required by Article 138 of the Limitation Act.

Appeal against the decree of the Judicial Commissioner, Chota Nagpur, dated the 28th February 1916, confirming that of the Munsif, Chapra, dated the 26th March 1915.

Mr. Mustafa Khan, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant is the landlord of the respondent. He purchased the holding of the respondent in execution of his rent decree. The sale was held in February 1910. He did not apply for delivery of possession and the holding is still in possession of the respondent. In May 1914 he instituted the present suit in the Court of the Munsif of Chapra for recovery of possession of the land purchased by him at the auction-sale. The lower Appellate Court has dismissed the suit, holding that the plaintiff has no remedy in the Civil Court as he failed to seek his relief in the Revenue Court that held the sale. I think that this view is incorrect. It is open to the purchaser at an auction-sale to apply to the Court that held the sale for delivery of possession, or to bring a regular suit. The two remedies are concurrent: Kishori Mohun Roy Chowdhry v. Chunder Nath Pal (1), Bhagwati v. Banwari Lal (2). In Sasibhusan Mookerjee v. Razhanath Bose (3) it was laid down that if the auction-purchaser were to sue the judgment-debtor for declaration of title and for recovery of possession at any time within twelve years from the confirmation of sale, there would be no answer to the claim of the auction-purchaser. The above authorities have been followed recently by the Full Bench of this Court in Abdul Gani v. Raja Ram (4), where the question was whether an appeal lies from an order under rule 95 of Order XXI of the Code of Civil Procedure. I do not find any difference in sales held under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, VI of 1908, section 208, read with the Bengal Rent Recovery Act, VIII of 1865, sections 4 to 16, and those held under the Code of Civil Procedure. The title vests in the purchaser under the sale held under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, and the purchaser is entitled to be put in possession under section 11 of the Rent Recovery Act. If he fails to obtain possession under that Act, his remedy to obtain possession by a civil suit is not barred. The purchaser's remedy is alternative and if the suit is brought within twelve years from the date of the confirmation of the sale, it will not be barred under Article 138 of the Limitation Act. I, therefore, hold that the present suit is not barred. The appeal is decreed with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 14 C. 644; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 427.

(2) 1 Ind. Cas. 416; 31 A. 82; 6 A. L. J. 71; 5 M. L. T. 185.

(3) 25 Ind. Cas. 267; 19 C. W. N. 835 at p. 840; 20 C. L. J. 433.

(4) 85 Ind. Cas. 468; 1 P. L. J. 232; 20 C. W. N. 829.

SARAT CHUNDRA DUTTA v. JADAB CHUNDRA GOSWAMI.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 27 OF 1915.

May 23, 1916.

Present:—Sir Lancelot Sanderson, Kt,
Chief Justice, and Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, Kt.

SARAT CHUNDRA DUTTA—DEFENDANT

—APPELLANT

versus

JADAB CHUNDRA GOSWAMI—

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 107, scope of—Tenancy-at-will—Writing and registration, whether necessary—Agreement to pay specified annual rent, whether tenancy from year to year.

The first paragraph of section 107 of the Transfer of Property Act is restricted in its terms only to the three specified classes of leases enumerated therein, viz., (1) a tenancy from year to year, (2) a lease for any term exceeding one year and (3), a lease reserving an annual rent. In these three cases registration is necessary. [p. 957, col. 1.]

An agreement to pay a specified rent every year is not conclusive proof that the tenancy is from year to year. [p. 957, col. 2.]

Durgi Nikarini v. Goberdhan Bose, 24 Ind. Cas. 183; 20 C. L. J. 448; 19 C. W. N. 525 and Gobinda Chandra Saha v. Dwarka Nath Patita, 26 Ind. Cas. 962; 20 C. L. J. 455; 19 C. W. N. 439, followed.

A tenancy-at-will can be created verbally and leases which do not come within the first paragraph of section 107 can be proved by oral evidence. [p. 957, col. 2.]

Surabh Narain Lal v. Catherine Sophia, 1 C. W. N. 248; Fazel Sheikh v. Karamuddi Sheikh, 6 C. W. N. 916; Sita Nath Pal v. Kartick Gharmi, 8 C. W. N. 434; and Venkatagiri Zamindar v. Raghava, 9 M. 142; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 496, referred to.

Appeal against the following decree of Mr. Justice Mullick, dated the 1st of February 1915, in Appeal from Appellate Decree No. 2885 of 1912.

"The plaintiff sues the defendant for the rents of the years 1314 to 1317. The defendant denies the relationship of landlord and tenant. The land is situated in the Pabna Municipality and the case is, therefore, governed by the Transfer of Property Act. The plaintiff bases his claim on an oral agreement of tenancy. It is admitted that under section 107 of the Transfer of Property Act, the tenancy could not have been created without a lease, but the learned Munsif, finding that the tenancy is established by an ex parte rent decree and by the admission of the defendant himself in a previous suit, has decreed the claim. On appeal the learned Subordinate Judge was of opinion that the tenancy could not be proved except by an instrument and that a suit for rent was not maintainable, and further that no damages for use and occupation could be decreed as they were not specifically claimed. The suit having been dismissed the plaintiff prefers this second appeal.

It is quite clear that although there is no registered instrument, it is open to the plaintiff to prove by other evidence the fact of the tenancy. The learned Subordinate Judge finds that the evidence adduced would prove a tenancy if it were admissible. In these circumstances it is unnecessary to remand the case. The tenancy being established, the question is what rent should be paid. The previous rent decree does not work an estoppel, but it is evidence of the amount payable.

On the other hand the defendant has given no evidence to show that he is not liable to pay this amount. I think the learned Munsif's decree is correct.

With regard to the claim for 1314 which has been held to be barred by limitation, there is no cross-appeal. The result is that the decree of the learned Subordinate Judge is set aside and that of the learned Munsif restored. The appeal is decreed with costs."

Babus Mohini Mohan Chukravartty and Abinas Chandra Chakravartty, for the Appellant.

Dr. D. N. Mitter and Babu Baikuntha Nath Mitter, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

SANDERSON, C. J.—In this case I think this appeal should be dismissed. It is clear that on the merits the defendant has no case whatever. The learned Munsif in the Court below found that the story which the defendant set up was a shamelessly false one. Now the defendant tries to defend this action on a technicality based upon section 107 of the Transfer of Property Act. In my judgment his defence is without foundation. That section deals with certain classes of tenancy which are therein mentioned, namely, a tenancy from year to year, or for any term exceeding one year or reserving a yearly rent, and which can be made only by a registered instrument, WUTHRIK v. DAVID.

It has not been shown in this case that the tenancy in question which must now admittedly be taken to exist was one of those mentioned in the section. On the other hand, the facts are as set out by the learned Munsif in his judgment. He said: "The defendant entered into the land as a tenant of the plaintiff, paid rent for it for a number of years, allowed a decree to be passed against him without any contest and admitted the tenancy in the defence he raised in Mahananda's suit. The parties have so long conducted themselves as landlord and tenant, I think, that the defendant is estopped from questioning the validity of the settlement which has been acquiesced in and acted upon." These being the facts of the case, I think the judgment of Mr. Justice Mullick was right, and there is no reason for disturbing the judgment and this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

MOOKERJEE, J.—I agree that the judgment of Mr. Justice Mullick must be affirmed.

The contention of the appellant is based upon a misapprehension of the provisions of section 107 of the Transfer of Property Act. That section does not lay down that a lease of immoveable property can be made only by a registered instrument, but the Legislature has provided that a lease of immoveable property in three specified cases can be made only by a registered instrument. These cases are, first, a lease from year to year, secondly, a lease for any term exceeding one year, and thirdly, a lease reserving a yearly rent. In the case before us, the plaintiff alleged that the defendant was a tenant-at-will, that his holding was of a temporary character, was non-transferable and was liable to be terminated by notice to quit. The plaintiff also stated that the defendant had entered upon the land on these conditions and had agreed to pay rent at the rate of Rs. 6 a year.

It is now contended that because there was an agreement to pay rent at the rate of Rs. 6 a year the tenancy must be regarded as a tenancy from year to year. In my opinion, there is no foundation for this contention. As explained in Durgi Nikarini v. Gobarthan Bose (1) and Gobinda Chandra Saha v. Dwarka Nath Patita (2), the fact that the rent is reserved at so much a year does not conclusively show that the tenancy is from year to year. It is not the case of the plaintiff that the defendant holds under a tenancy from year to year; his case is that the defendant is a tenant-at-will, and a tenancy-at-will undoubtedly can be created verbally, notwithstanding the provisions of section 107 of the Transfer of Property Act.

It was finally suggested that even if the defendant be a tenant-at-will, the terms of the tenancy can be established only by means of a written lease and the amount of rent payable in respect of it cannot be proved by oral evidence. There is no foundation for this argument. Numerous cases may be found in the books, where it has been held that the terms of a tenancy which does not come within section 107 of the Transfer of Property Act can be proved by oral evidence: Surabh Narain Lal v. Catherine Sophia (3), Fazel Sheikh v. Keramvddi Sheikh (4), Sita Nath Pal v. Kartick Gharmi (5) and Venka'agiri Zamindar v. Raghava (6).

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 26 Ind. Cas. 962; 20 C. L. J. 455; 19 C. W. N. 489.

(3) 1 C. W. N. 248.

(4) 6 C. W. N. 916.

(5) 8 C. W. N. 434.

(6) 9 M. 142; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 496.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 204 of 1916.

October 24, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Srinivasa Aiyangar.

O. WUTHRIK, E. Q.—PLAINTIFF—

PETITIONER

versus

DAVID—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 83—Alien enemy, suit by—Lease granted by alien enemy as agent of non-enemy subject, enforceability of—Contracts with alien enemies, principles affecting, validity of.

The prohibition as regards intercourse between hostile aliens is confined only to commercial dealings and does not render illegal all contracts whatever be their nature. It extends to contracts which tend to increase the enemy's resources and

(1) 24 Ind. Cas. 183; 20 C. L. J. 448; 19 C. W. N. 525.

WUTHRIK v. DAVID.

every kind of trading or commercial dealing, but does not prevent an agreement made in enemy territory to pay money there out of funds accruing there. [p. 959, cols. 1 & 2.]

A lease granted, after the commencement of hostilities, by an alien enemy in British India on behalf of one who is not shown to be an enemy subject, the rent whereof is intended to be used in this country and by persons who are not enemies, is enforceable. [p. 958, col. 2; p. 959, col. 2.]

Kershaw v. Kelsey, 100 Mass. 561, referred to.

In any event, there is no objection to an action being laid on the lease when it is brought by an agent, who is not an enemy subject. [p. 958, col. 2; p. 959, col. 2.]

Enemy subjects resident in British Territory who are permitted to remain are not alien enemies and can contract like subjects, whether such permission is express or implied. The permission should be presumed in the case of aliens who were residing in British Territory before the outbreak of war and who continue to remain after such outbreak, unless they are ordered to remove themselves within a certain time and they do not. [p. 959, col. 1.]

Wells v. Williams, 1 Salk. 46; 91 E. R. 45; 1 Ld. Raym. 282; Daubigny v. Davallon, (1794) 2 Anst. 462; 145 E. R. 936; 3 R. R. 613; Janson v. Driefontein Consolidated Mines, Ltd., (1902) A. C. 484; 71 L. J. K. B. 857; 87 L. T. 372; 7 Com. Cas. 268; 18 T. L. R. 796; Schaffinius v. Goldberg, (1916) 1 K. B. 284 at p. 292; 85 L. J. K. B. 374, referred to.

Principles relative to intercourse between the subjects of belligerents after commencement of hostilities discussed. [p. 958, col. 2; p. 959, cols. 1 & 2.]

Petition, under section 25 of Act IX of 1837, praying the High Court to revise the decree of the Court of the District Munsiff at Karkul, in Small Cause Suit No. 412 of 1915.

Dr. S. Swaminathan, for the Appellant,
Mr. B. Seetharama Rao, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This a suit to recover rent. The plea is that the lease was granted by, and the covenant to pay rent entered into with, an alien enemy and the covenant was, therefore, void and unenforceable. The Trial Judge accepted the plea and dismissed the suit and this application is to revise the decree. To make the plea intelligible it is only necessary to state the following facts. The land leased is in South Canara in British Territory and belongs to the Basel Evangelical Mission. The lease was granted by Mr. Buhus, a German, the then Secular Agent of the Mission, on October 2, 1914, after war was declared, to the defendant, a British subject. The suit to recover rent was instituted by the present Secular Agent of the Mission, one Mr. Wuthrik. Enemy character was not attributed to the Basel Mission; at any rate, no point was raised about it in the lower Court and there are no materials on record to determine the nationality of the Mission. We know nothing about its constitution; whether it is a trading corporation, or a corporation at all, how and under what authority was it constituted, who are its members, or what is its principal place of residence or business, if any, we do not know.

Again, there was no contention that the plaintiff Mr. Wuthrik is an alien enemy and was not entitled to sue in British Indian Courts by reason of the prohibition contained in section 83 of the Code.

There was, further, no contention that Herr Buhus could not, after, the declaration of war, act or continue to act as the Agent of the Mission, i. e., that the Basel Mission could not, after war was declared, appoint a German as Agent or if there was a previous contract of agency, that agency was abrogated by the war.

The only question then is whether the covenant to pay rent is void as Herr Buhus was a German. I am not familiar with this branch of law, but on the best investigation that I could make of this matter, for the present purpose, I have arrived at the following conclusions as best supported by authority:

(1) On a declaration of war the citizens or subjects of the belligerents become enemies of each other and political status determines the question of enemy ownership. Vattel Droit des Gens, liv. 3, c. 5, section 70 (cited at page 494 of 1902 Appeal Cases). [Janson v. Driefontein Consolidated Mines Ltd. (1)]. The Beneto Estenger (2) at page 571 per Fuller, Chief Justice.

(2) On a declaration of war it appears the sovereign has in theory full right to take the persons and confiscate the tangible property of the enemy found within his territory; this right, however, is said to be a naked and impolitic right condemned by the enlightened conscience and judgment of modern times, Hang'v. Abbott (3), and in practice is not likely to be resorted to except in case of public necessity or by way of reprisal; but a

(1) (1902) A. C. 484 at p. 499; 71 L. J. K. B. 857; 87 L. T. 372; 7 Com. Cas. 268; 18 T. L. R. 796.

(2) 176 U. S. 568; 44 Law. Ed. 592.

(3) 6 Wall. 532 at p. 536; 18 Law. Ed. 939.

WUTHRIK v. DAVID.

declaration of war per se does not import a confiscation of enemy property found on land or on the high seas. Brown v. United States (4).

(3) During war all commercial intercourse and trading between enemies is illegal unless sanctioned by the authority of the Government. Persons resident in enemy country, whatever their nationality, are treated as enemies as far as relates to their trade. Their commercial domicile during war or their war domicile determines their enemy character. Janson v. Driefontein Consolidated Mines Ltd. (1); at page 499 per Lord Davey, at pages 505 and 506 per Lord Lindley. From this it follows that enemy subjects resident in British Territory who are permitted to remain are not alien enemies, and can contract like subjects. Whether such permission should be express or may be implied by a person being allowed to remain is a point on which there appears to be some diversity of opinion; but the weight of authority appears to favour the view, at any rate in the case of aliens who were residing in British Territory before the outbreak of war and who continue to remain after such outbreak, that permission should be presumed, unless they are ordered to remove themselves within a certain time and they do not. This, I think, is the effect of the decisions in Wells v. Williams (5), Daubigny v. Davallon (6), Janson v. Driefontein Consolidated Mines Ltd. (1), bottom of page 505 and top of page 503, per Lord Lindley, Kershaw v. Kelsey (7), Schoffenius v. Goldberg (8).

4. The prohibition as regards intercourse between hostile aliens is on the best authority confined only to commercial intercourse and does not render illegal all contracts whatever be their nature. The question was elaborately discussed in the leading case of Kershaw v. Kelsey (7) by Gray, J., and the conclusion reached that the prohibition extended only to intercourse between citizens of the two belligerents which was inconsistent with the state of war between them, including any act or contract which tends to increase his resources and every kind of trading or commercial dealing, but it did not prevent an agreement made in enemy territory to pay money there out of funds accruing there. It was also said that when a creditor, although a subject of the enemy, remains in the country of the debtor or has a known agent there, authorised to receive the amount of the debt during war, payment there to such creditor or his agent can, in no respect, be construed as a violation of the duties imposed by the war. This appears to be the opinion of Lord Davey and Lord Lindley in Janson v. Driefontein Consolidated Mines, Ltd. (1) and of Lord Stowell in 'The Hoop' (9). In Willison v. Patteson (10) it is said in general terms that all contracts with an alien enemy are void, but the drawing of the bill in that case appears to be a commercial transaction and involved in the withdrawing of money from England to France. In The Julia (11) Story, J., took a different view, but the observations appear to be obiter. In United States v. Lane (12) Davis, J., said: "By a universally recognized principle of public law commercial intercourse between states at war with each other is interdicted."

If either of the last two conclusions is correct, there can be no doubt that the defendant's plea is not an answer to the suit. It is not said that Mr. Buhus came into British India after the declaration of war. Again the lease cannot be said to be a commercial transaction; the rent payable was intended apparently to be used in this country for the purpose of the Mission. The case of Kershaw v. Kelsey (7) appears to be on all fours with the present case and is precisely in point.

I, therefore, reverse the decree of the lower Court and remand the suit for trial according to law. Costs will abide.

Petition allowed; Suit remanded.

(9) (1799) 1 Ch. Rob. 196 at p. 199; 1 Engl. Pri. Cas. 104.

(10) (1817) 7 Taunt. 439; 1 Moore 133; 129 E. R. 176; 18 E. R. 525.

(11) 8 Cranch 181 at p. 193; 3 Law. Ed. 528.

(12) 8 Wall. 185 at p. 195; 19 Law. Ed. 445.

(4) 8 Cranch 110; 3 Law. Ed. 504.

(5) 1 Salk. 46; 91 E. R. 45; 1 Ld. Raym. 282.

(6) (1794) 2 Anst. 462; 145 E. R. 936; 3 R. R. 613.

(7) 100 Mass. 561.

(8) (1916) 1 K. B. 284 at p. 292; 85 L. J. K. B. 374.

PUNCHA V. BINDESWARI.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 3828 OF 1912.

December 21, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sharfuddin and
Mr. Justice Roe.PUNCHA THAKUR AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS*versus*

BINDESWARI THAKUR AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Custom, essentials of—Temple, ancient—Intention of founder—Presumption—Transfer of right to receive offerings made to temple, validity of—Public policy—Estoppel, whether can validate invalid transfer.

Custom, in order to prevail against the general law, must be proved to be immemorial, reasonable, certain and continued without interruption since its immemorial origin. [p. 962, col. 1.]

Rajah Vurmah Valia v. Ravi Vurmah Kunhi Kutty, 1 M. 235 (P. C.); 4 I. A. 76; 1 Ind. Jur. 134; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 687; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 382; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 156, and Mahamaya Debi v. Haridas Haldar, 27 Ind. Cas. 400; 19 C. W. N. 208; 20 C. L. J. 183; 42 C. 455, referred to.

Where the origin of a foundation is lost in antiquity, then unless a custom to the contrary is established, it must be presumed that the original founder intended, in making his delegation of the powers of worship to certain persons, that those powers should remain in their hands for the good of the temple and the convenience of the public, and that it is against public policy that persons to whom those powers of worship have been delegated should of their own free will make a delegation of those powers to a third party. [p. 962, col. 1.]

In the case of such a foundation a custom permitting alienation is not established by six undisputed transfers. [p. 962, col. 1.]

A transfer of the right to receive offerings made to a temple is, therefore, void as against public policy. [p. 962, col. 1.]

Rajah Vurmah Valia v. Ravi Vurmah Kunhi Kutty, 1 M. 235 (P. C.); 4 I. A. 76; 1 Ind. Jur. 134; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 687; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 382; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 156, Ramasawmy Aiyar v. Venkata Achari, 9 M. I. A. 344; 2 W. R. 21 (P. C.); 1 Suth. P. C. J. 492; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 1; 19 E. R. 771, Srimati Mallika Dasi v. Ratanmani Chakervarti, 1 C. W. N. 493 and Mahamaya Debi v. Haridas Haldar, 27 Ind. Cas. 400; 19 C. W. N. 208; 20 C. L. J. 183; 42 C. 455, referred to.

Where a transfer is contrary to public policy, neither party can make it legal by creating estoppel. [p. 962, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Officiating Additional Sub-Judge, Mozaffarpore, dated the 7th October 1912, confirming that of the Munsif, Mozaffarpore, dated the 29th June 1912.

Messrs. Lachmi Narain Sinha and Baidya Nath Narain Sinha, for the Appellants.

Mr. Gour Uhandra Pal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

ROE, J.—The property in dispute in this case is a 3-annas share in the offerings made to the temple of Sri Bhaironathji in the District of Mozaffarpore. This three annas belonged to the plaintiffs' family and was mortgaged by the plaintiff's father, who is still alive, to the defendants second party. A suit was instituted upon the basis of this mortgage and the 3-annas share was put up for sale and purchased by the defendants second party, who took out delivery of possession on the 18th January 1901 and a few days after transferred the property purchased to the defendant 1st party. On the 11th April 1911, the plaintiff instituted the present suit for a declaration that the sale (transfer?) made by the father was void as against him and that, therefore, the whole share transferred from his father's hands into the hands of the first defendant through the second defendant should be restored to the plaintiff. The ground taken for this suit was that the plaintiff's father had no right to mortgage the plaintiff's interest in this share of the offerings and that the mortgage itself and the mortgage decree were illegal and void, for the reason that the offerings were not transferable and the second party who was not either a panda or pujari could not acquire any right in it. The lower Courts concurred in holding that the property transferred by the plaintiffs' father was inalienable and that, therefore, the transfer was void. A plea of estoppel had been set up by the defendants, on the ground that the plaintiff's father having led the mortgagee to believe that the property was alienable his son cannot be heard to say that it was inalienable. On appeal to the High Court at Calcutta it was held by my learned brother sitting with Mr. Justice Coxe that the property transferred was without doubt inalienable and that statutory provisions being against the transfer, no question of estoppel would arise. An application for review was made against this judgment and admitted to hearing, on the ground that there was no statutory bar to the transfer of such a right as was transferred in this case and that there had not been by the lower Courts a sufficiently full enquiry into the origin of rights transferred by the plaintiff's father.

PUNCHA T. BINDESWARI.

The case again comes before this Court, the whole question having been laid open by the order admitting the petition for review. I have no hesitation in concurring in the conclusions arrived at in the previous judgment. I venture only, with respect, to suggest that in the last lines of that judgment for the words "statutory provisions" the words 'public policy' should be read.

My reasons for this opinion are based largely upon the decision in the Privy Council case of Rajah Vurmah Valia v. Ravi Vurma Kunhi Kutty (1). The actual facts surrounding the present endowment are lost in antiquity. No man can say who built the temple in which these offerings are made and no man can say who were the original priests to whom the right to conduct worship and receive offerings was delegated. All that we do know is that in the memory of man there have been six operative transfers of shares in the right to receive offerings and this is the seventh, and is the first in which the right of the *pujari*s to transfer their interest in future offerings has been contested. We are asked to remand the case that all these points might be gone into. But a remand for taking of fresh evidence should only be made in very special circumstances, and it is clear that no further light can be thrown upon the origin of the temple and appointment of *pujari*s and it must be presumed that out of the seven instances of transfer only one, the one before us, has been disputed before the Court. The case is in many respects similar to the Madras case upon which my opinion is based. There the original endowment had been lost in antiquity, the original founder was unknown, his original intentions in appointing a person to hold the office of the priest could not be ascertained. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee made the following observations upon a position of this nature:—

"The unknown founder may be supposed to have established this species of corporation with the distinct object of securing the due performance of the worship and the due administration of the property by the instrumentality and at the discretion of four persons capable of deliberating and bound to deliberate together he may also have considered it essential that those four persons should be the heads of particular families resident in a particular district, open to the public opinion of that district, and having that sort of family interest in the maintenance of this religious worship which would ensure its due performance. It seems very unreasonable to suppose that the founder of such a corporation ever intended to empower the four trustees of his creation at their mere will to transfer their office and its duties, with all the property of the trust, to a single individual who might act according to his sole discretion, and might have no connection with the families from which the trustees were to be taken."

Further they went on to say at page 250:

"Custom must prevail against the general law. That such would be the consequence of a well-proved and established custom their Lordships do not deny. In the present case, however, the Civil Judge has distinctly found against the existence of the custom."

That case and the case of Ramasawmy Aiyar v. Venkata Achari (2) are good authority for the proposition that where it is shown that a particular office has been by custom alienable, it is not against public policy that such transfers should take place, and as I read the decision in the latter case the alienation of the right of the pujari in that particular case was confined to persons of the same class as the transferor and equally capable with them of performing a due turn of worship. In the case of Srimati Mallika Dasi v. Ratanmani Chakravarti (3) it was distinctly laid down that the right to perform a turn of worship and receive offerings during that turn was alienable. And in Mahamaya Debi v. Haridas Haldar (4) that pro-

(1) 1 M. 235 (P. C.); 4 I. A. 76; 1 Ind. Jur. 134; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 687; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 382; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 156.

(2) 9 M. I. A. 344; 2 W. R. 21 (P. C.); 1 Suth. P. C. J. 492; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 1; 19 E. R. 771.

(3) 1 C. W. N. 493.

(4) 27 Ind. Cas. 400; 20 C. L. J. 183; 19 C. W. N. 208; 42 C. 455.

CHINTA HARARAN DAS v. RADHA CHARAN PODDAR.

position was not denied. What was asserted in that case was that prima facie the transfer of such an office was opposed to public policy but yet upon proof of a custom extending beyond the memory of man and not in itself unreasonable, it might be said that considerations of public policy no longer oppose the transfer. In the particular case then considered that custom was proved to be immemorial, reasonable, certain and continued without interruption since its immemorial origin. The principle, therefore, upon which the present case should be decided is this, that the origin of the foundation being lost in antiquity it must be presumed that the original founder intended, in making his delegation of the powers of worship to the ancestors of the plaintiffs, that those powers of worship should remain in their hands for the good of the temple and for the convenience of the public, and that it is against public policy that persons to whom these powers of worship have been delegated, should of their own free will make a delegation of those powers to a third party. Before that principle can be overridden it must be shown that there is a custom, immemorial, unbroken, reasonable, and certain. It is impossible for us to hold that by six undisputed transfers a custom, immemorial, unbroken, reasonable, and certain, has been proved. I would, therefore, hold that the mortgage made by the father of the present plaintiff in favour of the second defendant was void as against public policy and that the sale in execution of that mortgage was equally void. Where a transfer is contrary to public policy neither party can make it legal by creating estoppel.

In my view the appeal should be again dismissed with costs throughout.

SHARFUDDIN, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 1948
OF 1913.

December 6, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice N. R. Chatterjea and
Mr. Justice Newbould.

CHINTA HARARAN DAS AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RADHA CHARAN PODDAR—PLAINTIFF—
RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1903), O. XX—Decree—Court, cognizance by, of events happening after institution of suit or appeal—Jurisdiction.

In exceptional cases Courts can take cognizance of events since the institution of a suit or appeal where the adoption of such a course tends to shorten litigation and best subserve the ends of justice. [p. 963, col. 2.]

A plaintiff, therefore, is entitled to a decree for khas possession of a land on declaration of title in a suit brought for the purpose, where it is found that the defendant was holding the land under an ijara lease subsisting at the time of the institution of the suit but which expired before the date of the decree. [p. 963, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, 1st Court, Dacca, dated the 9th October 1912, reversing that of the Registrar Munsif, Munshigunj, dated the 19th of July 1910.

FACTS of the case appear from the judgment.

Babu Gunada Charan Sen (with him Babu Dwarkanath Chakravarty), for the Appellants.—The plaint itself says that there was an ijara lease of the land subsisting in favour of defendant No. 41 up to the year 1316. This ijara lease in favour of defendant No. 41 was still subsisting at the time of the institution of the suit. Plaintiff's suit ought to be dismissed under the above circumstances. Refers to Ram Ratan Sahu v. Mohant Sahu (1) and Ramanadan Ochetti v. Pulikutti Servai (2).

Plaintiffs ought to have brought a fresh suit when the lease had expired. Ramanadan Ochetti v. Pulikutti Servai (2) is quite on all fours with the present case. In Ramanadan Ochetti v. Pulikutti Servai (2) reliance has been placed upon Davis v. Kaze Abdool Hamed (3). In Davis v. Kaze Abdool Hamed (3)

(1) 6 C. L. J. 74 at p. 78; 11 C. W. N. 732.

(2) 21 M. 288; 8 M. L. J. 121; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 559.

(3) 8 W. R. 55 at p. 58.

CHINTA HARARAN DAS V. RADHA CHARAN PODDAR.

also there was that sort of lease and the landlord sued for khas possession before the termination of the lease. Vide also Molmal Illoth Krishnan Nambudri v. Secretary of State (4), which is like the present one. This class of cases has never been held to be covered by the exception to the general rule. Rai Charan Mandal v. Biswanath Mandal (5) is distinguishable. The point is whether upon the plaint as framed, the plaintiffs would be entitled to any relief. The general principle stated is in Ram Ratan Sahu v. Mohant Sahu (1). The exception has no application in this case. Your Lordships cannot allow a plaintiff change front as often as he likes. There will be no cause of action until the lease has terminated. In Davis v. Kaze Abdul Hamed (3), as above cited, the lease had been subsisting and it expired during the pendency of the suit. There was failure of cause of action of the plaintiff, still he is going to succeed.

Babu Akhoy Kumar Banerji, for the Respondents, referred to Rai Charan Mandal v. Biswanath Mandal (5) and Nuri Miah v. Ambica Singh (6), as showing that the Courts can take notice of events since the institution of a suit.

Babu Gunoda Charan Sen, in reply.—In Rai Charan Mandal v. Biswanath Mandal (5) and Nuri Miah v. Ambica Singh (6), relief could be given upon the plaint as framed and the facts in these two cases were quite different. Here the plaintiff could not get the relief asked for on the plaint as framed and his cause of action for khas possession had not arisen when the suit was instituted.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff-respondent brought the suit out of which this appeal arises, for a declaration of his title to and recovery of khas possession of the land in suit. Defendants Nos. 1 and 41 contested the suit. The former claimed the land as appertaining to his estate. The latter supported the former and pleaded that he had taken settlement from him (the defendant No. 1) and had been holding under such settlement for over 12 years. The Court of first instance found the question of title in favour of the plaintiff. There was an allegation in the plaint that there was an ijara lease of the land in favour of defendant No. 41 up to 1316, but that it was surrendered by him (the defendant No. 41) after service of notice, before the institution of the suit. The Court of first instance held that the relinquishment had not been proved, and passed a decree declaring the plaintiff's title to the land and for possession through defendant No. 41 till 1316. That decree was set aside on appeal and the case was remanded. When the case was decided after remand, the Court of first instance gave a decree to the plaintiff for khas possession as the lease had admittedly expired at the date of such decree, and that decree has been affirmed on appeal by the lower Appellate Court with some variations.

The main question argued before us is whether, having regard to the allegation in the plaint that the term of the ijara was up to 1316, the case should not be remanded to the lower Appellate Court for a finding upon the point whether the ijara lease determined before the institution of the suit. We do not think, however, that we ought to remand the case. The term of the ijara expired in 1316, i.e., before the final decree of the Court of first instance. It, no doubt, expired after the institution of the suit, but in exceptional cases Courts have taken cognizance of events since the institution of a suit on appeal, where the adoption of such a course tends to "shorten litigation and best subserve the ends of justice." The decree, therefore, which was passed by the Court of first instance originally (before remand) namely, that the plaintiff do recover possession through the defendant No. 41 up to 1316 should not be passed now, when more than seven years have elapsed from the date of the expiry of the ijara.

Then again, the defendant No. 41 from before the institution of the suit repudiated the tenancy of the disputed land as being included within the ijara under the plaintiff, and set up the title of the defendant No. 1 and possession under him. He sided with the defendant No. 1 throughout in this litigation and even in this Court filed the appeal jointly with him.

(4) 4 Ind. Cas. 30; 19 M. L. J. 347; 5 M. L. T. 213.

(5) 26 Ind. Cas. 410; 20 C. L. J. 107.

(6) 34 Ind. Cas. 869; 20 C. W. N. 1099 at p. 1110; 44 C. 47.

SIVAKOLUNDU PILLAI v. GANAPATHY IYER.

Lastly, it has been urged before us that the defendant No. 41 paid the ijara rent up to 1316 although he held the disputed land under defendant No. 1, and that under these circumstances, there ought not to be any decree for mesne profits in favour of the plaintiff either against defendant No. 41 or against defendant No. 1. The question of mesne profits has been left for determination at a subsequent stage of the suit, and the question whether defendant No. 41 really paid the ijara rent up to 1316 will, therefore, be determined in a subsequent proceeding; and, if that question is found in favour of the defendant, the plaintiff will not be entitled to any mesne profits for the period for which the ijara rent might have been paid by the defendant No. 41. With these observations the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 113 OF 1915.
October 2, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Oldfield and
Mr. Justice Krishnan.

SIVAKOLUNDU PILLAI—RESPONDENT
No. 1—APPELLANT

versus

GANAPATHY IYER AND OTHERS—
PETITIONER AND RESPONDENTS NOS. 2 & 3—
RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 99, O. XXI, rr. 54 (g), 89, 90, 91, 92—Execution of decree—Sale, order for, without prior attachment—Irregularity—Appeal, sale held during pendency of—Loss or prejudice to party, absence of—Appellate Court, duty of.

Attachment is only a step to be taken by the executing Court in bringing to sale the property of a judgment-debtor. If such a step is omitted and sale of the property is ordered, the sale can be set aside only if it has resulted in substantial loss to the party and once the sale is confirmed, the objection as to invalidity of attachment can no longer be urged. The absence of attachment is a mere irregularity, which does not affect the jurisdiction of the executing Court to sell immoveable property. [p. 965, col. 1.]

Sheodhyan v. Bholanath, 21 A. 311; A. W. N. (1899) 84; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 907, followed.

Section 99, Civil Procedure Code, shows the principle to be adopted in appeals. An Appellate Court should not reverse the order of the first Court on a point which is of no importance and which does not affect the merits of the case. [p. 965, col. 1.]

Where a sale has actually taken place and been confirmed during the pendency of an appeal against an order for sale without a subsisting attachment, the Appellate Court should not set aside the sale where no loss or prejudice is shown to have resulted thereby to a party. [p. 965, col. 2.]

Nomuna Bibi v. Roshun Miah, 9 Ind. Cas. 558; 38 C. 482; 15 C. W. N. 428; 13 C. L. J. 621, dissented from.

Zain-ul-abidin Khan v. Muhammad Asghar Ali Khan, 10 A. 166; 15 I. A. 12; 5 Sar. P. O. J. 129; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 112, distinguished.

Appeal under clause 15 of the Letters Patent against the judgment of Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar, in Appeal against Order No. 155 of 1915, preferred against the order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Kumbakonam, in Execution Petition Register No. 26 of 1915, in Original Suit No. 23 of 1901.

Mr. C. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyar (with him Mr. K. R. Rangaswami Aiyangar), for the Appellant.

Mr. T. Narasimha Aiyangar (with him Messrs. T. S. Krishna Aiyar and K. S. Jayarama Aiyar), for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KRISHNAN, J.—This appeal arises from an application for execution of the decree in Original Suit No. 23 of 1901 in plaintiff's favour, by sale of defendants' immoveable properties. Among other objections which are not now material, defendants contended that the properties could be not sold without a fresh attachment as the attachment made in the previous execution application was no longer subsisting. Plaintiffs contended that it was, and the Subordinate Judge agreeing with that contention directed the sale of the properties without a fresh attachment. The defendants appealed to this Court against that order; the learned Judge who heard the appeal dismissed it, on the ground that the existence of a subsisting attachment was res judicata between the parties by reason of a previous order by the Subordinate Judge. The Letters Patent Appeal before us is against that judgment.

The appellants contend that there was no subsisting attachment in fact and that the question is not res judicata as the previous order relied on by the learned Judge did not decide anything about it. Respondents have tried to support the view taken on both these points and have urged in addition that even if we thought that these two points were wrongly decided and that there was no proper attachment, we should not interfere on that ground as the sale ordered has been carried out, and the Subordinate Court, rejecting the application by the first defendant to set it aside for irregularity, has confirmed it under Order XXI, rule 92, and it has now become absolute. These facts have been proved before us by affidavit and the defendants do not deny them but merely state that the decree-holders themselves are the purchasers.

NAGENDRA LAL v. HANDOO MIA.

It is not denied that the sale can no longer be set aside for any irregularity in its conduct, however material it may be, but it is urged that the absence of attachment is not a mere irregularity but one that affects the jurisdiction of the executing Court to sell immovable property. It has been held in Sheodhyan v. Bholanath (1) that it is only an irregularity; I entirely agree with the view expressed there and with the observations of the learned Judges as to the object of attachment. Attachment is only a step to be taken by the executing Court in bringing to sale the properties of a judgment-debtor. If such a step is omitted the sale can be set aside only if it has resulted in substantial loss, and once the sale is confirmed the objection can no longer be urged.

It was next argued that we should take no notice of what happened after the date of the Subordinate Judge's order appealed against, but set it aside if we think it erroneous and leave the parties to take such further steps as they liked. I do not think it right to do so when we know that the proceedings in execution have reached a stage where the objection regarding want of attachment is no longer material and will not affect the concluded sale. It seems to me that section 99, Civil Procedure Code, shows the principle to be adopted in appeals; and we should not reverse the order of the first Court on a point which is of no importance now and which does not affect the merits of the case. The learned Vakil for the appellants has cited the observations at the end of the judgment of Chitty, J., in Nomuna Bibi v. Roshun Meah (2) as in his favour. The question, however, does not seem to have been fully argued before the learned Judges as there is no reference to it in the judgment of Coxe, J., at all. With all respect to the learned Judge, I am unable to follow his view. The decision of the Privy Council in Zain-ul-abdin Khan v. Muhammad Asghar Ali Khan (3), also cited for the appellants, has no application, as that was a case where the decree itself in execution of which the sale took place had been subsequently modified; the sale there was thus an incompetent sale and could be upheld only in favour of strangers purchasers not parties to the decree. In the case before us, the absence of attachment did not invalidate the sale without loss being proved; and that question has now been settled against the defendants by the rejection of their application under Order XXI, rule 90. The fact, therefore, that the plaintiffs-decree-holders were themselves the purchasers here, is of no importance; the sale in their favour has been confirmed and is valid.

(1) 21 A. 311; A. W. N. (1899) 84; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 907.

I am, therefore, of opinion that the defendants' appeal fails on the last ground urged by the respondents' Vakil and it is not necessary for us to consider the correctness of the first two points argued. I will dismiss the appeal with costs of first respondent.

OLDFIELD, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

V. R. P.

(2) 9 Ind. Cas. 558; 35 C. 482; 15 C. W. N. 42; 13 C. L. J. 621.

(3) 10 A. 166; 15 I. A. 12; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 129; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 112.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 3653
OF 1914.

November 22, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and
Mr. Justice Richardson.

NAGENDRA LAL CHOWDHURY—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

HAMDOO MIA—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENT.

Abwabs—Rent, consolidated, several items one of which is given as jama, totalled as,

NAGENDRA LAL v. HAMDOO MIA.

Where, at the head of a kabuliyat, an amount of rent was written down as the consolidated rent or the total rent which the tenant undertook to pay for the land and in arriving at the total several items were taken into consideration, one of which was given as the jama (rent):

Held, that the items, other than the one given as the jama, were not abwabs, as what was agreed to be paid by the tenant was the consolidated rent which included those items. [p. 966, col. 2.]

Radha Charan Ray Chowdhry v. Golak Chandra Ghose, 31 O. 834; 8 C. W. N. 529, followed.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Chittagong, dated the 28th April 1914, affirming that of the Munsif, Hathazari, dated the 7th April 1913.

FACTS material to this report are as follows. In a suit brought by the landlord against the tenants for recovery of arrears of rent, cesses, etc., the tenants pleaded inter alia that certain items claimed by the landlord were abwabs. The kabuliyat on which the tenants relied for showing that those items were abwabs was to the following effect:—
“Kabuliyat creating permanent tenure (Bando-busthi kaimi taluka kabuliyat) under Taraf (Estate) Karfal Charia, owner thereof Abhaya Charan Choudhuri * * * Taluk Ali Muhammad son of * * *.

Total land, 3 kanals, 16 gandas, 1 kara; Jama, Rs. 10-8; Cess, Re. 1-6; Dak cess, 2 annas; Price of Bhet, Re. 1; Consolidated rent, Rs. 13

Instalments.			Rs.
Aswin	...	...	5
Pous	...	...	4
Falgun	...	...	4]
Total			13

I of my own accord having fixed the aforesaid rent for the above land execute this taluka kabuliyat. I to my sons, grandsons and so on downwards shall pay in your office the aforesaid rent according to the instalments mentioned above. If I do not pay the rent according to the instalments then I shall pay the same along with interest at the rate of 1 anna per rupee for the default of the instalment. If I do not so pay, then you shall be competent to realise the same with the help of laws that are or will be in force and to sell the said taluka twice in the year in accordance with Regulation VIII of 1819 and realise the dues thereby * * *. Whenever you demand any bhet and begar on the occasion of any festival or ceremony at your house I shall pay the same at the rate of annas 4 per rupee on the rent fixed. At the time of the annual Autumnal Puja I shall deliver one ari of fine Madhumalati rice for the price mentioned above * * *. To the above effect I execute this permanent taluka kabuliyat. Finis. 25th Magh 1251 aghi.”

The Munsif held that those items were not recoverable as they were abwabs. In appeal the decision of the Munsif was upheld by the District Judge. The plaintiffs thereupon preferred this second appeal to the High Court.

Babu Khitish Chunder Sen, for the Appellant.

Babu Tarkeswar Nath Mitter, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This is an appeal from the decision of the learned District Judge of Chittagong, dated the 28th April 1914, affirming the decision of the Munsif of Hathazari. The suit was brought to recover arrears of rent due under a contract of tenancy. The exact nature of the tenancy it is not necessary for us to consider. But the defendant had executed in favour of the plaintiff a kabuliyat. Under that kabuliyat, the defendant undertook to pay for the land certain rent which is mentioned in the body of the document as the aforesaid rent. The amount of the rent is written down at the head of the kabuliyat as the consolidated rent or the total rent. The question is, “is the item before the total is arrived at given as the jama, the rent, and the other items in arriving at the total are abwabs or illegal exactions by the landlord?” I am of opinion that the view taken by the lower Courts in this case cannot be supported. The rent is arrived at, it is true, by taking into consideration certain items. But what was agreed to be paid was the consolidated rent of Rs. 13, by three instalments—one of Rs. 5, and two of Rs. 4, on the particular dates mentioned in the document and the tenant in consideration of having the grant of the land to him undertook to pay that Rs. 13 by those particular instalments. The case is clearly covered by the decision of this Court in Radha Oharan Ray Ohowdhry v. Golak Chandra Ghose (1). There being no other dispute between the parties except as to what amount should be recovered, we set aside the orders of the two lower Courts and decree the plaintiff's suit for the amount claimed by him in his plaint. The amount claimed will bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum from to-day until realization. The plaintiff must have his costs both in this appeal and in the two lower Courts.

BALDHARI SINGH v. BASAR ALI KALAL.

RICHARDSON, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 31 C. 834; 8 C. W. N. 523.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 412
OF 1913.

December 11, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mullick and

Mr. Justice Atkinson.

Babu BALDHARI SINGH—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

Babu BASAR ALI KALAL AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract, verbal—Burden of proof—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114, ill. (g)—Defendant, failure of, to produce account-books, effect of.

A plaintiff suing upon a contract must establish it conclusively to the satisfaction of the Court. [p. 968, col. 1.]

Where the plaintiff has failed to prove his case, the omission by the defendant to produce his account-books does not give rise to a presumption that, if produced, they would have lent support to the plaintiff's case. [p. 970, col. 2.]

Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ronjit Singh, 30 Ind. Cas. 299; 19 C. W. N. 1207; 29 M. L. J. 335; 2 L. W. 830; 18 M. L. T. 248; 13 A. L. J. 991; 17 Bom. L. R. 1006; 37 A. 557; 22 C. L. J. 516; (1915) M. W. N. 757; 42 I. A. 202 (P. C.), referred to.

First appeal from a decision of the 1st Subordinate Judge, Patna, dated the 15th August 1913.

Messrs. P. R. Dass and Ganesh Dut Singh, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Kulwant Sahai and Fakhurud Din, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

ATKINSON, J.—The plaintiff sues in this action to recover Rs. 11,927-9 from the defendants. This sum represents principal and interest calculated up to the 6th September 1912. The original contractual relationship arose between the parties on the 12th August 1903. Let us see for a moment what is the contract which the plaintiff relies upon to sue in this action.

The contract alleged is that he, the plaintiff, was induced by the defendants, who are related one to the other and carry on a joint distillery business, to lend them from time to time money for the purpose of their business, and that at the time the contract was made it was agreed that one open banking account should be kept between the plaintiff and the several defendants jointly, on the ground that it was money being raised or borrowed in the form of a banking transaction for the benefit of the joint business. That is the form in which the plaintiff sets forth his cause of action in his plaint. Let us see if he has established that contract by the evidence adduced on his behalf.

In my opinion it is clear that the plaintiff has not established the contract which he pleads. No evidence is given to show that these defendants were joint; no evidence is given that they represented themselves as carrying on a joint business in a distillery concern. The only evidence that is given by the plaintiff is, that upon the 12th August 1906 at about 8 o'clock in the morning at the plaintiff's house the several defendants were there with others; and that one Bakar Kalal, one of the defendants, opened negotiations with the plaintiff as to the borrowing of money for the benefit of the business. Nothing is shown as to how the defendants, or each of them, were jointly concerned so as to be liable for the joint debt. The plaintiff himself was the only witness who could have given evidence to prove the contract set forth in his plaint, but he has not been called and has given no evidence at all to establish what was the true contract which he alleged existed between himself and the defendants.

RAJDHARI SINGH v. BASAR ALI KALAL.

One thing that is decidedly noticeable in this case is, that the inception of the business relationship alleged to have been established between the plaintiff and the defendants is of a most unusual and peculiar character, having regard to the ordinary custom prevailing in such matters in this country as well as the plaintiff's own usual course of dealing. There is no document signed, there is no agreement made in writing, there is no evidence of any kind produced, to show the terms on which this contract was made. It is pleaded only as a verbal contract and no more. And although the banking relationship went on between the plaintiff and the defendants for over six years, and continued in all up to 1912, yet there is not one shred of writing of any kind or description by the defendants in support of the plaintiff's case. We have only to see if the contract has been made; and if it has been made, whether the evidence is so coercive and strong as to induce us to hold that we should be bound to give the plaintiff judgment for the sum which he claims.

Not a shred of writing or any documentary evidence, save the bahi, is produced, covering the whole period from the 12th August 1906 to the 15th April 1912. It is alleged that this business which was conducted by the plaintiff with the defendants was something outside an ordinary money-lending transaction, and was in the nature of a banking business. If it was a banking business, it appears to me that the whole course of dealing between the parties, as proved by the plaintiff, is utterly inconsistent with banking business in its ordinary sense. Withdrawals were made from time to time, without cheque, without draft—merely upon verbal demand; lodgments were made from time to time by the defendants, and no receipts were given; and note the peculiar method of lodging on the last day of each month a small sum, and on the succeeding day—the beginning of the next month—the withdrawal of a much larger sum. The fact that this was the course of dealing consecutively for years, six years in all, seems to me a very peculiar and illogical and improbable transaction. No demand was made by the plaintiff upon the defendants prior to the action brought on foot of the alleged debt. The last loan obtained was on the 15th February 1910; no withdrawals were made after that date; interest has been calculated up to the 15th April 1912; and during these two years no demand of any kind or description was made by the plaintiff upon the defendants to discharge and satisfy the debt which he alleged they owed him. That, to my mind, is most significant. The first demand for payment that was made by the plaintiff upon the defendants was the issue and service of the plaint. All these matters have to be taken into consideration in testing the bona fides of this claim. The entire absence of independent evidence to corroborate the plaintiff's case as proved by his three witnesses—whose evidence must, I think, be viewed with some suspicion—cannot be lost sight of. The corroboration alleged to exist is alleged to exist because other persons were present besides the contracting parties at the time the contract was made and they have not been called. Interest is alleged to have been reduced in May 1907 at the request of all the defendants, and a man called Golaman was present, and yet he is not called; his presence is admitted by witness No. 2 for the plaintiff, he would have been a very material witness in support of the plaintiff's case if in May 1907 the defendants had come to the plaintiff and said: "Will you now please agree to relax the rate of interest which you are charging us on foot of the several drafts with you in accordance with our original contract of 1906." Here is an independent person who might have clinched the case for the plaintiff and yet he was not called. There were six or seven persons present at the making of the original contract, and they have not been called. In no one particular has the plaintiff produced any corroborative evidence of his claim, save and except the pass-book. I may say this pass-book has a very suspicious appearance. It is noticeable in its regular uniformity of all entries; it is written up in copy-book style, and these entries in their uniformity seem to me to negative the idea of entries made from time to time as the transactions took place. Mr.

BALDHARI SINGH v. BASAR ALI KALAL.

Das on Friday called this pass-book a ledger; to-day he has receded from that position and says it contains the original entries made from time to time as each transaction took place over the whole period of six years. Well, whether it be a ledger or be the book of original entries, it appears to me to bear upon its face suspicion and doubt; and this is so all the more because you find intermingled with the account of the defendants at the end of the year 1909 the account of another person not a party to this suit, covering the period of one year if not more, and then we find the defendants' account following on in the succeeding years 1910, 1911 and 1912. The account book is inaccurate and it is also false in some of its calculations. I do think importance is to be attached to the two points made by Mr. Kulwant Sahai as to the interest charged for the month of February in the leap years 1908 and 1912, as well as the point he makes that interest is calculated on the money for the entire month, when admittedly it was only outstanding for a part. It is all very fine for the plaintiff to throw this book on the table and say: "there it is: It is prima facie evidence of my claim; it must be accepted." But where the plea of forgery is alleged, it is necessary to scrutinise this account book with the greatest possible care; and viewing that book in its entirety and appealing to myself as a Judge of fact, I cannot bring myself to arrive at the conclusion that this book is a book honestly made and kept honestly day by day as a record of the entries of the transactions it purports to deal with. Suspicion, in my opinion, is written broadcast upon its face. It is a book I think unreliable; and its value is not enhanced by the witnesses called to support it, videlicet, witnesses Nos. 1, 2 and 3 for the plaintiff. They are the plaintiff's servants, who have been in the plaintiff's employment for many years, and who no doubt are anxious to serve their master. The plaintiff fails to appear as a witness on his own behalf. His non-appearance is striking. With him the alleged contract was supposed to have been made. Suddenly when the case has been pending a year, and is on the point of being heard, a petition is filed claiming an adjournment on the ground that the plaintiff is ill; the petition is unverified by affidavit and no doctor's evidence or certificate is forthcoming in corroboration to support it. It states that the plaintiff is unwell, that he is in ill health, and has been obstructed in attending Court by the floods. There is not a tittle of evidence to support this, beyond the blank statement in the petition itself. The plaintiff was a vital witness on his own behalf to prove the making of the contract and its terms. He alone made the contract; he alone could prove it. Witnesses Nos. 1 and 2 who are called to prove the contract were only bystanders, and in my judgment these witnesses do not prove the contract pleaded. In no part of their evidence can you show that the contract was made with the defendants jointly and for the purpose of carrying on a joint business. I think that this is the foundation of the plaintiff's claim. The onus is on the plaintiff to establish conclusively the contract he alleges. The factum of the contract has to be established to the satisfaction of the Court. If the plaintiff fails to discharge this onus he cannot succeed; and due weight must always be given to the finding of the Primary Court who saw and heard the witnesses adduced for the plaintiff and who could more fully and conclusively arrive at a clear conclusion as to the value of their testimony and the degree of credit to be attached to it. I hesitate to dissent from the opinion expressed by the Subordinate Judge as to the value to be attached to the evidence given by the plaintiff's witnesses, more especially as I find the case in its inherent features and probabilities gravely suspicious and doubtful. The disappearance of the account-book alleged to have been given to the defendants is remarkable, if it ever existed. But even the history of this book is peculiar. The object of this book, if any, was to keep a check on the entries in the plaintiff's ledger, and yet we find this book kept and entered up by the plaintiff's dewan, witness No. 2. The alleged physical custody of the book was with the defendants, yet the entries were made by the plaintiff's clerk, when and where is not proved. And there seems an utter lack of genuine and convincing proof as to the reality and existence of this second account-book. Why, if the book was for the protection of the defendants, should it be kept and entered up by the plaintiff's clerk? It is not a usual way certainly of doing business. And what is significant is that throughout the many years pending before the hearing of this suit no application was made by the plaintiff calling upon the defendants to produce the alleged account-book, which he says he gave them and which forms the basis of the contract referred to in paragraph No. 4 of the plaint. Never a petition, never a summons, never a demand is made to produce the book, which he (the plaintiff) says he gave the defendants for the purpose of keeping a counter-record, and which was to be entered up by the plaintiff's servant. If his case was true he must have known that the book was in existence at the time and could have been preserved as a record, in the action instituted by him. However, he did not trouble to do anything of the kind, nor did he attempt to prove the contract to the conviction of the Court's mind. The evidence given by the defendants may be weak and false; this will not lessen the legal obligation the plaintiff is required to discharge. The defence is a categorical denial of the contract and of the fact of borrowing money from the plaintiff for a joint business or any business. The defendants, when the claim was put forward, asked for inspection of the plaintiff's account book, and they allege in paragraph No. 7 of the written statement that that application was refused. Why, if this was an honest transaction, was inspection refused? It appears now from the record that persistently from September 1912 to April 1913 every available excuse was put forward by the plaintiff to conceal this book. Why, if he was an honest man, preparing an honest ledger and an honest account-book, did he refrain from producing it? I think the non-production of this document when it was demanded throws a grave suspicion upon its genuineness.

BALDHARI SINGH v. BASAR ALI KALAL.

Then it is alleged that the defendants should have produced their account-books, which would have shown whether they were joint or not; whether they got revenue licenses in their own names or jointly, and would otherwise have raised some degree of proof in support of the plaintiff's case. I cannot see why the defendants should be called upon to produce their books when no application was made upon them to do so. Their case is a denial, a traverse, of the entire case for the plaintiff; and that plea did not throw upon them, in my opinion, the responsibility of producing their books. They say:—"Your case is false from beginning to end. Your book is a forgery; your claim is false." They were never served with notice to produce, never called upon to show their books; and now it is contended that because they did not produce their books, there is a presumption that, if produced, the books would have been against them. I cannot hold with that contention at all; it would be not only absurd but unjust, and in this case inequitable, to infer from the non-production by the defendants of their books, which were never called for, that the plaintiff's case was just and affirmatively proved.

The sole question, therefore, is whether we believe that the contract sued on was made. We are of opinion that this contract, as pleaded, has not been proved. The only person who could prove it has not been called. We think that the books and the other evidence in the case adduced on behalf of the plaintiff are so untrustworthy and so unreliable that we would not be warranted, as Judges of fact, in reversing the decision of the Subordinate Judge and in giving a decree in favour of the plaintiff for the amount of his claim. Accordingly we shall dismiss this appeal with costs, and the action with costs in all Courts.

MULLICK, J.—I agree. I only desire to add a few remarks with reference to the argument addressed to us by Mr. Das to the effect that the omission by the defendants to produce their account-books leads to the inference that the plaintiff's case was true. In this connection I desire merely to reproduce the words of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh (1). The words are as follows:—

"These books do not necessarily form any part of the plaintiff's case; it is of course possible that some entries might have appeared therein relating to the bungalow. But it is open to a litigant to refrain from producing any documents that he considers irrelevant; if the other litigant is dissatisfied it is for him to apply for an affidavit of documents, and he can obtain inspection and production of all that appears to him in such affidavit to be relevant and proper. If he fails so to do, neither he nor the Court at his suggestion is entitled to draw any inference as to the contents of any such documents. There is no ground for any inference, such as is made in the High Court, that the books if produced would have shown rent credited to Jagmag or set off against some claim against her. They related to a different property, and the possibility of entries relating to the bungalow being therein is very remote, but even if it had been greater, the Court was not entitled to draw any such inferences. It is for the litigant who desires to rely on the contents of documents to put them in evidence in the usual and proper way; if he fails to do so, no inference in his favour can be drawn as to the contents thereof."

(1) 30 Ind. Cas. 299; 19 C. W. N. 1207; 29 M. L. J. 335; 2 L. W. 830; 18 M. L. T. 248; 13 A. L. J. 991; 17 Bom. L. R. 1006; 37 A. 557; 22 C. L. J. 516; (1915) M. W. N. 757; 42 I. A. 202 (P. C.).

NAKIMO DEWANI v. JERANG DEWAN.

In my opinion no adverse inference could have been drawn in this case by reason of the non-production of their account-books by the defendants.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE NO. 58
OF 1914.

January 17, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and
Mr. Justice Richardson.

NAKIMO DEWANI AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

JERANG DEWAN AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXII, r. 7—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1862), s. 462—Compromise for minor by Court of Wards—Leave of Court, whether necessary—Court of Wards Act (IX B. O. of 1879), ss. 18, 57.

Order XXXII, rule 7, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, or section 462, Civil Procedure Code, 1862, does not apply when a suit is compromised by the Court of Wards on behalf of a minor ward. Such compromise is binding without leave of the Civil Court. [p. 974, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Darjeeling, dated the 14th November 1913.

FACTS of the case are briefly as follows.—In 1862 the Government of Bengal in return for political services received during the Sikkim Campaign, made a grant of an extensive tract of forest lands, covering all the hills, spurs and valleys below Phallut and right up to the Sikkim frontiers, to one Cheboo Lama, a member of the Court of the Maharaja of Independent Sikkim. On Cheboo's death there was a partition (subsequently recognised by Government) among his son Rechuck, who became a British subject and got 19,000 acres in British territory, his nephew Parbhu, who got the Sikkim estate, and his adopted son Raja Tenduk Pulger of Darjeeling.

On Rechuck's death disputes arose between his widows Nakymo and Gadenputty Dewan (since deceased) on the one hand, and Parbhu on the other, but on a reference by the Collector of Darjeeling to Mr. Pope, the then District Judge of Darjeeling, under the Bengal Land Registration Act, the latter, on March 31st, 1900, decided in favour of the widows, holding that they had a preferential right to succession and possession according to the custom prevailing among the Buddhist Lepchas and Bhutias of Sikkim and Darjeeling.

The estate was already encumbered to the extent of Rs. 65,000 and Nakymo applied to the Court of Wards to take over charge from her as a disqualified proprietress. After some correspondence they did so, but subsequently informed her that they were holding on behalf of her minor daughters whom they considered to be the preferential heirs. Meanwhile on Parbhu's death his son Jerang Dewan—one time a Prime Minister of Sikkim—who claimed to be the preferential heir, was willing to settle his claim on certain terms undertaking to pay off the debts and pay Nakymo an annuity of Rs. 100 and also make some other provision for her minor daughters. But the Bengal Government and the Board of Revenue refused to sanction this compromise, which fell through as the conveyance in pursuance of it could not be registered. In 1907 Jerang Dewan filed a suit for recovery of possession on declaration of his preferential title as nearest agnate, and made Nakymo and her two minor daughters defendants through Chubbilal, a Sub-Deputy Collector who was the manager of the Reilling Estate under the Court of Wards. Without taking any step to file a written statement, the latter, with the approval of the Legal Remembrancer obtained through the Court of Wards, compromised the suit on terms much less favourable to Nakymo and the minors than the earlier infructuous compromise, with the result that Nakymo who had walked into the Court of Wards with 19,000 acres walked out with only two thousand acres and an allowance of Rs. 25 per month so long as she did not re-marry. But the sanction of the Civil Court was not obtained as required by section 462 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, and thereafter the Reilling Estate was released by the Court of Wards to Jerang Dewan, who paid off the debt of Rs. 65,000. In 1916 Nakymo filed the present suit against Jerang and her minor daughters to set aside this compromise as invalid and as vitiated by fraud on the part of Chubbilal. The minors were subsequently made plaintiffs, and when the suit came up for trial before Mr. Nicholl, the District Judge of Darjeeling, Mr. G. Sircar, Vakil, on behalf of the plaintiffs, confined his arguments to the vulnerability of the compromise decree, relying on the latest Privy Council decision reported as Partab Singh v. Bhabuti Singh (1), as the District Judge would not allow him to go into the question of fraud, there being no specific allegation to that effect in the plaint. Mr. Sircar had also urged in the Court below that if the compromise were set aside the parties would be relegated to their original position and the suit that had been compromised would then have to go on. The defendants thereupon agreed to compromise, offering to give the plaintiff unconditionally almost three-fifths of the lands in suit, but Nakymo refused to sign this new compromise petition and the suit was dismissed, the District Judge holding that the Court of Wards had power to sanction the compromise of the original suit without obtaining the leave of the Civil Court.

NAKIMO DEWANI v. JERANG DEWAN.

Nakymo and the minors then preferred an appeal to the Calcutta High Court, which came up for hearing in July 1916 before Justices N. R. Chatterjea and Sheepshanks, who in August desired to have the appeal re argued as to the demand asked for by appellants, but as their Lordships appeared to differ in opinion at this re-hearing, in order to prevent the further costs of a Letters Patent Appeal, they ordered the whole appeal to be sent down for re-argument on the appellants paying the respondents Rs. 300 as costs. After the long vacation an application was unsuccessfully made to the Chief Justice to transfer the appeal from the Bench presided over by Justices Fletcher and Richardson to that presided over by Mr. Justice N. R. Chatterjea, as it was really a partly heard matter and Mr. Justice Sheepshanks had left the High Court.

Babu Provas Chunder Mitter (with him Babu Tarakeswar Paul Chowdhury), for the Appellants.—Section 462 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, does apply to this case. An examination of the old Code will show that section 462 has application in a case compromised by a Court of Wards on behalf of minor wards.

Sections 4—18 of the Court of Wards Act refer to compromise out of Court. Section 51 of the Court of Wards Act refers to suit when started, as the following sections show.

Again this compromise was obtained by fraud practised on the Court of Wards. Therefore it cannot stand. The compromise failing, the parties must be relegated to their original position.

Referred to Trevelyan on Minority and Partab Singh v. Bhabuti Singh (1).

Mr. B. C. Mitter (with him Mr. S. N. Banerjee, Babus Sarat Kumar Mitter and Ram Charan Mitter), for the Respondents.—In construing a section of an Act you cannot go behind it and examine the history of the previous state of the law. This principle has been laid down by very eminent Judges. A comparison of the several sections of the Code of 1852 with certain sections of the

(1) 21 Ind. Cas. 288; 17 C. W. N. 1165; (1913) M. W. N. 785; 14 M. L. T. 299; 25 M. L. J. 492; 16 O. C. 247; 18 C. L. J. 384; 15 Bom. L. R. 1001; 35 A. 487; 11 A. L. J. 901; 40 I. A. 182 (P. C.).

NAKIMO DEWANI v. JERANG DEWAN.

Court of Wards Act will show conclusively that section 462, Civil Procedure Code, has no application to a suit compromised by the Court of Wards. Of Section 440, Civil Procedure Code, with section 51 of the Court of Wards Act. See sections 51 and 18 of the Court of Wards Act. See sections 441, 461, Civil Procedure Code. None of them could apply to a compromise of a suit effected by the Court of Wards.

The Court of Wards Act sets up a concurrent jurisdiction for the benefit of the minor. Its scheme is altogether different and the Civil Court has nothing to do with it. When a Court of Wards takes charge of an estate, there is almost a devolution of interest. Vide Sourindra Mohan Togore v. Siromoni Debi (2). The Civil Court under the Civil Procedure Code has no control over the person who represents the minor under the Court of Wards. Section 18 of the Court of Wards Act refers to compromise both in and out of Court. If section 462, Civil Procedure Code, applied, then the Civil Court would seriously affect or derogate from the provisions of the Court of Wards Act.

Babu Provas Chunder Mitter replied.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This is an appeal preferred by the plaintiffs against the decision of the learned District Judge of Darjeeling and Dinajpore, dated the 1st December 1913, dismissing the suit. The suit was brought for the purpose of setting aside a compromise that had been entered into in a former suit, which is said to have been in contravention of section 462 of the Code of Civil Procedure which was then in force. The facts out of which the case arises are as follows:—One Lochho Tunqui had two sons Chuboo and Dudock. The parties came from the State of Bhutan and the law applicable to the parties is the Buddhist or the Customary Law as is recognized and which is in force in the State of Bhutan. Chuboo, who seems to have rendered important political services to the British Government, was awarded for such services a grant of 74,016 acres of land in the District of Darjeeling. Chuboo died in 1866 having been predeceased by his brother Dudock. Chuboo left one son named Rechak Dewan and a daughter named Euden. Rechak died on the 26th August 1899 having been married twice, his first wife being Nakymo Dewani, who is the first plaintiff in the present suit, and the other wife being one Gudenputty who died in 1903 without issue. Nakimo has had two children both of whom are daughters, namely, Ishay Chhodon and Tashi Lhamoo, who are the other plaintiffs. Chuboo's brother Dudock left an only son Phurboo. Phurboo had two sons, the eldest being Jerang Dewan. There seems to have been some controversy at the earlier stage of these proceedings and in the former suit as to whether Jerang was, in fact, a son of Phurboo, but the fact is that he claimed to be so and, so far as the evidence goes, he was recognized as being the son of Phurboo. There was another younger son of Phurboo and that younger son was named Gulchhan. He died in May 1903. The dispute arose as follows:—On the 10th August 1877, after Chuboo's death, the Government made a lease of this property to Rechak, one Tendok Palgar who was then the manager of the property and Phurboo in three equal shares. The Forest Department acquired 44,000 acres out of this property in 1881 and, on the 17th July 1899, there was a partition between Rechak and Phurboo, Phurboo getting all the properties in the State of Sikkim and Rechak getting the properties in the District of Darjeeling. On the 10th March 1893, the Government granted a lease of 19,000 odd acres of land to Rechak. Then after the death of Rechak, there having been certain disputes in the Civil Court which arose out of certain Land Registration proceedings, Nakymo applied to the Court of Wards to take charge of the estate. The Court of Wards at first intimated that Jerang Dewan must also be a party to the petition. However, in the result on the 7th November 1905 the Court of Wards declared Nakimo to be a disqualified proprietor and took over charge of the property. On the 17th February 1903, the Court of Wards declared the two daughters of Nakimo, namely, Ishay Chhodon and Tashi Lahmoo to be minors and, on the 7th March of that year, the Court declared them also to be the heirs of Rechak Dewan. From the 17th February 1906, the two minors Ishay Chhodon and Tashi Lahmoo were disqualified proprietors and wards under the Court of Wards. Next, on the 5th February 1907, Jerang Dewan instituted a suit against Nakymo and the two minors Ishay Chhodon and Tashi Lahmoo. In the course of that proceeding, a compromise was arrived at. That compromise was, as it appears from the petition of compromise and the letter of the Board of Revenue annexed to that petition, approved of by the Court of Wards.

NAKYMO DEWANI v. JERANG DEWAN.

The first point that has been argued both here and in the Court below and which apparently is the only point argued in the case is this. That the approval of the Civil Court not having been taken to that compromise under the provisions of section 462 of the Code of Civil Procedure then in force, the compromise is voidable as against the two minors. That depends purely on an examination of the sections in the Civil Procedure Code and in the Court of Wards Act. The Court of Wards Act contains two sections that are material to the matter. The first is the 18th section. That provides that "the Court may sanction the giving of leases or farms of the whole or part of any property under its charge, and may direct the mortgage or sale of any part of such property, and may direct the doing of all such other acts as it may judge to be most for the benefit of the property and the advantage of the ward." The section by itself clearly authorises the Court of Wards to compromise a claim on behalf of the ward, whether a minor or an adult ward, if the Court judges it to be most for the benefit of the property or the advantage of the ward. The other section is the 51st section. That provides that, in all suits instituted by or against a minor ward, the Collector of the District or the manager shall, as the case may be, be the next friend or the guardian of the minor for the suit. That is how the matter stands under the Court of Wards Act. It is said that the Code of Civil Procedure has placed an additional restriction on the Court of Wards by further enacting under the terms of section 462 that any compromise entered into by the Court of Wards on behalf of a minor litigant requires also the approval of the Civil Court. That turns purely on a consideration of the various sections that are in the Civil Procedure Code. It is, however, a matter to be noticed that section 464 of the Code as originally passed by the Legislature clearly did not require the sanction of the Civil Court to a compromise entered into by the Court of Wards. It is said, however, that the alteration in the wording of section 464 which was effected in the year 1888, altered that provision. Section 464, as it ran after the amendment of 1888, was in these terms:—"Nothing in this Chapter shall be construed to affect, or in any way derogate from, the provisions of any local law for the time being in force relating to suits by or against minors." The view that the learned Judge took in the Court below was that to give the effect that was suggested by the plaintiffs to the provisions of section 462 would, in fact, derogate from the provisions of the Court of Wards Act so far as suits relating to minors under their charge were concerned. The argument is as follows:—Section 51 of the Court of Wards Act takes away from the Civil Court the duty of appointing a next friend or guardian ad litem of a minor and appoints the manager under the Court of Wards as the statutory next friend or guardian. Clearly, therefore, the Civil Court has nothing to do with the appointment of a next friend or guardian. Then section 18 of the same Act gives power to the Court of Wards to compromise generally, which includes both suits in and claims out of Court, and to cut down the provisions of section 18 by stating that when the ward is a minor, no compromise in a suit should be binding on the minor ward unless the approval of the Civil Court has been obtained as mentioned in the Civil Procedure Code, would derogate from the provisions contained in section 18 of the Court of Wards Act. I am of opinion that that argument is well-founded to hold that the sanction of the Civil Court to every compromise that is entered into under the authority and by the direction of the Court of Wards on behalf of a minor under their charge would seriously affect, or derogate from, the provisions contained in the Court of Wards Act. This point, as appears from the judgment of the Court below, was the only point argued before the learned Judge, because the learned gentleman who conducted the case in that Court on behalf of the plaintiffs stated that he rested his case solely on the issue concerning vulnerability of the decree of the 12th March 1908 and did not invite the Court to decide the issue of title by succession.

NAKYMO DEWANI v. JERANG DEWAN.

The case has also been attempted to be argued before us on the question of fraud, the fraud alleged being that the Court of Wards were deceived in giving their consent to the compromise by having been given false information relating to the course of succession under the Bhutan Law. It is almost sufficient to deal with that case by stating that no evidence was given in the case as to what the fraud practised on the Court of Wards was. The Court of Wards had before them, as appears from the record, a full statement from the Deputy Commissioner as to what was proposed to be done and, before acting on the information and authorizing the compromise, they took the precaution of sending all the papers that they had before them to the Legal Remembrancer, asking him as to what ought to be done with regard to the matter and it was only when the Legal Remembrancer had dealt with the matter fully that the Court authorized the compromise. An allegation like this seems to be wholly insufficient to disturb the act of the Court regularly and properly entered into. Moreover, the evidence that we have in this case raises a serious doubt as to whether the plaintiffs under the Bhutan Law had the right of succession to Rechak's properties. There is a considerable body of evidence, notwithstanding some statement more or less loose of His Highness the Maharaja of Sikkim, as to the course of descent, which would go to show that the course of succession was not through females but was confined to agnatic relationship. In that view, it is not denied that Jerang Dewan would be wholly entitled to succeed to Rechak's properties after his death. The statement of the Maharaja of Sikkim that has been read to us seems to be vague, and nothing definite can be drawn from that. I think that the evidence does show that there was clearly a case in which the Court could enter into the compromise so as to secure the best terms possible for the two minors and there is nothing to suggest that better terms could have been obtained. The alleged fraud is wholly unproved and the gentleman conducting the case in the Court below stated that he did not intend to ask the Court for a decision upon the issue of title by succession. If the Court of Wards acted to the best of their judgment to secure for the two minors, out of the property to which they had no right at all, 2,000 acres of land and a property of some value in Darjeeling plus the payment of their father's debts, which amounted to Rs. 64,000, I think the compromise was highly advantageous to the wards that the Court had under their charge. There is no evidence to support the case of fraud as set up in the 23rd paragraph of the plaint, namely, that a fraud of some sort was practised on the Court of Wards to get them to approve of that compromise. No evidence was given in support of such a case, nor do I think that there is any truth in the story. The Court recognized that these minors had, in fact, under the terms of the law by which they were governed, no right to their father's property and they entered into the compromise to secure the best terms they could, so that something might be got for these female wards. Whatever might be the state of affairs, I am quite clear that the evidence adduced is wholly insufficient to establish a case of fraud practised on the Court of Wards in the manner suggested. I think the result arrived at by the learned District Judge is correct. The present appeal, therefore, fails and must be dismissed with costs. There will be two sets of costs to the two sets of respondents.

RICHARDSON, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

GOVIND KANDU v. WAJID ALI.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2254 of 1915.

December 5, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad.

GOVIND KANDU AND ANOTHER—

PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Sheikh WAJID ALI AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Variance between pleading and proof—Mortgage—Redemption—Suit based on specific mortgage—Mortgage specified not proved—Plaintiff, whether can get decree on prior mortgages—Cause of action—Multifariousness—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. I, r. 3—Misjoinder.

The plaintiff brought a suit for redemption against two persons on the basis of a particular mortgage. The specific mortgage set up in the plaint was not proved:

Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for redemption in that suit on the basis of prior mortgages in favour of the two defendants separately. [p. 977, col. 2.]

Appeal from the decision of the Sub-Judge, Chapra, dated the 9th July 1915.

Mr. Rajendra Prasad, for the Appellants.

Mr. Parmeshwar Dayal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit for redemption. The suit is based on a zarpeshgi-deed, dated the 16th May 1910, executed by plaintiff for Rs. 275 in respect of 2 bighas 4 cottahs 19 dhurs of land for the years 1319 and 1320 Faslīs. The deed stands in the name of defendant No. 2, Sheikh Walayat Hussain, but it is alleged in the plaint that defendant No. 2 was only a farzidar and benamidar of defendant No. 1 Sheikh Wajid Ali, who is alleged to be the real mortgagee. The defendants filed separate written statements. The defendant No. 1 disclaimed all connection with the bond in suit and denied that he had any interest in the bond in suit. He further stated that he was in possession of only 1 bigha 5 cottahs out of the disputed land under zarpeshgi-bonds (1) dated 27th May 1895 and (2) dated 7th June 1909. He also alleged that he holds a simple mortgage-bond dated 26th July 1903 from the plaintiff and that certain other sums are due to him on account of mahajini dealings with the plaintiff. The defendant No. 2, Sheikh Walayat Hussain, alleged that the zarpeshgi-deed of 1910, on the basis of which the suit for redemption has been brought, was executed on account of fraud practised on him by the plaintiff, that it was never acted upon and was inoperative. He further said that he was in possession of one bigha out of the disputed land under a zarpeshgi-bond of 13th July 1899 for Rs. 100 and was not in possession of 2 bighas 4 cottahs 19 dhurs as alleged by the plaintiff and that he was not a farzidar of defendant No. 1. The first Court declined to give a decree for redemption on the basis of the bond in suit, but held that the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for redemption on the basis of prior mortgage-bonds executed in favour of either defendants as their due dates had expired. The Subordinate Judge in appeal held that the bond in suit was never given effect to and was inoperative and that the plaintiffs could not claim any benefit under it. He further held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to redeem the prior mortgages executed in favour of the defendants separately. He accordingly dismissed the suit of the plaintiff. The plaintiffs have, therefore, appealed to this Court and contend that the lower Appellate Court should have allowed them to redeem the prior mortgages held by the defendants.

The only question for determination is, whether or not the plaintiffs are entitled to redeem the property in this suit on the basis of the prior mortgages in favour of the defendants.

It has been distinctly held in this case by the lower Appellate Court that defendant No. 2 is not a farzidar of the defendant No. 1. The suit for redemption is in respect of 2 bighas 4 cottahs 19 dhurs of land. The defendant No. 1 holds only 1 bigha 5 cottahs out of this under separate zarpeshgi-bonds of 1895 and 1903 and has a simple mortgage-bond of 1903. The defendant No. 2 holds 1 bigha only under another zarpeshgi-bond of 1899. The bonds stand separately in name of the defendants and they have nothing to do with each other in respect of the bonds held by them. The plaintiffs have not got the same cause of action against these defendants, nor are they jointly liable in respect of each and all of such causes of action. The causes of action in respect of the several mortgage-bonds held by the defendants are distinct and independent of each other and do not arise out of the same transaction and cannot be joined in one suit against the two defendants in this case, who are not jointly liable in respect of each and all such causes of action—Order I, rule 3, and Order II, rule 3 (1), of the Code of Civil Procedure. Umabai v. Bharu Balvant (1) and Mullick Kefait Hossein v. Sheo Pershad Singh (2). The suit for redemption is based entirely upon the distinct cause of action, expressly stated to have arisen on the 30th of Jeth 1321 Fasli in respect of the zarpeshgi-deed of 16th May 1910. The plaintiff, having failed to establish his right to redeem the bond on the basis of which the suit was brought, should not be allowed to fall back on some other mortgage-bonds held by the defendants on which the suit has not been based. Vide Krishna Pillai v. Rangasami Pillai (3), Sheo Prasad v. Lalit Kuar (4), Mullick Kefait Hossein v. Sheo Pershad (2), Govindrav Deshmukh v. Ragho Deshmukh (5). The earlier rulings of Madras High Court relied upon by the appellant. Unnian v. Rama (6) and Hinde & Co. v. Ponnath Brayan (7), are distinguishable and have not been acted upon by the same Court in Krishna Pillai v. Rangasami Pillai (3), already referred to. I, therefore, think that the learned Subordinate Judge is right in not allowing the plaintiff to redeem the prior mortgages held by the defendants in the suit. The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

SUBBAYA NADAN v. AIYAVOO REDDI.

Appeal dismissed.

- (1) 3 Ind. Cas. 165; 34 B. 358; 11 Bom. L. R. 499.
 (2) 23 C. 821; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 545.
 (3) 18 M. 462; 5 M. L. J. 187; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 672.
 (4) 18 A. 403; A. W. N. (1896) 132; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 975.
 (5) 8 B. 543; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 738.
 (6) 8 M. 415; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 284.
 (7) 4 M. 359; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1085.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2315 OF 1914.

October 3, 1916.

Present:—Justice Sir William Ayling, Kt.,
 and Mr. Justice Napier.

SUBBAYA NADAN—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

AIYAVOO REDDI alias SANGA REDDI

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Highways, public—Dedication to class, legality of—Right of user by any member of public—Procession, obstruction to—Cause of action—Burden of proof —Pleadings—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O.

 I, r. 8 Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42.

Public highways cannot be dedicated to a class or to a limited section of the public and such dedication is no dedication at all. [p. 978, col. 2.]

Farquhar v. Newburg Rural District Council, (1909) 1 Ch. D. 12; 78 L. J. Ch. 170; 100 L. T. 17; 73 J. P. 1; 7 L. G. R. 364; 25 T. L. R. 39, referred to.

All other rights over other persons' property are private, whether they belong to a class or to an individual and whether they arise by grant, license, easement, customary right or any other origin. [p. 978, col. 2.]

It is settled law in India that every member or class of the public is entitled to use a public highway for conducting a religious or ceremonial procession without interference by any other member or class. [p. 978, col. 2.]

Even if there is no evidence of user for the particular purpose by the persons claiming the right, the right so to use them at any time is legally vested in them. [p. 979, col. 1.]

Sadagopa Charari v. Krishnamoorthy Rao, 30 M. 185; 4 A. L. J. 333; 11 C. W. N. 585; 5 C. L. J. 566; 17 M. L. J. 240; 9 Bom. L. R. 663; 2 M. L. T. 204; 34 I. A. 93 (P. C.) and Kandasawmy Mudali v. Subraya Mudali, 1 Ind. Cas. 716; 32 M. 478; 19 M. L. J. 617, followed.

Brookbank v. Thompson, (1903) 2 Ch. 344; 72 L. J. Ch. 626; 19 T. L. R. 285; 89 L. T. 209; Poole v Huskinson, (1843) 152 E. R. 1039; 63 R. R. 782; 11 M. & W. 827 and Vestry of Bermondsey v. Brown, (1865) 1 Eq. 204; 55 E. R. 842; 35 Beav. 226; 11 Jur. (N. S.) 1031; 13 L. T. 574; 14 W. R. 213, referred to.

Where the ownership of a road is unknown, dedication of it to the public will be presumed from proof of its user by the public. [p. 979, col. 1.]

Semble:—Mere obstruction to a procession without proof of loss of property or personal injury may give rise to a cause of action. [p. 979, col. 1.]

But the obstruction must be specifically alleged in the plaint, and where it is found against, the suit is liable to be dismissed. A plaintiff cannot be allowed to prosecute his claim on the ground of a denial of his right by the defendant, which was not averred in the plaint [p. 979, cols. 1 & 2.]

Kandasawmy Mudali v. Subraya Mudali, 1 Ind. Cas. 716; 32 M. 478; 19 M. L. J. 617; Andi Moopan v. Muthuvirama Reddi, 29 Ind. Cas. 244; 29 M. L. J. 91; 17 M. L. T. 453 and Brislingappa v. Dharmappa, 7 Ind. Cas. 663; 34 B. 571; 12 Bom. L. R. 586, referred to.

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Tinnevely, in Appeal Suit No. 232 of 1913, preferred against that of the District Munsif, Kovilpatti, in Original Suit No. 204 of 1914.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. Srinivasa Aiyangar (with him Mr. S. Desikachariar), for the Appellant.

Dewan Bahadur Mr. L. A. Govindaraghava Aiyar (with him Mr. S. Muthia Mudaliar), for the Respondents.

SCEBAYA NADAN V. AIYAVOO REDDI.

JUDGMENT.

AYLING, J.—The sole cause of action alleged in the plaint is the obstruction by defendants of plaintiff's marriage procession on 6th December 1909. Both the lower Courts have found against the fact of obstruction. On this ground alone this second appeal must be dismissed with costs, although I am in general agreement with the conclusions of my learned brother in the judgment which he is about to pronounce.

NAPIER, J.—This second appeal arises out of a judgment of the Subordinate Judge of Tinnevely reversing the decree of the District Munsif of Kovilpatti in a suit brought under Order I, rule 8, of the Code of Civil Procedure by the plaintiff on behalf of himself and other Nadars, his fellow-castemen, for a declaration that he and they are entitled to take their marriage processions along certain roads in the village of Mela Chaitalai and for an injunction to restrain the defendants, certain Reddis, Naickers and Asaris, from interfering with them. The District Munsif gave them a declaratory decree which has been set aside by the Subordinate Judge.

The first point taken by the Advocate-General for the appellant is that the Subordinate Judge has misunderstood the law applicable to the case. On this point I am clear that the appellant is entitled to succeed. The Subordinate Judge in paragraph 6 introduces a distinction between classes of public roads for which there is no authority to be found in the decisions of this Court or in English Law. He speaks of "public paths or highways in the largest sense." He quotes the well-known decision in Sadagopachariar v. Rama Rao (1) and reads the words "in the largest sense" into it. This manner of dealing with decisions of this Court is most improper. It is his duty to follow them without reservations. He relies on the judgment of the Full Bench of Calcutta High Court in the case of Chunilul v. Ram Kishen Sahu (2). If their Lordships in that case intended to lay down that there were public roads limited to a class, I can find no authority for such a classification, nor is any authority quoted for the proposition and with great respect, I think that the method of classification is unfortunate. Public highways stand in a class by themselves. All other rights over other persons' property are private, whether they belong to a class or to an individual and whether they arise by grant, license, easement, customary right or any other origin. To call them village rights and village ways seems to me to use geographical and not legal terminology. There may doubtless be rights of user limited to the inhabitants of a village just as there may be rights limited to the members of a caste or the inhabitants of a street, but they are all private rights. This was clearly laid down in Brooklebank v. Thompson (3), where Joyce, J., speaking of a right of way to a church or a market vested in the inhabitants of a parish, describes it as in law a private, not a public, way having its origin in custom. A later case, Farquhar v. Newburg Rural District Council (4), decided by the Court of Appeal, re-states this proposition and adds that no public highway can be dedicated with such limited rights. "It is impossible to confer on this (public) road such rights and such rights only as existed over the churchway." This latter statement has reference to the well-established proposition that an attempt to dedicate a highway to a limited portion of the public is no dedication at all. [Vide Poole v. Huskinson (5) and Vestry of Bermondsey v. Brown (6)]. If, therefore, these are public roads as found by the District Munsif, there is no question that the appellant and his castemen are entitled to use them for their religious and ceremonial processions. That is settled law in this country [Vide Sadagopachariar v. Rama Rao (1), upheld by the Privy Council in Sadagopa

(3) (1903) 2 Ch. 344; 72 L. J. Ch. 626; 89 L. T. 209; 19 T. L. R. 285.

(4) (1909) 1 Ch. D. 12; 78 L. J. Ch. 170; 100 L. T. 17; 73 J. P. 1; 7 L. G. R. 361; 25 T. L. R. 39.

(5) (1843) 1 M. & W. 827; 152 E. R. 1039; 63 R. R. 782.

(6) (1865) 35 Beav. 226; 11 Jur. (N. S.) 1031; 13 L. T. 574; 14 W. R. 213; 1 Eq. 204; 55 E. R. 882.

(1) 26 M. 376.

(2) 15 C. 460; 12 Ind. Jur. 425; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 892.

SUBBAYA NADAN v. AIYAVOO REDDI.

Chariar v. Krishnamoorthy Rao (7), Kandasawmy Mudali v. Subraya Mudali (8) and other cases.]

Mr. Govindaraghava Aiyar next contended that the Subordinate Judge intended to find that these roads are private roads over which a limited class have a right to pass by custom. The short answer is that he has not found anything of the sort and he could not. There is no evidence that the soil of the roads is vested in the adjacent owners. The ownership is unknown and in such a case dedication to the public will be presumed from user. Further, he has not considered the question whether such a customary right vested in the adjacent owners exists, he has only considered the question—whether the plaintiff has proved a custom, a matter that does not arise. Nor is this custom pleaded. What is pleaded is that the roads belong to the adjacent owners and that the plaintiff and his castemen have no customary right to use them. The first contention has not been made out and this being so, the District Munsif on his finding on the evidence has properly held that the roads are public dedicated as highways, with the further result that even if there is no evidence of user for religious or ceremonial processions by the plaintiff and his castemen, the right so to use them at any time is legally vested in them, because as laid down by the Privy Council in Sadagopa Chariar v. Krishnamoorthy Rao (7), "all members of the public have equal rights in them." That disposes of the first question. The next objection taken by the respondents is that the suit must be dismissed, the cause of action not having been made out. It is conceded that if an order under section 145 or section 147 of the Code of the Criminal Procedure had been pleaded as the cause of action, the suit would have lain subject to any question of limitation; but it is contended that the cause of action has been found to be false by both Courts, and that even if true, there is no evidence of such special damages as is required by law. We are told that the mere obstruction of a procession is not enough, that loss of property or personal injury must be proved. There is certainly authority for this proposition, vide Kandasawmy Mudali v. Subraya Mudali (8), but there are observations in a later case, Andi Moopan v. Muthuvarama Reddy (9), and in Baslingappa v. Dharmappa (10) which seem to be inconsistent with that view. It certainly seems to me strange that the offence of wrongful restraint should not give a cause of action and if the matter arose for decision, I should certainly desire to refer the question to a Full Bench. But in this case, both Courts have held that the story of the obstructed procession is false: Now this is the sole cause of action alleged. (Vide paragraph 12 of the plaint.) It is argued for the appellant that certain orders of the District Magistrate and the Head Assistant Magistrate, Exhibits II and III, are proved and that they are referred to in paragraph 7 of the plaint. That is partly true; but paragraph 7 does not refer to them specifically, but only alleges that some temporary orders are not binding on the plaintiff, and these orders were not put in by the plaintiff but by the defendants. There is only one cause of action alleged, which has been found against. The last contention is that the defendants have denied or are interested to deny the plaintiff's right within the meaning of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act. No such denial is pleaded as a cause of action, and I think it would not be proper to allow the plaintiff to substitute at the last moment a new cause of action for the one alleged and found to be false. The appeal must, therefore, be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

V. R. P.

(9) 29 Ind. Cas. 248; 29 M. L. J. 91; 17 M. L. T. 453

(10) 7 Ind. Cas. 663; 34 B. 571; 12 Bom. L. R. 586.

(7) 30 M. 185; 4 A. L. J. 333; 11 C. W. N. 555; 5 C. L. J. 566; 17 M. L. J. 240; 9 Bom. L. R. 663; 2 M. L. T. 204; 34 I. A. 93 (P. C.).

(8) 1 Ind. Cas. 716; 32 M. 478; 19 M. L. J. 617

SADANAND TEWARI v. DEB NATH MANJHI.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 2549, 2763,
TO 2765 OF 1915 AND 30 OF 1916.

December 7, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mullick and
Mr. Justice Atkinson.

SADANAND TEWARI AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

DEB NATH MANJHI AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 15, Sch. II, cl. (8)—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 102—Rent, suit for, whether cognizable by Small Cause Court—Appeal, second—Bengal Rent Recovery Act (X B. C. of 1859), s. 10—Abwab, meaning of—Illegal cess.

A suit to recover arrears of rent of a holding is not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes and a second appeal in such a suit would not, therefore, be barred under section 102, Civil Procedure Code. [p. 98¹, col. 1.]

Soundaram Ayyar v Sennia Naicker, 23 M. 547; 10 M. L. J. 329; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 785, distinguished.

If a tenant in consideration for the use and occupation of land agrees to pay a certain amount of rent in cash and the price of certain quantities of produce, the total of the two items to constitute one whole rent or jama, the price of the produce would be recoverable as rent and would not be an abwab. [p. 98², col. 1.]

Kalanand Singh v. Eastern Mortgage Agency Co. Ltd., 19 Ind. Cas. 701; 18 C. L. J. 83; Radha Charan Ray Chowdhry v. Golak Chandra Ghose, 31 C. 834; 8 C. W. N. 529, referred to.

Second appeal from a decision of the Officiating District Judge, Manbhum, dated the 12th June 1915.

Mr. Atul Krishna Roy, for the Appellants.

Mr. Abani Bhusan Mukerji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

MULLICK, J.—Appeal No. 2549 arises out of Suit No. 1872 before the Deputy Collector of Manbhum; the appeal before the Judicial Commissioner in that suit is No. 10. Second Appeal No. 30 of 1916 arises out of suit No. 1882, which corresponds to Appeal No. 45 before the Judicial Commissioner. Second Appeal No. 2763 corresponds to Suit No. 1848 and First Appeal No. 33; Second Appeal No. 2764 corresponds to Suit No. 1870 and First Appeal No. 40; and Second Appeal No. 2765 corresponds to Suit No. 1878 and First Appeal No. 42. All these five suits were based upon a registered kabuliyat executed in Suits Nos. 1848 and 1872 by the defendants themselves, and in the remaining suits by the predecessors of the present defendants.

The plaintiffs claim rent of five holdings amounting to various sums in cash, and including certain quantities either of paddy or ghee or both, the money value of which is alleged to be part of the contract of tenancy executed at the time of the execution of the kabuliyats. The defendants pleaded, first of all, payment; secondly, that the rate of rent was incorrect; thirdly, that the lands had not been properly described, and fourthly, that the suits were bad for misjoinder.

The plea of payment has been found against the defendants. But on the substantial question of what is the rate of rent, the Court held that the plaintiffs had not been able to prove the contract alleged by them, and decreed the suits at the rents admitted by the tenants. There was an appeal in all the suits except No. 1872 to the Deputy Commissioner, and in Suit No. 1872 there was an appeal to the Judicial Commissioner. The appeals to the Deputy Commissioner's Court were transferred under section 225 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act of 1908 to the Judicial Commissioner, with the result that all five appeals were heard by the last named officer and dismissed. The present second appeals have been preferred to us by the plaintiffs.

The first point taken before us by the learned Vakil for the respondents is one as to jurisdiction. He urges that in the appeals in respect of Suits Nos. 1878, 1882, 1848 and 1870, which are below Rs. 100 in value, no appeal lay to the Judicial Commissioner at all and that if the first appeals had been heard by the Deputy Commissioner, the Deputy Commissioner's order would have been final. He urges that if the Judicial Commissioner had no jurisdiction, then we in second appeal have no jurisdiction. But he disregards the fact that these suits were transferred to the file of the Judicial Commissioner under the provisions of section 225 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, and that, therefore, the Judicial Commissioner had jurisdiction to deal with the appeals, although the subject-matter was less than Rs. 100 in value. The question then arises, whether in these suits there is any second appeal to us against the decision of the Judicial Commissioner. The learned Vakil for the respondents falls back upon clause 2 of section 223 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, and contends that as the suits were of Small Cause Court nature and less than Rs. 500 in value, no second appeal lies to us by reason of the provisions of section 102 of the Civil Procedure Code.

SADANAND TEWARI V. DEB NATH MANJHI.

Now, if these suits had been suits of a Small Cause Court nature this contention would have prevailed, but the suits being rent suits were not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, and, therefore, they did not come within the provisions of section 102 of the Civil Procedure Code. A second appeal clearly lies to us against the decree of the Judicial Commissioner in these four suits.

With regard to Suit No. 1872, in which the subject-matter was over Rs. 100 in value, the only ground urged by the learned Vakil for the respondents is that it falls within the provisions of section 102 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that no second appeal lies. I have already decided that this is not a suit of a Small Cause Court nature, and, therefore, this contention must also fail. Therefore, the plea of jurisdiction as regards all these five appeals has no substance.

Coming now to the merits of the cases, the first argument addressed to us is, that the registered kabuliyats containing the contract are invalid, and the learned Vakil points to the finding of the learned Judicial Commissioner which is to the effect that the kabuliyats were never acted upon. It is true that both the Court of first instance and the Court of first appeal found various reasons for believing that the executants of the kabuliyats were not aware of their contents. But I am unable in second appeal to go into any of these matters, for the simple reason that I find that no issue as to these kabuliyats having been executed without the knowledge of the defendants was ever raised at the trial. The defendants never pleaded that there was fraud, coercion or undue influence; and execution being admitted, it was not open to the Courts, without a special issue upon the point, to find that the defendants in executing the kabuliyats were not aware of their contents.

The learned Vakil for the respondents relies upon a condition in the kabuliyat which is to the effect that the defendants are liable to ejectment on notice, and he contends that so hard a condition could never have been imported into the document with the knowledge of the executants. But as I have already said, there is nothing to show that the defendants challenged this document in the issues, and it seems to me that if they had done so the plaintiffs might quite possibly have adduced evidence to show that this term of the contract was made with their full knowledge and consent. In any event a complete answer to the learned Vakil's contentions is, that as no issue was raised on the point whether the defendants were or were not aware of the contents of the documents, the finding of the Judicial Commissioner cannot debar the plaintiffs from succeeding in this suit.

Then the learned Vakil for the respondents goes further and urges that the kabuliyat was in itself altogether invalid, and he relies upon section 79 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act for the purpose of showing that a contract which bars a tenant from acquiring occupancy rights is a totally invalid contract. Now, referring to the kabuliyat, I nowhere find that there is any agreement barring the tenant from acquiring occupancy rights. The contracts were executed in 1303 F. S., that is 1896, at a time when the present Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act was not in force in the District of Purulia, and for all I can see, the term as to ejectment was a perfectly valid contract under Act X of 1859, which was the Act applicable to the contract at that time. There is not a word in the kabuliyat to show that the defendants were at that time occupancy raiyats, and, in my opinion, section 79 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act has no application to the case. Therefore the finding of the learned Judicial Commissioner that the kabuliyat was not operative is, in my opinion, wholly erroneous.

Then the learned Vakil for the respondents contends that although the cash rents may be enforceable, the price of paddy and ghee is not enforceable, because these payments are abwabs, and he relies upon section 10, Act X of 1859, which directs that no illegal cesses are recoverable from a tenant. Now, the test as to whether such payments are abwabs or not has been laid down in many cases, of which one of the latest is Kalanand Singh v. Eastern Mortgage Agency Co., Ltd. (1), and the learned Judges observed there, "that if a particular sum specified in the lease or agreed to be paid is the lawful consideration for the use and occupation of the land, that is to say, if it is really part of the rent although not described as such, the landlord would be entitled to recover the same, and the whole question in the case is, whether the items claimed are really part of the rent which was the consideration for the letting out of the land." To like effect is the opinion of Maclean, C. J., in Radha Charan Ray Choudhry v. Golak Chandra Ghose (2) and there the learned Chief Justice observes: "To my mind each of these cases depends upon its own particular circumstances, and we must look at the contract to see whether the payment which the tenant agrees to make is in reality part of the rent as opposed to what is known as an abwab." Now, applying that test to the cases before us, it is quite clear that upon the contracts entered into by the defendants the consideration for the use and occupation of the land was a certain amount of rent in cash and the price of certain quantities of paddy or ghee or both, as the case may be, and that the total of these two items was to constitute one whole rent or jama, which was payable by the defendants. The total rental shown in the kabuliyats was clearly the consideration payable by the tenant for the settlement made with him by the landlord. There is no indication whatever that the price of paddy or ghee was in any case intended to be an imposition independent of the rent of the land which the defendant was leasing from the landlord.

SADANAND TEWARI v. DEB NATH MANJHI.

In this view the amounts claimed for ghee and paddy were part of the total rent payable for the land, and the objection on the ground that the zemindar is claiming an abwab is not tenable. This disposes of all the points raised before us in the argument.

We threw out a suggestion to the learned Vakil for the appellants, that possibly he might see his way to allowing the decree of the lower Appellate Court to stand for the years in suit, provided he got a declaration from us that for future years he was entitled to claim rent at the full contract rate. But he has not been able to accept our suggestion. In these circumstances he will get a decree for the full amount. We will set aside the decree of the learned Judicial Commissioner and substitute therefor a decree in each suit allowing the plaintiffs the full amount of rent claimed in the plaint, together with interest at 12 per cent. on the arrears. But the question of costs is with our discretion and having regard to the dilatory conduct of the plaintiffs, we direct that they get no costs in either Court.

ATKINSON, J.—With regard to the point taken by the Vakil for the respondents, namely that under the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act no second appeal lies in this case, the value of the appeal being under Rs. 500, section 15, sub section 1 defines the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes. It expressly says that no Court of Small Causes shall take cognizance of the suits specified in the Second Schedule as suits excepted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes. And in the Second Schedule under clause 8, one of the class of suits exempted is a suit for recovery of rent other than house rent. This, being an action for the recovery of rent other than house rent, would be prima facie excluded by the operation of section 15 and Schedule II of the Act.

The learned Vakil for the respondents this morning, in the course of the delivery of the judgment of this Court by my learned brother, referred for the first time to a case reported as Soundaram Ayyar v. Sennia Naicken (3) and he endeavoured to insinuate that the case had some application to the facts of the present case. A very cursory glance at the judgment will completely satisfy any

(3) 23 M. 547; 10 M. L. J. 329; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 785.

(1) 19 Ind. Cas. 701; 18 C. L. J. 83.

(2) 31 C. 534; 8 C. W. N. 529.

HARI MOHAN PAL v. KAILASH CHANDRA DHUR.

observer that that case has decided nothing to controvert our decision and its accuracy as delivered by the judgment of my learned colleague. The head-note of the case is somewhat misleading and is as follows:—

"A suit for the recovery of rent other than house rent is a suit of the nature cognizable in Courts of Small Causes, within the meaning of section 586 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and no second appeal lies from a decision therein when the amount or value of the subject-matter of the original suit does not exceed Rs. 500."

It is well to observe that in that case power was given under section 15 of the Act to the Local Government Board to extend to the Court of Small Causes jurisdiction in cases of rent other than house rent, and it was upon that basis that the Court decided the case. In the case under reference it would appear that all the Courts of Small Causes in Madras had power to grant decrees in respect of claims for rent other than house rent, and it is only, necessary to clear up the matter, to refer to the judgment at page 555. It was a Full Bench decision presided over by Sir Arnold White, Chief Justice. The learned Judge deals with section 15 and describes the jurisdiction it confers, and then says:—

"The same section empowers the Local Government, subject to the exceptions in the Schedule and the provisions of any enactment for the time being in force, to direct that all suits of a civil nature of which the value does not exceed Rs. 1,000 shall be cognizable by the Court of Small Causes. Amongst excepted suits specified in the Schedule are suits for the recovery of rent other than house rent, unless the Judge of the Court of Small Causes has been expressly invested by the Local Government with authority to exercise jurisdiction with respect thereto." (Here is the ground.) "By a notification, dated 24th January 1883, the Madras Government has invested all Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs within the Presidency with jurisdiction to try on their Small Cause side all suits for rent falling within the pecuniary limits of their special jurisdiction."

The grounds of that decision and its ratio decidendi are obviously plain. The authority cited has no application to the present case.

I concur in the judgment of my learned colleague.

Appeals accepted.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 2430 OF 1915.

January 4, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice N. R. Chatterjea and Mr. Justice Newbould.

HARI MOHAN PAL AND ANOTHER—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

KAILASH CHNDRA DHUR—PLAINTIFF,
Sheikh IMAMUDDIN AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act I of 1872, ss. 21, 31—Admissions as to non-existing right, value of Title.

A mere admission cannot create a title which was non-existent, though it would have been binding upon the person making it if the title admitted had really existed. [p. 984, col. 1.]

Appeal against the decree of the Sub-Judge, Dacca, dated the 16th August 1915, modifying that of the Munsif, Munshigonj, dated the 30th November 1914.

FACTS of the case appear from the judgment.

Babu Trailokya Nath Ghose, for the Appellants.—The defendants Nos. 3 and 5 are assignees from the purchaser at revenue sale of the taluk of which the plaintiff was a part-proprietor. He himself being a defaulting, proprietor, all right and title that he had in the estate was extinguished. The lower Appellate Court was wrong in holding that the plaintiff had howladari right, merely relying upon the admission made by the defendant in the road cess return. He had no howladari right, as the kobala upon which he relies as the basis of his title shows. An admission made in the road cess return cannot create a howla right in favour of the plaintiff. See Jadu Nath Poddar v. Rup Lal Poddar (1) and the observation of Mookerji, J., at pages 983 and 984. The case of Dharam Chand Poid v. Mouji Shahu (2) also lays down that title cannot pass by admission or relinquishment when the Statute requires a deed of transfer. Admission would have been good evidence, if there was pre-existing right. In this case there was no such assertion of howladari right in the plaint.

RAMASWAMI AIYAR v. GNANAMANI NACHIAR.

Babu Amarendra Nath Bose (for Babu Monmotha Nath Roy), for the Respondents.—The kobala shows that the right purchased by plaintiff was a subordinate right and not a co-ordinate right. [Reads the kobala.]

[N. R. CHATTERJEA, J.—Both Courts are against you on that point, holding that you purchased the proprietary right. You did not even claim a howla right.]

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff-respondent appears to have purchased the lands in dispute, which form part of a revenue-paying estate, from the proprietors of the estate. The estate was sold for arrears of revenue. The right, therefore, that the plaintiff had in the lands under his purchase was extinguished by the sale. The learned Subordinate Judge was in error in holding that the plaintiff had some right even after the sale. It is true that the defendant, who represents the purchaser at the revenue sale, in certain cess-return admitted that the plaintiff had a howla tenure. But a mere admission cannot create a title. The admission would have been binding upon the defendant had the plaintiff really any howla tenure. But it is not alleged, nor is there any evidence to show, that the plaintiff had any right in the lands, apart from the right which was purchased by him from the proprietors under the kobala of 9th Assin 1275. That right, as we have said, passed by the revenue sale, and that being so we think that the plaintiff's suit must fail.

The judgment and decree of the lower Appellate Court are accordingly set aside and those of the Court of first instance restored with costs in this Court and in the Court of first appeal.

Appeal allowed.

(2) 16 Ind. Cas. 440; 16 C. L. J. 436.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 51 of 1915.

August 17, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Abdur Rahim, Officiating Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Phillips.

V. RAMASWAMI AIYAR—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

GNANAMANI NACHIAR—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Stamp Act (II of 1899), ss. 5, 6, Sch. I, Arts. 1, 55—Document, construction of—Principal and agent—Accounts settled, re-opening of Acknowledgment of liability—Release of agent from liability to account—Entries unstamped, admissibility of—Evidence—Settlement by compromise.

Accounts between a principal and agent were settled and the agent signed an entry to the following effect: "Due to me Rs. . . ." It was followed by a statement by the principal to the following effect: (page 70). "The balance of the liability is made up of moneys advanced by my agent from time to time on my behalf. The above does not include interest due on them." On the next page (page 71) it continued: "I have examined the several items of account entered herein in detail and I find them to be correct. I hereby release my agent from all claims to account against him by me . . . in respect of the said receipts and disbursements. I hereby acknowledge the correctness of every one of the items of expenditure".

Held, per Curiam, that the entries constituted something more than a mere endorsement vouching simply for the correctness of the entries, that they contained an acknowledgment of a debt within the meaning of Article 1 of Schedule I of the Stamp Act and should have been stamped with a one-anna stamp. [p. 986, col. 2.]

Sitaram v. Ram Prasad Ram, 22 Ind. Cas. 858; 19 C. L. J. 87; 18 C. W. N. 697; Mulji Lala v. Linga Makaji, 21 B. 20; Chitty's S. C. C. R. 482; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 136 and Galstaun v. Hutchison, 15 Ind. Cas. 279; 39 C. 789; 16 C. W. N. 945, referred to.

Per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J.—The statement at page 71 is a release of the right to claim an account from the agent and was, within the meaning of section 5 of the Stamp Act, a distinct matter from the acknowledgment of the principal's liability to the agent for a certain amount, which is the effect of the preceding statement, and the entries are admissible in evidence as the agent paid into Court the penalty due under section 35. [p. 987, cols. 1 & 2.]

In applying section 5 of the Indian Stamp Act, one is concerned with what the parties purported to provide for by an instrument, and not whether any particular provisions were necessary or might have been dispensed with. [p. 987, col. 1.]

Limmer Asphaltic Paving Co. v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, (1872) 7 Ex. 211; 41 L. J. Ex. 106; 26 L. T. 63; 20 W. R. 610, referred to.

The statements do not amount to a settlement by compromise. [p. 988, col. 2.]

A settlement by compromise is a case in which the parties agree not to ascertain the exact balance

RAMASWAMI AIYAR v. GNANAMANI NACHIAH.

but agree to take a gross sum as the balance, and not where parties having accounts between them meet and agree to settle those accounts by the ascertainment of the exact balance. [p. 988, col. 2.]

Henry McKellar v. John Wallace, 5 M. I. A. 372; 8 Moore P. O. 378; 1 Eq. Rep. 303; 1 Sar P. C. J. 453; 18 E. R. 936; 14 E. R. 144; 97 R. R. 62, referred to.

A settled account may be opened where substantial error is shown in the account or where fiduciary relations exist and a less considerable number of errors are shown or where fiduciary relation exists and one or more fraudulent omissions or insertions in the account are shown. [p. 989, col. 1.]

Williamson v. Barbour, (1878) 9 Ch. D. 529 at p. 533; 10 L. J. Ch. 147; 37 L. T. 698 and In re Webb Lambert v. Still, (1894) 1 Ch. 73; 63 L. J. Ch. 145; 70 L. T. 318, referred to.

Per Phillips, J.—The recital as to release relates only to the items in respect of which an acknowledgment is given and the two matters are not 'distinct' matters within the meaning of section 5 of the Stamp Act, and the document is an acknowledgment and, being unstamped, is inadmissible in evidence. [p. 990, col. 2; p. 991, col. 1.]

In order to bring a document within the terms of section 6 it must be read as a whole, and if as a whole it comes within two definitions in the Schedule then it must be stamped with the stamp of highest value, where the duties chargeable are different. [p. 990, col. 2.]

Appeal from the judgments of Mr. Justice Bakewell, dated the 26th and 29th March 1915 in the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of this Court in Civil Suit No. 214 of 1914.

Messrs. J. L. Rozario and V. V. Srinivasa Aiyangar, for the Appellant.

Messrs. T. Narasimha Aiyangar and A. Suryanarayana Aiyar, for the Respondent.

This appeal coming on for hearing on the 7th and 9th respectively of August 1916 and having been posted to be spoken to on the 11th August 1916 and having stood over for consideration till this day, the Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT.

ABDUL RAHIM, OFFG. C. J.—This appeal is from the judgment of Bakewell, J., dismissing a suit instituted by one Mr. V. Ramaswami Aiyar against the zemindari of Sivagiri to recover a sum of Rs. 43,116.12.4. The late zemindar, whose mother is the defendant, appointed the plaintiff, by powers of attorney dated the 31st July 1911 and 31st October 1912, his agent to manage his affairs at Madras and elsewhere excepting the zemindari itself. The plaintiff founds his claim to the extent of Rs. 31,000.12.4 on the basis of accounts settled between him and the late zemindar on the 14th October 1913, showing this amount to be due to him for remuneration for services rendered by him and for moneys advanced by him to the zemindar from time to time. Of the balance Rs. 12,741.10.0 consists, he says, of various sums of money which he paid to certain creditors of the zemindar after his power-of-attorney was cancelled (that was on 15th October 1913) and which have not been recouped to him. He paid those debts as he had incurred liability for them on behalf of the zemindar. The rest of the amount claimed is on account of interest on these sums at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, which he alleges the zemindar had agreed to pay.

It is alleged in defence that when the Court of Wards handed over the zemindari of Sivagiri to the deceased zemindar in April 1910 there was a saving of about 8 lakhs of rupees, but that about the middle of 1911 he came under the sinister influence of the plaintiff who acquired considerable ascendancy over him, with the result that the zemindar went on contracting large debts. The powers-of-attorney mentioned in the plaint were procured from the zemindar by means of fraud and undue influence, not for any lawful or legitimate purpose, but for contracting large and unnecessary debts so that the plaintiff might enrich himself at the expense of zemindar. The written statement goes on to state that about September 1913 some friends and relations of the zemindar, finding that he was going from bad to worse under the influence of the plaintiff, prevailed upon him to dismiss the plaintiff from his service and to renounce his company. As regards the settlement of account, the deed of release and the power-of-attorney executed by the zemindar on the 14th October 1913, it is stated that his signatures to these documents were obtained in suspicious circumstances when the zemindar had no proper and independent advice. The so-called settlement of account is impeached as false and fraudulent. It is stated that the plaintiff never rendered account to the zemindar and the latter never looked into any accounts; that the accounts relied on contain fraudulent omissions and false debits amounting to a considerable sum, as set out in the schedule attached to the written statement. The defendant charges that if an account be directed by the Court the plaintiff will be found to be liable to the defendant for not less than a lakh of rupees. The entire accounts commencing from 31st July 1911 to 13th October 1913, that is more than two years, and relating to about six lakhs of rupees are contained in 73 pages of a small book marked as Exhibit E. Page 69 shows that the amount to the debit of the zemindar on the 13th October 1913 was Rs. 3,58,140-12-4 and that to his credit Rs. 1,43,290-0-0, so that the total indebtedness of the zemindar is stated at Rs. 2,14,850 12-4. At the top of the next page, i. e., 70, is the entry "due to me (i. e., to the plaintiff himself) Rs. 24,850-12-4;" then underneath there appear 'details' consisting of four items of Rs. 40,000, 45,000, 25,000 and 80,000 as being due to other persons. At the foot there is a statement in these words: "The balance of the liability is made up of moneys advanced by my agent Mr. V. Ramaswami Aiyar from time to time on my behalf. The above does not include interest due on them." At page 71 it continues: "I have examined the several items of account entered herein in detail and I find them to be correct. I hereby release my agent Mr. V. Ramaswami Aiyar from all claims to account against him by me or any one claiming under or in trust for me and from all claims, actions and demands whatsoever in respect of the said receipts and disbursements. I hereby acknowledge the correctness of every one of the items of expenditure." Underneath is the signature of the zemindar. At the next page Rs. 2,14,850-12-4 is carried forward, to which is added "salary from May to September 1913 Rs. 3,750" and "Interest on the loans advanced by me (i. e., plaintiff) from time to time Rs. 2,400"—totalling Rs. 2,21,000-12-4. Underneath are the zemindar's initials.

RAMASWAMI AIYAR v. GNANAMANI NACHIAR.

The learned Trial Judge has rejected these statements, as in his opinion they contain an acknowledgment of a debt within the meaning of Article 1 of Schedule I to the Indian Stamp Act and should, therefore, have been stamped with a one-anna stamp. Mr. C. P. Ramaswami Aiyar, the learned Vakil for the appellant, contends in the first place that this reading of the document is wrong. But there can be no doubt whatsoever that the statement "Due to me" followed by the endorsement "the balance of liability, etc.," set out above does amount to an acknowledgment of a debt. It clearly purports to be more than a mere endorsement vouching simply for the correctness of the entries. We have been referred to a number of decided cases, but in each case one has to look to the nature of the endorsement, as showing what the parties intended. Here the intention of the plaintiff and the zemindar clearly was that the statement in question should furnish evidence of the latter's liability. The cases which approach nearest to this are Sitaram v. Ram Prosad Ram (1), in which the words 'balance due Rs....' and Mulji Lala v. Lingu Makaji (2) where the words 'all accounts being made up Rs. 102 in full up to.....' were held to amount to an acknowledgment, while in Gulstain v. Hutchison (3) the statement which was held not to amount to an acknowledgment was "I accept as correct."

The next contention of Mr. C. P. Ramaswami Aiyar that the statement "The above does not include interest on them" is a stipulation to pay interest within the meaning of Article 1 is also untenable. The case of Mulchand Lala v. Kashiullah Biswas (4) has no bearing, as the words there were 'this amount will bear interest at the rate of Rs. 18-0 per cent. per mensem.'

It is then argued on behalf of the appellant that the statement at page 71 is a 'release' as defined in Article 55 of Schedule I to the Indian Stamp Act and, therefore, even if the writing at page 70 be held to be an acknowledgment of a debt, both should be read as one instrument to which either section 5 or section 6 of the Indian Stamp Act applies and that the document could not, therefore, be

(1) 22 Ind. Cas. 558; 19 C. L. J. 87; 18 C. W. N. 697.

(2) 21 B. 201; Chitty's S. C. C. R. 482; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 136.

(3) 15 Ind. Cas. 279; 39 C. 789; 16 C. W. N. 945.

(4) 11 C. W. N. 1120; 35 C. 111.

RAMASWAMI AIYAR v. GNANAMANI NACHIAR.

excluded from evidence but should have been admitted, the plaintiff being allowed to pay the penalty prescribed by section 35 of the Act. Section 5 says: "Any instrument comprising or relating to several distinct matters shall be chargeable with the aggregate amount of the duties with which separate instruments, each comprising or relating to one of such matters, would be chargeable under this Act." And section 6 provides, "Subject to the provisions of the last preceding section, an instrument so framed as to come within two or more of the descriptions in Schedule I shall, where the duties chargeable thereunder are different, be chargeable only with the highest of such duties." In my opinion the statement at page 71 "I have examined expenditure" was clearly intended to operate as a release of the zemindar's right to claim an amount from the plaintiff, and this is within the meaning of section 5 a distinct matter from the acknowledgment by the zemindar of his liability to plaintiff for a certain amount, which is the effect of the preceding statement. Mr. Narasimha Aiyangar contended on behalf of the respondent that where the subject-matter is one even though the instrument embodies distinct contracts, section 5 does not apply. He says that since there was an acknowledgment by the zemindar that as a result of the settlement of accounts a certain amount was due by him to the plaintiff, it followed that he himself could have no claim against the plaintiff. But in applying section 5 of the Indian Stamp Act one is concerned with what the parties purported to provide for by an instrument, and not whether any particular provisions were necessary or might have been dispensed with. Nor can it be said that acknowledgment by a principal upon a settlement of accounts that a certain amount is due by him to the agent is in its legal effect the same as a release by the former of his right to claim an account from the latter, which includes the right to open stated and settled accounts in certain circumstances. The English rulings cited by the respondent's learned Vakil such as Limmer Asphaltic Paving Co. v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (5), the effect of which is stated in Hals-bury's Laws of England, Volume 24, at page 707, throw no light on the present question and are based on the provisions of the English Stamp Act which are different in this respect from those of the Indian Stamp Act. I hold, therefore, that the statements at pages 69 to 71 of the account should be admitted into evidence as the plaintiff has paid into Court the penalty due under section 35.
 (5) (1872) 7 Exch. 211; 41 L. J. Ex. 106; 26 L. T. 633; 20 W. R. 610.

Mr. Justice Bakewell, having refused to admit these statements in evidence, went into the accounts and came to the conclusion that they were not properly kept and contained considerable errors. Of the amount claimed by the plaintiff Rs. 15,250 is on account of his salary at the rate of Rs. 750 a month and the balance of Rs. 9,750 on account of moneys actually advanced by him. As regards the latter item the learned Judge was not satisfied that the plaintiff lent any money at all to the late zemindar or had any money of his own to lend. As for the arrears of salary he finds that plaintiff has failed to account for more than that amount of the zemindar's money in his hands. He selected three of the items mentioned by the defendant for special examination and found that the plaintiff omitted to credit to the late zemindar two items of Rs. 2,000-0-0 and Rs. 15,000-0-0 and wrongly charged him with a sum of Rs. 3,200.

The learned Judge rightly points out that the account kept by the plaintiff, if it can be called account at all, is of a most remarkable character. According to the evidence of the plaintiff himself it was not kept from day to day. Notes of the zemindar's transactions used to be made by the plaintiff on slips of papers and at the intervals of 2 or 3 months he used to go with them to his relation Mr. Duraisami Aiyar, who used to write the entries in the book, Exhibit E, to the plaintiff's dictation. These slips of paper have not been produced. The entries are not in any chronological order and the information which they furnish is of the most meagre character. To give an instance, it is not possible to ascertain how the sum of Rs. 24,850-12-4 said to be due to the plaintiff is made up. According to the statement quoted by the learned Judge from the plaintiff's own evidence, his method was to debit the zemindar with all the items on the debit side, to debit him with all the sums expended by the plaintiff on his behalf and all the sums borrowed by the zemindar from other persons and to give credit for all the sums on the credit side and to treat the balance arrived at as the plaintiff's money. It is pointed out that the plaintiff opened an account in August 1911 in his own name in the Indian Bank with Rs. 1,000, which he alleges was his own money; but moneys belonging to the zemindar were paid into this account and large sums were drawn out resulting in a debit balance of about Rs. 77,000 in February 1912. Then that account was closed. In January or February 1912 two accounts were opened one in his own name and another in the zemindar's name; the zemindar's account was debited with the Rs. 77,000. In all the three accounts the zemindar's moneys were paid and the plaintiff drew upon them for his own and the zemindar's purposes indiscriminately. The plaintiff opened a fourth account in the National Bank in his own name for the purpose of transactions in connection with 'the Madras Times' newspaper, in which the zemindar had acquired a large interest. Thus, as observed by Mr. Justice Bakewell, the plaintiff according to his own case inextricably mixed up the zemindar's moneys with his own, and the burden is entirely upon him to show by as clear evidence as possible what moneys he had of his own and advanced to the zemindar or spent on his behalf. This he has failed entirely to prove and his learned Vakil, Mr. C. P. Ramaswami Aiyar, has not in fact attempted to base his case on any such proof. The learned Trial Judge doubts if the Rs. 1,000 with which the first account was opened belonged to the plaintiff and, in my opinion, his doubts are fully justified by the circumstances.

RAMASWAMI AIYAR v. GNANAMANI NACHIAR.

The late zemindar of Sivagiri, who inherited a large and valuable zemindari and started with considerable funds at his credit, must have been a most reckless spendthrift for we find that during the four years that he lived after attaining majority he went through the several lakhs that were saved for him by the Court of Wards and died indebted to the extent of some lakhs. He had to start with the entire income of the zemindari at his disposal but latterly received an allowance of Rs. 5,000 a month from the zemindari, exclusive of what he required for any extraordinary expense such as a trip to England. Then he had the income of his other properties at Madras and elsewhere. All the zemindar's moneys passed through the plaintiff's hands and it does not appear that the plaintiff had resources of his own out of which to make advances to the zemindar.

The agent's whole contention before us has been that, however badly he kept the accounts, his principal, the zemindar, was fully cognisant of the fact as evidenced by his initials at three or four places in Exhibit E, and we are asked to hold that the zemindar waived all enquiry and scrutiny. In fact it is argued that the acknowledgment and the release of the 14th October were in the nature of a settlement by way of compromise within the ruling in Henry McKellar v. John Wallace (5). But this is a new case which was not sought to be made in the plaint or at the trial. In fact the plaintiff's case had hitherto been that the zemindar used to examine the accounts with the aid of vouchers and put his initials to them on being satisfied as to their accuracy, and that the same process was gone through on the 14th October 1913 when the accounts were finally settled between the parties. The suit is based on the footing of stated and settled accounts and not on any settlement by compromise. To use the language of the Judicial Committee, "It is a case in which the parties having accounts between them may meet and agree to settle those accounts by the ascertainment of the exact balance", and not "where persons meet and agree not to ascertain the exact balance but agree to take a gross sum as the balance." They go on to observe "in either case it may be vitiated by fraud; in either case it is good for nothing if, either from the collusion of the parties upon the circumstances under which the settlement takes place it is proved in a Court of Equity, that the transaction was not so fairly and so fully understood between the parties, either from the confusion in which it was involved or from misrepresentations made on the one side or the other, as it ought to have been and that injustice has been done to either side." The very evidence so strongly relied upon by the appellant's Vakil such as the statement in Exhibit F and in Exhibit A shows not that there was any settlement by compromise but that the account was examined by the zemindar and acknowledged by him to be correct.

(6) 5 M. I. A. 372; 8 Moore P. C. 378; 1 Eq. Rep. 809; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 453; 18 E. R. 936; 14 E. R. 144; 97 E. R. 62.

RANASWAMI AIYAR v. GNANAMANI NAACHIAR.

Now regarding the law as to when settled accounts will be opened there is no room for doubt. It is perhaps best stated in the words of Jessel, M. R., in Williamson v. Barbour (7): "Where the accounts have been shown to be erroneous to a considerable extent both in amount and in the number of items, or where fiduciary relations exist and a less considerable number of errors are shown, or where the fiduciary relation exists and one or more fraudulent omissions or insertions in the account are shown, there the Court opens the account and does not merely surcharge and falsify." Nor would the fact of a release following upon a settled account otherwise liable to be opened make any difference. In In re Webb, Lambert v. Still (8) Lindley, L. J., says: "What is necessary in order to set aside a settled account or a release, or both together, when the release proceeds upon the footing of an account? It is essential to show that there has been some injustice done—to show that there has been some fraud, some pressure, some overcharge, something wrong to cloak up which the release has been obtained. Prove that, and the release cannot stand." In the same case Davey, L. J., states the law in this way: "I take it that a release in the eye of a Court of Equity is nothing more than a record by deed of a settled account, and, unless the settled account is unimpeachable, the fact of the parties having signed a release will not assist those who depend upon it for a defence." In the circumstances of this case the Court will not hesitate to open the so-called settled account in spite of the release, if any substantial error is shown in the account. The evidence leaves no doubt that the zemindar when he put his initials or signature did not at all understand the account: I do not believe that he even examined any vouchers or that vouchers were regularly submitted to him as alleged. In fact vouchers dating from 1911 were in possession of the plaintiff in October 1913, when he handed them over to the zemindar's Solicitors Messrs. King and Partridge. The zemindar who was not a man of any business capacity appears to have been considerably under the influence of the plaintiff and was in fact afraid of him for some reason or other—it may be because he was living an unusually wild life. The facts lead to the only possible inference that the zemindar signed whatever the plaintiff asked him to sign without caring or venturing to enquire what it was. Even according to the plaintiff himself it was only at considerable intervals that the account (Exhibit E) was shown to the zemindar and that account gives the least possible information both as to the receipts and disbursements and was so drawn up as to confuse rather than elucidate matters. The learned Trial Judge is in fact right in saying that Exhibit E can scarcely be called an account, and I doubt if there is any real question in this case of opening a stated and settled account. In any case the facts show that the plaintiff not only failed to perform the most elementary duty of an agent in keeping his principal fully informed of the state of his affairs but deliberately did everything to mislead him.

I shall very briefly deal with the items dealt with by Mr. Justice Bakewell. The first is a sum of Rs. 2,000, which the plaintiff received from the Stable Company but did not enter to the credit of the zemindar. The explanation is, as if it was any explanation at all, that he spent Rs. 1,150 for purchasing a jewel for the zemindar and the balance Rs. 850 was paid towards the price of a press. So far as the jewel is concerned the plaintiff has failed to prove that it was bought for the zemindar and not for himself. The next item is Rs. 15,000 consisting of two sums of Rs. 5,000 and Rs. 10,000 remitted from the zemindari on 10th May 1913 and 28th May 1913, for which the plaintiff gave receipts to the Dewan but which, it is charged, he has not entered in the account. Mr. C. P. Ramaswami Aiyar on behalf of his client has tried in the first place to make out, on the strength of Exhibit XXI, that the Rs. 5,000 was remitted direct to the zemindar by a telegraphic money order. But if that were so, the fact ought to have been noted in the receipt given by the plaintiff as in the instance referred to by the learned Trial Judge. Then it is contended that the whole amount of Rs. 15,000 must be included in the Rs. 1,20,000 received from 24th May 1912 to August 1913. According to the particulars given by Mr. Chandrasekhara Aiyar, Pleader for the plaintiff, in answer to the question put to the plaintiff by the learned Judge during trial it is suggested that this is part of the Rs. 30,000 entered in Exhibit E under date 6th December 1912 (page 33), 'Estate Manager Rs. 30,000.' It is argued that this Rs. 15,000 must be taken to have been accounted for, because while the defendant's case is that between the above-mentioned dates Rs. 1,06,100 in all were remitted from the zemindari (Schedule II to the written statement), the plaintiff has given credit for Rs. 1,20,000. But the plaintiff states (page 391) that the Rs. 30,000 referred to above is the amount referred to in the zemindar's pass book (Exhibit VI, page 109) in entries dated 29th November 'By drafts Rs. 29,500, Hundi through South Indian Bank, Tinnevely, Rs. 429-6-0 and amount received Rs. 70-10-0.' Mr. Narasimha Aiyangar, the learned Vakil for the defendant, is, therefore, right when he says that the Rs. 30,000 which is included in the Rs. 1,20,000 is what the plaintiff received from the Tinnevely Bank and is in addition to the Rs. 1,06,100 received by the plaintiff from the zemindari as shown by his own receipts. The plaintiff has not, therefore, accounted for the two sums of Rs. 10,000 and Rs. 5,000, and his own statements in his first cross-examination on this point quoted in the judgment of the Court of first instance make it amply clear that he had no explanation to give. The 3rd item is a sum of Rs. 3,200 paid to D'Angelis and Sons in March 1913 with which the plaintiff has debited the late zemindar twice over, first in the 'Madras Times' account (Exhibit XXX, page 164) and again in Exhibit E (page 38). Mr. C. P. Ramaswami Aiyar points out that the credit slip for this amount does not bear his client's initials and therefore, he says, the 'Madras Times' clerk ought not to have entered the amount in that account. But the evidence of Mr. Salanson who audited the 'Madras Times' account makes it clear that the plaintiff did not take objection to the entry in question. The findings of the learned Judge as to all these items are correct. They constitute serious errors in the accounts relied on by the plaintiff and fully justified the learned Judge in not treating them as closed by any settlement. He gave an opportunity to the plaintiff to apply for an account to be taken, but he did not avail himself of that opportunity. In fact the plaintiff's suit is not for the taking of accounts but for the recovery of a definite sum on the footing of settled accounts. The 3 items, which have been examined amount to more than what might be due to the plaintiff on account of arrears of salary, and it is not proved that he advanced any moneys of his own to the zemindar. The appeal will be dismissed with costs.

(7) (1875) 9 Ch. D. 529 at p. 533; 50 L. J. Ch. 147; 37 L. T. 698.

(8) (1894) 1 Ch. 73; 63 L. J. Ch. 145; 70 L. T. 318.

RANASWAMI AIYAR v. GNANAMANI NACHIAR.

PILLIPS, J—I agree in the order proposed, but I have considerable doubt as to whether the interpretation put upon the endorsement in Exhibit E by the learned Chief Justice is correct. Inasmuch as the recital as to release relates only to the items in respect of which an acknowledgment is given, the two matters do not appear to me to be "distinct" matters within the meaning of section 5 of the Indian Stamp Act, for the two matters are very closely connected and are practically the same. In order to bring a document within the terms of section 6, it seems to me that the document must be read as a whole, and if as a whole it comes within two definitions in the schedule then it must be stamped with the stamp of highest value, where the duties chargeable are different. In this case the whole document can be read as an acknowledgment, the implied release in which is put into words, but the whole document cannot be read as a release to which the acknowledgment is subsidiary. The intention of the parties must also be looked to in construing the document and here they can hardly have intended the document to operate as a release, for a draft release deed was in existence at the time when Exhibit E was signed and was signed and registered immediately afterwards. I would, therefore, agree with Bakawell, J., that the document is an acknowledgment and being unstamped is inadmissible in evidence. I have only dealt very briefly with this point, as the admission of or rejection of the document does not affect the case on the merits.

JADUNANDAN SAHAY v. JUNG BAHADUR SAHAY.

Appeal dismissed.

V.R.P.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION CASE NO. 133 OF 1916.

December 13, 1916.

Present: Mr Justice Jwala Prasad.

JADUNANDAN SAHAY—DEFENDANT—

APPLICANT

versus

JUNG BAHADUR SAHAY—PLAINTIFF

—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Jurisdiction—Small Cause suit tried on Original Side—Defendant not objecting in first instance—Revision—High Court, power of, to interfere.

Where a Small Cause suit is tried on the Original Side, the parties not raising any question of jurisdiction in the Trial Court, and an appeal from the decree of the latter Court is heard and decided by the District Judge, it is open to the High Court to look into the merits of the case and either to interfere or not to interfere with the decree of the lower Courts as the justice of the case may require. [p 992, col. 2]

Suresh Chunder Maitra v. Kristo Rangini Dasi, 21 C. 249; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 794; Parameswari v. Jayat Chandra Das, 27 Ind. Cas. 972; 21 C. L. J. 141; 19 C. W. N. 900 and Ram Lal v. Kabul Singh, 25 A. 135; A. W. N. (1902) 219, relied upon.

Ramasamy Chettiar v. R. G. Orr, 26 M. 176; 12 M. L. J. 264; Kollipara Seetapathy v. Kankipaty Subaya, 1 Ind. Cas. 543; 33 M. 323; 20 M. L. J. 718; Shankar-bhai v. Somabhai, 25 B. 417; 3 Bom. L. R. 129 and Maharana Shri Davlatsinghji v. Khachar Hamir Mon, 4 Ind. Cas. 830; 34 B. 171; 11 Bom. L. R. 1330, not followed.

Civil revision against the judgment of the Sub-Judge, Chapra, dated the 26th April 1916, modifying the decree of the Munsif, 4th Court, Chapra, dated the 10th December 1915.

Mr. Harnarain Prasad, for the Applicant.

Messrs. R. L. Dutta, Sivasaran Lal, Rajendra Prasad and Rai Tribhuan Sahai, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The opposite party brought a suit for contribution against the petitioner in respect of Rs. 202, which the opposite party was obliged to pay to meet the cost for the preparation of paper books in certain appeals in the High Court in which both the petitioners and the opposite party were appellants. The petitioner was liable to pay to the plaintiff-opposite party half the costs for the preparation of the paper-books. The suit was instituted in the Court of the Munsif at Chapra and was valued at Rs. 135-6-0 principal with interest. The suit was cognizable by a Small Cause Court under Schedule II, rule 41, of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, IX of 1887. Under section 16 of the Act, the trial of the suit was barred by any Court other than the Court of Small Causes in the district of Saran. The Munsif had no power to try a Small Cause suit. He had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit or to try it. The petitioner-defendant did not, however, raise any objection to the suit being tried by the Munsif. The suit was tried by the Munsif on the Original Side, who gave a decree to the plaintiff for Rs. 25 only, (i.e.,) for a smaller sum than that claimed by the plaintiff. Both parties appealed. The appeals were heard by the Subordinate Judge of Saran, who by his judgment dated April the 26, 1916, decreed the appeal preferred by the plaintiff and gave a decree to him for the entire sum claimed by him. He dismissed the appeal preferred by the applicant.

The applicant does not challenge the finding of the lower Appellate Court on the merits of the case. He, however, urges that the trial of the case by both the Courts below on the Ordinary Civil Side was without jurisdiction and hence the decree passed by the Court below should be set aside by this Court under its revisional powers under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

JADUNANDAN SAHAY v. JUNG BAHADUR SAHAY.

The only question is what order should the High Court make, assuming that the suit was of the nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court.

There is a conflict of decisions of the different High Courts as to what should be done in a case of this kind.

The Calcutta High Court, in Suresh Chunder Maitra v. Kristo Rangini Dasi (1), where a suit cognizable by a Small Cause Court was tried both in the Munsif and the District Judge's Courts on the Ordinary Civil Side, without objection to the jurisdiction being made by the parties, held that section 646B of the Code of Civil Procedure (1882) modified the effect of section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act in such a manner as to make it incompetent for either party to plead want of jurisdiction of the Court which tried the suit. The Court further held that the High Court had full power to consider the matter of jurisdiction or to deal with the case on the merits, so as to do substantial justice without necessarily putting the parties to the expense of a fresh trial.

This view was confirmed by the Calcutta High Court in Parameswari v. Jagat Chandra Das (2).

The Allahabad High Court, in Ram Lal v. Kabul Singh (3), where a case tried as a Small Cause suit was referred by the District Judge under section 646B of the old Code of Civil Procedure to the High Court for setting aside the decree of the Munsif on the ground that the suit was not cognizable by the Small Cause Court and that the Munsif who tried the suit had exercised a jurisdiction which was not vested in that Court by law, declined to interfere on the ground that the party had not raised any objection to the jurisdiction of the first Court to try the suit and had raised it for the first time before the District Judge, and hence there was no erroneous holding as to jurisdiction by the 1st Court.

There was a conflict of decisions in the Madras High Court. A Division Bench of the Madras High Court in Ramasamy Chettiar v. R. G. Orr, (4) declined to follow the Calcutta ruling in Suresh Chunder Maitra v. Kristo Rangini Dasi (1), whereas another Division Bench of the same Court adopted the principles of the Calcutta ruling and declined to interfere in second appeal in a Small Cause Court case tried by the first Court and the District Court of Appeal on their original side without any objection by the parties as to the jurisdiction of the Courts. The Full Bench of the same Court in Kollipara Setaipaty v. Kankipaty Subbaya (5), however, set aside the Appellate Court decision in a Small Cause Court case tried by the first Court on its original side. The Full Bench declined to follow the Calcutta ruling in Suresh Chunder Maitra v. Kristo Rangini Dasi (1) and the Madras ruling in Parameswaran Nambudri v. Vishnu Embrandri (6) and went back on the ruling in Ramasamy Chettiar v. R. G. Orr (4).

The Bombay High Court in Shankarbhai v. Somabhai (7) and in Maharana Shri Davlatsinghji v. Khachar Hamir Mon (8) reversed the decree of the Appellate Court on the ground that it had no jurisdiction to try an appeal of a case which was of a Small Cause Court nature, although it was tried by the 1st Court under its ordinary jurisdiction.

Following the principles of the decisions in the Calcutta and the Allahabad Courts, I hold that in a case like the present one, where the parties had not raised any question as to jurisdiction in the Court that tried the suit, it is open to the High Court to look into the merits of the case and either to interfere or not to interfere with the decree of the lower Courts as the justice of the case requires. If the Court has this discretion vested in it by Order XLVI, rule 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure, corresponding to section 646 of the old Code, where the matter comes up to it in reference by the District Court, the High Court has surely power

(1) 21 C. 249; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 798.

(2) 27 Ind. Cas. 972; 21 C. L. J. 141; 19 C. W. N. 900.

(3) 25 A. 135; A. W. N. (1902) 219.

(4) 26 M. 176; 12 M. L. J. 264.

(5) 1 Ind. Cas. 543; 33 M. 323; 20 M. L. J. 718.

(6) 27 M. 478.

(7) 25 B. 417; 3 Bom. L. R. 129.

(8) 4 Ind. Cas. 830; 34 B. 171; 11 Bom. L. R. 1330.

KAILAS CHANDRA SARKAR v. KANTIRAM DAS BANIA.

to exercise the same discretion to interfere or not to interfere, when the matter comes up to it under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure on the application of any party. Under section 115 the Court's power is discretionary, as the word "may" in that section indicates. In the present case the parties did not object in the first Court to the suit being tried as an ordinary civil suit. The Munsif gave a partial decree, holding that the claim for the rest of the amount was barred by limitation. Both parties appealed to the District Judge. The learned Subordinate Judge who heard the appeals gave a decree for the entire sum claimed by the plaintiff. The Subordinate Judge had Small Cause Court powers up to the value of Rs. 500 and had, therefore, jurisdiction to try the suit if it had originally been instituted before him on the Small Cause Court side. He had, of course, no jurisdiction to hear appeals from the decision of a Small Cause Court Judge. He heard the appeal from the decision of the Munsif as an ordinary Appellate Court. From the judgment of the Subordinate Judge it is clear that he went thoroughly into the merits of the case and gave judgment after a careful consideration of the evidence on the record. The lower Appellate Court has held that the parties had submitted to the jurisdiction of the first Court to try the suit without any objection and the petitioner was not prejudiced by the trial and hence it was not proper to throw out the suit at that stage. If the suit is thrown out at this stage by the High Court, the plaintiff's claim will probably be barred by limitation and the plaintiff will be left without any remedy.

Having regard to the circumstances of the case and to the fact that there has been a prolonged trial of the suit in both the Courts below and that the litigation has been a protracted one and lasted for a number of years, it is not at all desirable in the ends of justice to interfere with the decree of the lower Appellate Court under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure and to drive the parties to a fresh trial involving heavy expenses and waste of time. I, therefore, decline to interfere with the decree of the lower Appellate Court and dismiss the application with costs, hearing fee one gold mohur.

Application dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE ORDER No. 547
OF 1915.

January 9, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and
Mr. Justice Richardson.

KAILAS CHANDRA SARKAR—CREDITOR
—APPELLANT

versus

KANTIRAM DAS BANIA—INSOLVENT—
RESPONDENT.

*Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), ss. 6, 16, 46
—Creditor's decree against insolvent, execution of—Jurisdiction.*

A creditor who has obtained a decree and who has proved his debt in the insolvency proceedings, is at liberty to execute his decree against the property which he alleges to be the property of the insolvent upon his undertaking to hand over to the Receiver all moneys realised in execution for the benefit of the general body of creditors. [p. 994, cols. 1 & 2.]

An insolvency Court has jurisdiction, and would exercise a wise discretion, in permitting an executing creditor at his own risk and at his own costs to enforce his decree against the property alleged to be the property of the insolvent that has been concealed by some benamidar or other person on behalf of the insolvent. [p. 994, col. 2.]

Appeal against the order of the District Judge, Rangpur, dated the 27th of May 1915.

FACTS material to the report will appear from the judgment.

Babu Girija Prasanna Sanyal, (for Babu Atul Chunder Gupta), for the Appellant.—The debtor in this case has obtained an order of adjudication. The creditor avers that the debtor has excluded from his sworn assets property, both moveable and immoveable of which he is in possession and enjoyment in the pseudonym of other persons. The creditor intending to proceed against these properties presented an application for leave under section 16 of the Provincial Insolvency Act to the insolvency Court at Rangpur. The learned Judge has rejected the application holding that he has no jurisdiction to entertain it under the said section.

MADHUR SAH v. THAG SAH.

[FLETCHER, J.—I think there he is right.]

I respectfully submit he is not. An adjudication order follows upon a petition almost as a matter of course if the petition conforms to the conditions stated in section 6. Thereafter the debtor's assets vest in the Court or the Receiver appointed by the Court. The Receiver is competent under section 20 to initiate proceedings for realising the property of the debtor. But in a case like the present where the insolvent puts his assets at Rs. 23 and his debts at more than Rs. 1,500, the Receiver cannot be reasonably expected to make a move. The provision in section 16 under sub-clause (2), therefore, enacts that there should be secured a remedy to the aggrieved creditor who would otherwise be left without any. The section, however, cautiously arms the Court with adequate discretion and enables it to put the creditor to terms. The enactment in question corresponds to section 9 (1) of 46 & 47 Vic. C. 52 (The English Bankruptcy Act, 1883); but unfortunately the point is covered by no reported authority under either the English or the Indian Act.

[FLETCHER, J.—Why don't you take proceedings to discover the insolvent's property?]

There is, I submit, no provision in the Provincial Insolvency Act like section 36 of the Presidency Act which enables the creditor to do so.

[RICHARDSON, J.—Is there any appeal from the order complained of?]

Yes, there is under section 46, clause (2).

Nemo for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This is an appeal against an order passed by the learned District Judge of Rangpur, dated the 27th May 1915. The appeal arises out of an application made in some insolvency proceedings. The appellant before us is a creditor who appears to have proved his debt in the insolvency proceedings. This creditor obtained a decree against the insolvent. He then applied to the learned District Judge for leave to execute the decree that was held by him. The District Judge was of opinion that he had no jurisdiction to do so. I am not satisfied that that is right. Many orders have been made under the Provincial Insolvency Act declaring that a creditor is at liberty to execute his decree against the property alleged to be the property of the insolvent upon his undertaking to hand over to the Receiver of the estate of the insolvent for the benefit of the general body of the creditors the sum so realised in execution. It seems to me that, in that view, the learned District Judge would have exercised a wiser discretion in permitting this executing creditor at his own risk and at his own costs to enforce his decree against the property alleged to be the property of the insolvent that has been concealed by some benamidar or other person on behalf of the insolvent. In that view, we ought to reverse the decision of the learned District Judge and, in lieu thereof, make an order that the creditor, the appellant before us, be permitted to execute his decree against the property which he alleges is the property of the insolvent upon his undertaking to hand over to the Receiver all moneys realised in execution for the benefit of the general body of the creditors. The appellant is entitled to add his costs in this appeal to his claim. We assess the hearing-fee at one gold mohur.

RICHARDSON, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1622 OF 1915.

June 14, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sharfuddin and
Mr. Justice Roe.

MADHUR SAH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

THAG SAH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 27—Sale by unregistered deed—Subsequent sale to another by registered deed—Suit to register deed and for declaration that subsequent sale is void, nature of—Specific performance—Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 49—Evidence—Unregistered sale-deed, admissibility of.

An unregistered sale-deed cannot be used in evidence of a contract which in itself affects property. [p. 996, col. 1.]

Plaintiff obtained an unregistered sale-deed of the property in dispute from the first defendant, who subsequently sold the same property to the second defendant under a registered sale-deed. Plaintiff thereupon instituted a suit against both defendants asking (1) that defendant No. 1 should be ordered either to register the unregistered sale-deed or to execute and register a second sale-deed, and (2) for a declaration that the transaction between the de fendant No. 2 and defendant No. 1 was null and void, and for possession of the property:

MADHUR SAH v. THAG SAH.

Held, that the suit was one for specific performance under section 27 of the Specific Relief Act. [p. 995, col. 2.]

Surendra Nath Nag Chowdhury v. Gopal Ghunder Ghosh, 8 Ind. Cas. 794; 12 C. L. J. 864, referred to.

Second appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Chapra, dated the 30th April 1915, affirming that of the Munsif, Chapra, dated the 4th December 1914.

Mr. Harihar Prasad Singh, for the Appellant.

Mr. Nirsu Narayan Sinha, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the facts are, that the plaintiff obtained on the 23rd July 1912, a deed of sale executed by the defendant No. 1 and duly attested in respect of the property in suit. This document was not then and has not up to date been registered. On the 13th August 1912, the first defendant sold the same property to the second defendant by a document duly registered. The plaintiff thereupon instituted a suit against both defendants, the relief asked for being, first, that the defendant No. 1 should be required either to register the existing unregistered sale-deed or to execute and register a second sale-deed and against defendant No. 2 he asked for a declaration that the transaction between the defendant No. 2 and defendant No. 1 was null and void by reason of the previous transaction with the plaintiff and should be so declared null and void and possession of the property delivered to the plaintiff.

During the pendency of the suit the defendant No. 1 compromised the case with the plaintiff and executed and registered a fresh document as desired by the plaintiff. The defendant No. 2 continued to contest the suit. The lower Courts held that the suit as framed was not maintainable and concurred in dismissing the plaintiff's suit.

Against these decisions a second appeal is laid in this Court. The judgment delivered by the lower Appellate Court begins: "This was not a suit for the specific performance of a contract." I do not see how a suit for specific performance could have been framed otherwise than in the frame of the present suit. Under sections 27 (a) and 27 (b) of the Specific Relief Act the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for specific performance as against the defendant No. 1, and for possession as against the defendant No. 2 if the defendant No. 2 could have been shown to have had knowledge of the plaintiff's contract at the time when he entered into his own contract. Clearly it was a suit for specific performance. The lower Courts seem to have converted it into a suit for the registration of a document and to have discussed only cases in which suits for the registration of a document were either maintained or dismissed. This case, in my opinion, is a perfectly simple one under the Specific Relief Act and must be remanded to the lower Courts for further consideration. There is now no question of any suit against the defendant No. 1 for registration. That part of the suit has been compromised between the plaintiff and defendant No. 1. The original document remains unregistered. The registered document is dated subsequent to the document of the defendant No. 2.

The point in issue is very simple. Is the plaintiff's second document void by reason of the title of the defendant No. 1 having passed by his sale to the defendant No. 2? Or is the defendant No. 2's title void by reason of an existing contract between the parties of which he was fully aware? The only point for consideration is, whether the unregistered document can be considered as evidence of this contract? Great stress has been laid upon the case of Surendra Nath Nag Chowdhury v. Gopal Ghunder Ghosh (1) and the long line of case-law quoted therein. That case was a clean case under section 27 (a) of the Specific Relief Act, and inasmuch as in a case of this description the contract itself does not affect the property until it has been reduced to writing and registered, it may be said that an unregistered deed may be used as evidence of that contract as between the contracting parties,* but I cannot take that decision to be authority for the proposition that in a case against third parties under section 27 (b) an unregistered deed can be used in evidence, for it is clear that the existence of the previous contract is of vital importance in the case. The contract itself is a transaction affecting property, and I hold that an unregistered sale-deed cannot be used in evidence of a contract which in itself affects property.

(1) 8 Ind. Cas. 794; 12 C. L. J. 464.

LADU RAM v. MAHABIR PRASAD.

The appeal is, therefore, decreed and the suit remanded for enquiry upon two issues by the lower Appellate Court upon the evidence recorded by the Court of first instance. The first of these issues is—was there a valid contract between the plaintiff and defendant No. 1 prior to the registered conveyance to the defendant No. 2? and was the defendant No. 2 aware of this prior contract? If either or both of these issues are decided in favour of the defendant the suit will be dismissed. If both issues are decided in favour of the plaintiff his suit will be decreed.

In the decision of these issues the lower Appellate Court will take heed that the unregistered deed is not to be used in evidence. If it appears that it is necessary to take further evidence on the question of the defendant's knowledge of the previous contract, the lower Appellate Court is directed to remand the suit for the taking of such evidence.

Costs to follow the result.

Appeal decreed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 105 OF 1916.

November 20, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Walsh and

Mr. Justice Stuart.

LADU RAM AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

MAHABIR PRASAD—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), ss. 43 (2), 46 (2)—“Person aggrieved,” meaning of—Appeal—Offence, nature of.

A creditor brought to the notice of the Court allegations against an insolvent said to constitute an offence under section 43, sub-section (2), of the Provincial Insolvency Act. The Court decided that there was no case. On the creditor's appeal:

Held, that the creditor was not an “aggrieved person” within the meaning of the words as used in section 46 (2) of the Act and was not, therefore, entitled to appeal.

Iyappa Nainar v. Manikka Asari, 27 Ind. Cas. 241, followed.

The offences dealt with under section 43, sub-section (2), of the Provincial Insolvency Act are in the nature of disciplinary offences, that is to say, offences committed by the insolvent during the insolvency in the nature of breaches of duty to the Court and not offences against the general criminal law.

First appeal from an order of the District Judge, Ghazipur, dated the 19th April 1916.

Mr. K. N. Laghate, for the Appellants.

Mr. Haribans Sahai, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In our opinion this preliminary objection must prevail. The respondent has been adjudicated an insolvent. No Receiver has been appointed. The rights of the Receiver must, therefore, under section 23 be exercised by the Court. The present appellant by an application of the 22nd of November 1915, brought to the notice of the Court allegations said to constitute an offence under section 43, sub-section (2). It is to be observed that the offences dealt with under that section are in the nature of disciplinary offences, that is to say offences committed by the insolvent during the insolvency in the nature of breaches of duty to the Court and not offences against the general criminal law. The Insolvency Court on the 19th of April 1916, decided that there was no case. The present appellant claims to have a right of appeal as being a person described by section 46, sub-section (2), as “a person aggrieved by an order made by the District Court under section 43, sub-section (2).” He can only be aggrieved as a member of the public is aggrieved by a decision in a case of which he does not approve. He is not “an aggrieved person” in the sense in which the words are used by the section. We, therefore, think he has no right of appeal. We agree with the head-note in the case of Iyappa Nainar v. Manikka Asari (1) decided by the Madras High Court. We are not, however, prepared to go the length of the reasons given in the judgment. The question whether a right of appeal exists at all for example by a Receiver if there happens to be one, does not arise in this case. We, therefore, leave that question open to be decided when it arises. We dismiss the appeal with costs including fees on the higher scale.

(1) 27 Ind. Cas. 241.

GANGA PRASAD DUTT v. HEMANGINI DEBI.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE ORDER No. 243
OF 1915.

January 9, 1917.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher and
Mr. Justice Richardson.

GANGA PRASAD DUTT—DECREE-HOLDER
—APPELLANT
versus

Rani HEMANGINI DEBI, EXECUTRIX TO
THE ESTATE OF LATE Raja JOGENDRA
NATH ROY BAHADUR AND OTHERS—

JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XX, r. 12—Mesne profits, ascertainment of, application for —Decree directing ascertainment in execution, legality of—Dismissal for default, effect of—Subsequent application barred—Decree for possession and mesne profits, form of.

Under the terms of Order XX, rule 12, Civil Procedure Code, mesne profits are assessed by an enquiry in the suit itself and not in execution, and the mesne profits so assessed form part of the money recoverable under the decree. [p. 998, col. 1.]

Puran Chand v. Roy Radha Kishen, 19 C. 132; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 534; Upendra Chandra Singh v. Sakhi Chand, 15 Ind. Cas. 709; 16 C. L. J. 3, followed.

Ram Kishore Ghose v. Gopi Kant Shaha, 23 C. 242, Upendra Chandra v. Sakhi Chand, 7 C. L. J. 301; 12 C. W. N. 3, not followed.

A Court, therefore, acts in excess of its powers under the new Civil Procedure Code of 1908, if it passes a decree directing that mesne profits should be ascertained in execution. [p. 998, col. 1.]

The dismissal for default of an application for ascertainment of mesne profits bars subsequent applications even though the decree in terms directed its ascertainment in execution. [p. 997, col. 2.]

Per Richardson, J.—The proper way or ways of drawing up a decree for mesne profits are indicated in Mulla's Edition of the Civil Procedure Code in the notes to rule 12, Order XX. [p. 998, col. 1.]

Appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge, Pabna, dated the 31st May 1913.

Babu Purna Chandra Roy, for the Appellant.

Babu Preo Sanker Majumdar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

FLETCHER, J.—This is an appeal preferred by the decree-holder against an order of the learned Officiating Subordinate Judge of Pabna, dated the 31st May 1913. The appellant, the decree-holder, brought a suit for recovery of possession of certain land and also for mesne profits. The decree was made as long ago as 1909. The first, what is called in this country the execution case, was in 1909 in which possession was given of the land. Then there was another execution case to realise the costs of the suit. Then came a series of applications to the Court for assessment and realisation of mesne profits, the last of which is the present application presented to the Court on the 25th March 1913. On this application coming on before the learned Officiating Subordinate Judge, he held that the application was not one made in execution of the decree but an application in the suit itself and that, the former applications having been dismissed for default of the decree-holder, the decree-holder had precluded himself from applying to the Court for assessment and realisation of the mesne profits. In the present appeal, various cases have been cited. On the one hand we have got the Full Bench decision in the case of Puran Chand v. Roy Radha Kishen (1) which seems to me to be obviously against the appellant. On the same side we have got the decision in the case of Upendra Chandra Singh v. Sakhi Chand (2) that is also clearly against the view put forward by the appellant. On the other side, we have got the decision in the case of Ram Kishore Ghose v. Gopi Kant Shaha (3) which is opposed to the decision reported as Upendra Chandra Singh v. Sakhi Chand (2). That decision in Ram Kishore Ghose v. Gopi Kant Shaha (3), was followed in a case in Upendra Chandra v. Sakhi Chand (4). But the learned Judge who presided over the Court in that case was the same Judge who presided over the Court that decided the case reported as Ram Kishore Ghose v. Gopi Kant Shaha (3). The case in Ram Kishore

(1) 19 C. 132; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 534.

(2) 15 Ind. Cas. 709; 16 C. L. J. 3.

(3) 23 C. 242.

(4) 7 C. L. J. 301; 12 C. W. N. 3.

HARI PRASAD MISSEK V. KODO MARYA.

Ghose v. Gopi Kant Shaha (3) has received judicial notice on several occasions and, so far as I can see from the reports, it never received such notice with approval except in the case reported as Upendra Chandra v. Fakhi Chand (4). The case does not end there. The present Code is materially different from the old Code. Under the present Code, it cannot be suggested that mesne profits are assessed in what is called the execution department. Under the terms of Order XX, rule 12, it is quite clear that mesne profits are assessed by an enquiry in the suit itself and the mesne profits so assessed form portion of the money recoverable under the decree. Whatever might be argued under the former Code, it seems to me, under the terms of the present Code, that there are no grounds for suggesting that mesne profits are assessed in what is called the execution department.

The last argument that was placed before us by the learned Vakil for the appellant was that the decree in this case stated that mesne profits would be ascertained in execution. It was in excess of the powers of the Court to suggest that mesne profits would be ascertained in any manner other than that prescribed by the law. The method in which mesne profits are ascertained under the present Code of the Civil Procedure is not by an enquiry in execution but by an application in the suit itself. I am of opinion that the learned Judge in this case came to a correct conclusion. The present appeal, therefore, fails and must be dismissed with costs. We assess the hearing fee at seventy five rupees.

RICHARDSON, J.—I agree. The provisions of the present Code on the subject are clear, and the inaccurate language used in the decrees before us must be construed in a sense conformable with those provisions. It may be worthwhile to add that the proper way or ways of drawing up a decree for possession and mesne profits is indicated in Mulla's Edition of Civil Procedure Code in the notes to rule 12 of Order XX.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2864 OF 1914.

June 28, 1916.

Present:—Sir Edward Chamier, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Kingsford.

HARI PRASAD MISSEK AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

KODO MARYA AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1852), s. 6 (e)—Mesne profits, decree directing ascertainment of, whether can be transferred—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, r. 10.

Plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 obtained a decree (a) for possession of certain immoveable property, and (b) directing an enquiry as to mesne profits. They sold their right to recover mesne profits under the decree to plaintiffs Nos. 3 and 4. Subsequently all the four plaintiffs applied to the Court to ascertain the mesne profits. An objection was raised that the transfer of the right to recover mesne profits was invalid under section 6 (e) of the Transfer of Property Act:

Held, that the transfer was valid, the right of the original decree-holders being not a mere right to sue but a right to have the amount of mesne profits ascertained under the decree which had declared that they were entitled to mesne profits. [p. 999, col. 1.]

Held, further, that under the present Code of Civil Procedure proceedings taken to ascertain mesne profits are proceedings in the suit and not proceedings in execution, so that the assignees ought to have applied to the Court for permission to continue the suit under Order XXII, rule 10, of the Civil Procedure Code; but their omission to do so, under the circumstances of the case, could not be held fatal to their right to continue the suit. [p. 999, col. 1.]

Prasanna Kumar Panja v. Asutosh Roy, 20 Ind. Cas. 685; 18 C. W. N. 450, referred to.

Second appeal from an order of the District Judge, Bhagalpur, dated the 22nd August 1914, confirming that of the Munsif, Banka, dated the 9th March 1914.

Mr. Lal Mohan Ganguly, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Naresk Chandra Sinha and Baikuntha Nath Mitter, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

CHAMIER, C. J.—Respondents Nos. 1 and 2 obtained against the appellants a decree (a) for possession of certain immoveable property, and (b) directing an enquiry as to mesne profits. Having executed their decree for possession of the property they sold to respondents Nos. 3 and 4 their right to recover mesne profits under the decree which they had obtained. The two original decree-holders and their transferees then presented a petition to the Court of first instance praying that the amount of mesne profits due under the decree might be ascertained. In that petition it was stated that the original decree-holders had transferred their rights to respondents Nos. 3 and 4. Various defences were put forward and amongst them was a plea that the transfer of the right to recover mesne profits was contrary to law. That plea was overruled by the Court of first instance and also by the lower Appellate Court. The only question which we have to decide in this second appeal is whether the decree for mesne profits was capable of being transferred. It is contended that the right which the decree-holders had under their decree was a mere right to sue within the meaning of clause (e) of section 6 of the Transfer of Property Act. It seems to me that the right of the original decree-holders was not a mere right to sue but was a right to have the amount of mesne profits ascertained under the decree which had declared that they were entitled to mesne profits. The decree for possession and mesne profits was passed under the present Code of Civil Procedure and it is quite clear that under the present Code proceedings taken to ascertain mesne profits are proceedings in the suit and not proceedings in execution. The decree-holders transferred to respondents Nos. 3 and 4 their right to mesne profits. It seems to me that if the respondents Nos. 3 and 4 had followed the procedure prescribed, they would have made an application to the Court under Order XXII, rule 10, praying for permission to continue the suit, as assignees of the original plaintiffs decree-holders. No such application was made but an application was made by all four persons as above explained. The first Court made an order in favour of respondents Nos. 3 and 4 and must, I think, be taken to have allowed them to continue the suit as assignees of the original decree-holders. As a matter of fact no objection has been taken before us on the ground that the procedure prescribed by Order XXII, rule 10, was not followed. The omission to make a formal application under rule 10 cannot be held to be fatal to the right of respondents Nos. 3 and 4 to carry on the proceedings. In my opinion what they acquired was something much more than a right to sue. It was a right to carry on the suit in which a preliminary decree had been made and to obtain the mesne profits. I would confirm the decision of the Courts below. The view which I take is supported by the decision of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Prasanna Kumar Panja v. Asutosh Roy (1).

NARAIN CHANDRA DALAL v. MANINDRA CHANDRA NANDI.

I would dismiss this appeal with costs.

KINGSFORD, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 20 Ind. Cas. 685; 18 C. W. N. 450.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 653
OF 1915.

December 13, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice D. Chatterjee and
Mr. Justice Walmsley.

NARAIN CHANDRA DALAL—DEFEND-ANT—APPELLANT

versus

Maharaja MANINDRA CHANDRA
NANDI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—

RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII B. C. of 1885), ss. 23, 76, (1), (2), cl. (f)—Gardening lease—Occupancy raiyat, right of, to erect dwelling-house on holding.

An occupancy raiyat does not exceed his right in building a pucca dwelling-house on an insignificant portion of his holding taken for the purpose of gardening. [p. 1000, col. 2.]

Such building need not be suitable to the holding, but it must be suitable under the circumstances of the raiyat who makes it. [p. 1000, col. 2.]

Hari Kishore Barna Sarma v. Baroda Kishore Acharja Chowdhry, 8 C.W.N. 754, 31 C. 1041, followed.

Appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, 24-Pergannas, dated the 22nd January 1915, reversing that of the Munsif, Basirhat, dated the 6th September 1913.

FACTS of the case appear from the judgment.

Barbus Banku Behary Mullick and Satyendra Nath Mitter, for the Appellants.—The defendants-appellants are the tenants of the plaintiff. They say they are permanent tenants at fixed rates; the plaintiff says they were merely occupancy raiyats.

NARAIN CHANDRA DALAL v. MANINDRA CHANDRA NANDI.

The jama in question comprises 40 bighas of garden land on $\frac{1}{4}$ cottah of which the tenant has erected a suitable dwelling-house for himself.

The plaintiffs have sued for removal of the building.

Two points arise in the case:—(1). The jama is held at a fixed rate since 1871; hence the presumption under section 50, Bengal Tenancy Act, is that it is a permanent jama. No doubt there was a small variation of the rent but a small unexplained variation of 16 gandas in a rental of Rs. 3-3-4 gandas does not matter at all. See Anundlall Chowdhry v. Mr. James Hills (1), Munsoor Ali v. Bunoo Singh (2) W. M. Grant v. Har Sahay Singh (3).

(2). Even if it was not a permanent tenancy, the tenant by building the pucca house did not diminish the value of the land; on the other hand it was an improvement, see section 23 read with section 76 (f) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Hari Kishore Barna Sarma v. Baroda Kishore Acharja Chowdhry (4), Hari Mohan Misser v. Surendra Narayan Singh (5).

An occupancy raiyat is entitled to build a suitable dwelling-house for himself and his family on a portion of the holding. Merely because a pucca house has been erected will not entitle the landlord to object. A raiyat has the right to make a pucca building, as his interest in the holding is not precarious and temporary.

Babu Bhudeb Chandra Roy, for the Respondents.—The learned District Judge has found that the holding has not been held at a uniform rate of rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement; I submit this is a finding of fact and cannot be interfered with in second appeal.

I submit that on the second point the tenant having erected a pucca structure he has changed the nature of the tenancy from an agricultural to a residential one. Cases go to show that the tenant is permitted to erect only houses of a temporary nature. Besides in this case the tenants were asked not to build when the construction was in progress.

The appellants were not called upon to reply.

JUDGMENT.—Two points have been argued in this case first, that the Judge was wrong in holding that the presumption of fixity under section 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act has been rebutted by the fact that the rent was increased from Rs. 3-3-0 odd to Rs. 3-4-0 odd and secondly, that he was wrong in holding that the defendant in this case had exceeded his rights under the law in building a suitable house for himself on a holding whatever its nature was.

With regard to the first point, we do not think it necessary to go into the matter in this case, as it seems to us that the finding of the learned Judge that there has been a variation at the time of the dakhil kharij, seems to be a finding of fact.

With regard to the second point, we think that the learned Judge is clearly wrong. Upon the learned Judge's own finding the defendant is an occupancy raiyat; and if he is an occupancy raiyat, then under section 23 of the Bengal Tenancy Act he may use the land in any manner which does not materially impair the value of the land or render it unfit for the purposes of the tenancy. Now, the purpose of the tenancy was gardening. It is not found that the building of the house in question upon 1 cottah and a quarter out of 40 cottahs of land is in any way impairing the value of the land or rendering it unfit for the purposes of the tenancy, that is gardening.

In the next place, under section 76, clause (f), the raiyat is entitled to erect a suitable dwelling-house for himself and his family together with all necessary out offices. It has been held in the case of Hari Kishore Barna Sarma v. Baroda Kishore Acharja Chowdhry (4) that the building need not be suitable to the holding; it must be suitable under the circumstances of the raiyat who makes the building. In the present case the building is not held to be unsuitable to the person who built it.

(1) 4 W. R., Act X Rulings, 33.

(2) 7 W. R. 282.

(3) 20 Ind. Cas. 53; 18 C. L. J. 76.

(4) 8 C. W. N. 754; 31 C. 1014.

(5) 34 C. 718; 2 M. L. T. 399; 11 C. W. N. 794; 6 C. L. J. 19; 9 Bom. L. R. 750; 17 M. L. J. 361 (P. C.).

BHAIRON PRASAD v. SOMVARPURI.

In this connection we may refer to the remarks of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Hari Mohan Misser v. Surendra Narayan Singh (5). That was a case of land taken for agricultural purposes on which an indigo factory consisting of pucca houses was built. The High Court held that the raiyat had exceeded his rights in building the factory and that this was not within the purposes of the tenancy. The learned Judges said: "Where, as in this case, land has been let out for agricultural purposes generally, the erection of an indigo factory on a part of such land must render it unfit for the purpose of the tenancy, because, the purpose of the tenancy being the cultivation of crops, that is agricultural purposes, the portion of the land built upon will evidently be unfit for such purposes." With regard to this, their Lordships of the Privy Council observed "the proposition of law is laid down broadly, without reference to the circumstances of individual cases, without regard to the size of the holding, or of the area withdrawn from actual cultivation or to the effect of such withdrawal upon the fitness of the holding, taken as a whole, for profitable cultivation."

In the present case the learned Judge in the Court below has not taken all these matters into consideration and we think that he is clearly wrong. The house is built for dwelling purposes, upon his finding by an occupancy raiyat; but he does not find that it has impaired in any way the value of the property or that the house is unsuitable to the circumstances of the raiyat. Under the circumstances, he was not justified in ordering its demolition.

There is another matter which must be adverted to in this connection. The house had been almost finished when the zamindar took notice of it. The house must have cost a good deal to the party who built it. This circumstance ought to have been taken into account before ordering a demolition. We think that the tenant in this case has not exceeded his right in building a pucca house on a very insignificant portion of his tenancy.

We accordingly allow the appeal, set aside the judgment of the lower Appellate Court and restore that of the first Court with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 55 OF 1916.

January 5, 1917.

Present:—Sir Henry Richards, Kt., Chief Justice, and Justice Sir P. C. Banerji, Kt.

BHAIRON PRASAD AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Mahant SOMVARPURI—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 41—U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 36—Ex-proprietary tenant—Agreement to enhance rent before 10 years of creation of tenancy, validity of.

A registered agreement executed by a tenant of an ex-proprietary holding, before the expiration of the period of 10 years from the creation of the ex-proprietary tenancy, to pay enhanced rent is a valid agreement and effect can be given to it. [p. 1003, col. 1.]

Appeal, under section 10 of the Letters Patent, against the decree of Mr. Justice Walsh, reported as 34 Ind. Cas. 441, dated the 7th April 1916, confirming that of the District Judge, Allahabad, dated the 29th August 1914, who upheld the decree of the Assistant Collector, first class, Allahabad, dated the 25th April 1914.

FACTS.—The appellants were the ex-proprietary tenants of the land in dispute. Under section 36 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901) the rent of the land was fixed at Rs. 50 on the 26th April 1908. On the 10th of July 1908 the appellants executed a registered instrument whereby they agreed to enhance the rent from Rs. 50 to Rs. 72-6-0. The respondents brought a suit for recovery of rent at the above rate out of which this appeal has arisen.

The suit was contested on the ground that the agreement was not binding as it was against the provisions of section 36 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act and section 41 of the Agra Tenancy Act.

Mr. Kanhiya Lal, for the Appellants.—Section 36 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act provides that the rent fixed under that section shall not be liable to enhancement for a period of ten years except by order of a Settlement Officer under section 87 of this Act and save as provided by section 41 of the Agra Tenancy Act 1901 or section 35 B of the Oudh Rent Act 1886.

Section 41 of the Agra Tenancy Act 1901, clause 3, provides that the term for which the rent of an ex-proprietary tenant is fixed by decree or order of a Revenue Court shall not be less than ten years.

BHAIRON PRASAD v. SOMVARPURI.

Sections 35A and 35B of the Oudh Rent Act, 1886 show that there could be no enhancement within ten years except under extraordinary circumstances. Section 41 of the Agra Tenancy Act comprises the provisions of both the sections 35A and 35B of the Oudh Rent Act. Hence section 36 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act read in the light of section 41 of the Tenancy Act clearly shows that the intention of the Legislature was that when once rent has been fixed under section 36 Act III of 1901 it cannot be enhanced within ten years except under extraordinary circumstances mentioned in sub-clauses (c) to (g) of clause 1 of section 41, Act II of 1901, or those mentioned in section 35B of the Oudh Rent Act, 1886.

Mr. S. D. Sinha, for the Respondents.—Section 36, Act III of 1901, says: "save as provided by section 41 of North Western Provinces Tenancy Act." This clearly shows, that rent fixed under that section could be enhanced within ten years under section 41 of the Tenancy Act. One of the means by which it could be done was by a registered instrument. The agreement is binding inasmuch as the provisions of section 41, Tenancy Act have been complied with. The interpretation put by the appellant will make the provisions of section 36, U. P. Land Revenue Act, absolutely useless.

Mr. Kanhiya Lal was heard in reply.

JUDGMENT.—The facts connected with this appeal may be very shortly stated. The defendants having sold their proprietary rights became ex-proprietary tenants of the sir lands under the provisions of section 10 of the Tenancy Act. An application was made to the Collector to fix the rent on the ex-proprietary holding under the provisions of section 36 of the Land Revenue Act. The rent was fixed at the sum of Rs. 50. Subsequently, by a registered agreement between the plaintiffs and the defendants, the rent was enhanced to the sum of Rs. 72-6-0. The plaintiff brought a suit in the Revenue Court to recover this rent. The defendants, amongst other pleas, raised the defence that no rent save the rent fixed by the Collector could be recovered until after the expiration of 10 years from the time of the creation of the ex-proprietary tenancy. The Revenue Court held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the enhanced rent. An appeal was taken to the District Judge who confirmed the decree of the Court of first instance. The learned District Judge found that the agreement was entered into because the plaintiff was about to take steps to get rid of the order of the Collector by an application in revision or by an application for enhancement. We merely mention these matters to show that there was no fraud on the part of the plaintiff. A second appeal was preferred to this Court and the learned Judge, who heard the appeal, affirmed the decree of the Courts below. The present appeal is under the letters patent against the decree of the learned Judge of this Court.

The question argued before the District Judge was the short question whether or not a tenant of an ex-proprietary holding could enter into a valid agreement to pay enhanced rent, it being admitted that the agreement was carried out by means of a registered instrument but before the expiration of the period of 10 years from the creation of the ex-proprietary tenancy. We wish particularly to point out that there was no suggestion that the enhanced rent was greater than the favourable beneficial rent at which ex-proprietary tenants are entitled to hold under the provisions of section 10 of the Tenancy Act. At the hearing before the learned Judge of this Court the discussion seems to have been somewhat wider than in the Court of the District Judge and there are certain remarks of the learned Judge of this Court as to the power of ex-proprietary tenants to contract themselves out of the provision of the Tenancy Act. We do not think that these questions arise in the present case and we do not wish to be taken as expressing our concurrence with some of the remarks which fell from the learned Judge of this Court on that subject. The only question which we think properly arises in the present case is the question whether the registered agreement executed by the defendants to pay Rs. 72-6-0 as rent for the holding in lieu of Rs. 50 fixed by the Collector is or is not a valid agreement and one to which effect can be given. Section 36 of the Land Revenue Act provides that "when a right of occupancy has been created under the provisions of section 10 of the North Western Provinces Tenancy Act of 1901...in favour of an ex-proprietary tenant, the Collector shall ...pass an order specifying the land in which such occupancy right has been created, and fixing the rent payable therefor." Sub-section (2) is as follows: "The rent, so fixed shall be payable from the date the ex-proprietary tenancy arose subject to the law of limitation as to arrears of rent, and save as provided by section 41 of the North Western Provinces Tenancy Act of 1901 or section 35B of the Oudh Rent Act of 1886 shall not be liable to enhancement or abatement for a period of 10 years, except by order of a Settlement Officer under section 87 of this Act." The clause that we have just quoted seems by necessary implication to mean that the rent fixed by the Collector can be enhanced or abated in the manner provided by section 41 of the Tenancy Act notwithstanding that the period of 10 years has not elapsed. Section 41 of the Tenancy Act is as follows: "The rent of an ex-proprietary or occupancy tenant shall be liable to enhancement or abatement only (a) by registered agreement, or (b) by decree or order of a Revenue Court." The section goes on to provide that "when so enhanced or abated, the rent shall not be again liable to enhancement or abatement until or unless as provided in the following clauses of the Act." It will be seen that section 41, so far as we have quoted it, applies not to the "fixing" of a rent for the first time but to the "enhancement" or "abatement" of a rent which has already been "fixed". We now come to the part of the section which creates the difficulty. Sub-section 3 is as follows:—"The term for which the rent of an ex-proprietary or occupancy tenant is fixed by decree or order of a Revenue Court shall not be less than 10 years, but no term in excess of 10 years shall be so fixed except upon agreement by the parties." It is at once to be remarked that subsection 3 does not seem to properly belong to section 41. It is one more example of unskilful drafting in this Act. The earlier part of the section as we have already remarked deals with the enhancement or abatement of the rent. Sub-section 3 refers to the fixing of the rent by a decree or order of the Revenue Court and not (expressly at least) to the enhancement of it. The contention on behalf of the appellant is that the only meaning which can be given to sub-section 3 is that the rent fixed by the Collector must be the rent for the period of 10 years at least, from the time when the ex-proprietary tenancy was created and that no enhancement or abatement can be made during that period of 10 years. It is contended that unless this meaning be attributed to the sub-section the words are quite superfluous. Reference is made to sections 35 (a) and 35 (b) of the Oudh Rent Act as showing what the intention of the Legislature was. It is pointed out that there was no special reason why in this respect the Legislature should have intended that there should be any difference in the law in Agra and the law in Oudh and it is said that the provision in the Oudh Rent Act shows clearly that the rent in Oudh could not be abated or enhanced during the period of 10 years. It is no doubt difficult to reconcile the provisions of sub-section 3 of section 41 of the Agra Tenancy Act, with the earlier part of the section. But the mere fact that we are unable to reconcile (except by speculation) the provisions of the two sub-sections is not itself sufficient reason why we should hold that the registered agreement executed by the defendants in the manner provided by the first sub-section of section 41 and also in accordance with section 36, sub-section 2, of the Land Revenue Act is invalid. We think that the Court should interpret the section in favour of the legality of the registered agreement rather than in favour of its illegality. We think that the view taken by the learned District Judge was correct and that the learned Judge of this Court properly upheld his decree. We accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

BHAIROD PRASAD v. SOMVARPURI.

Appeal dismissed.

KARTIC REWANI v. THE CENTRAL KARKEND COAL CO., LTD.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL NO. 18 OF 1916.

June 29, 1916.

Present:—Sir Edward Chamier, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Sharfuddin.KARTIC REWANI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

THE CENTRAL KARKEND COAL

CO., LTD.—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Trespasser—Ejectment, suit for, by tenant against trespasser—Landlord supporting trespasser, effect of.

A tenant is entitled to eject a trespasser from property in possession of the former, and the mere fact that the latter is supported in his defence by the landlord does not give him any right to retain the property as against the tenant. [p. 1005, col. 1.]

Letters Patent Appeal under section 10 of the Letters Patent.

Messrs. Saroshi Charan Mitter, Baikuntha Nath Mitter and Sailendra Nath Palit, for the Appellant.

Mr. Pugh (with him Messrs. Karunamoy Roy and Bankim Chandra Mukherji), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

CHAMIER, C. J.—This is an appeal against a judgment of a learned Judge of this Court setting aside a decree passed by the Additional Subordinate Judge of Manbhum which affirmed a decree of the Munsif of Dhanbaid. The appellant before us was the plaintiff in the suit. He claimed a decree for khas possession of a tank. He alleged that the tank had been excavated by his paternal grandfather, and had been held by his grandfather, his father and himself in niskar right, that is, in some kind of rent free tenure. He alleged that his grandfather, his father and he himself in succession had held possession, that while his father was in possession of the tank the defendant Company took water and earth from it and paid his father therefor, that in 1319 Fasli the defendant Company laid claim to the tank, that there was a case in the Criminal Court which was decided against the plaintiff, and hence the plaintiff was compelled to bring the present suit. The defendant Company denied that the plaintiff or his father or grandfather had ever been in possession of the tank. They denied that the tank had been excavated by the plaintiff's grandfather and they pleaded that in 1906 they took possession of the tank upon the verbal permission of the Manager of the Raja of Jharia who is said to be the owner of the land, and that after taking possession they had improved the tank in various ways by deepening it and raising banks round it. The Munsif found that the plaintiff had failed to prove his niskar right in the tank but that all his other allegations had been established. In particular, he found that the plaintiff had proved that the tank had been excavated by his grandfather, that it was the property of the plaintiff at the date of suit, and that it had been in his possession all along. The Munsif found also that the defendant Company had failed to prove that they had obtained permission from the Raja's Manager to take possession of the tank. On appeal the Additional Subordinate Judge confirmed the findings of the Munsif. He said that it was proved that the tank had been excavated by the grandfather of the plaintiff more than 30 years before the suit, and that the plaintiff, his father and grandfather had all along been in possession. He definitely rejected the evidence adduced by the Company to prove that the Raja had given permission to the Company to take possession, and accordingly he confirmed the Munsif's decree in favour of the plaintiff. On second appeal to this Court the learned Judge before whom the case came observed that on the findings of the Courts below the plaintiff was entitled to succeed if at all on the strength of long continued possession, that a person suing merely on the strength of long continued possession was no doubt entitled to a decree for possession against a trespasser by whom he had been ousted, but that the defendant Company was not in the position of a trespasser inasmuch as the company was being "supported in the suit" by the Raja who was the landlord, and that the Company "must be considered a permissive occupant and its possession co-ordinate to that of the plaintiff." Before dealing with the ground upon which the learned Judge of this Court dismissed the plaintiff's suit I propose to deal with other contentions which have been advanced by learned Counsel for the Company. In the first place it was urged that in a suit for ejectment the plaintiff must recover secundum allegata et probata. Learned Counsel contended that inasmuch as the plaintiff

KARTIC REWANI v. THE CENTRAL KARKEND COAL CO., LTD.

iff had failed to prove that he and his ancestors held the land in niskar right the suit should have been dismissed, that the plaintiff should not have been permitted to succeed on the strength of possession, however long continued, that the defendant Company had had no notice of such a case and had had no opportunity of meeting it. There appears to me to be no force in this contention. Every single allegation of the plaintiff has been proved except the allegation that he held the tank in niskar right. The Court of first instance and the Subordinate Judge held that that allegation had not been proved because the plaintiff had not produced any document in support of it. Both Courts, however, as I read their judgments, went further and held that the plaintiff had proved that he was the owner of the tank. The plaint contains repeated allegations that the plaintiff and his ancestors had been in possession all along. These allegations were definitely denied by the defendant Company who alleged that the possession had all along been with the Raja. Evidence on the question of possession was produced on both sides and there is no ground whatever for the suggestion that the defendant Company was taken by surprise in having to meet the allegations regarding possession. Next, it was contended that such possession as has been proved by the plaintiff was not possession of the kind which would entitle him to succeed even as against a trespasser. It was said that his possession was either secret or permissive or possibly that of a mere squatter, that at best he was a kind of tenant-at-will liable to be ejected by the Raja at any time and that, inasmuch as it had been found that the Raja was supporting the defendant Company, the latter was in a better position than the plaintiff, therefore the plaintiff whether a tenant or a person who had encroached upon his landlord's land was not entitled to succeed against the defendant Company which was claiming under the Raja. The answer to all this is that the findings of the Court below shew very clearly that the plaintiff's and plaintiff's ancestor's possession was neither secret nor permissive nor that of a mere squatter. It was open and long continued to the knowledge of the defendant Company, which actually dealt with the plaintiff's father as the person in possession and the person entitled to dispose of the water. Nor is the defendant Company in the position of a person claiming under the landlord. Its attempt to prove that it obtained the permission of the landlord to take possession of the property has failed. It may be, as contended by Counsel, that it is entitled to prove facts which occurred after the institution of the suit at any time up to the filing of the written statement. But it has neither pleaded nor proved any claim under the Raja other than that set out in paragraph 12 of the written statement which has been negatived by the findings of the Courts below. Next it was said that the suit is barred by the provisions of section 139 (5) of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, which lays down that all applications to recover occupancy or possession of any land from which a tenant has been unlawfully ejected by the landlord or any person claiming under or through the landlord shall be instituted in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner and not in any other Court. This point was not taken either in the first Court, or in the Court of First Appeal, nor was it taken in the memorandum of appeal to this Court. The defendant Company served a notice on the plaintiff that it intended to raise the point at the hearing before the learned Judge who decided this case in this Court, but apparently did not put it forward. In my opinion there is no force in it. There is nothing to show that the plaintiff in this case is a tenant within the meaning of the Act. He has certainly not been ejected by his landlord and on the findings it is impossible to hold that the defendant Company claims under or through the landlord. Next it was contended that the defendant Company is entitled to retain possession of this land under the lease of the colliery which was granted by the Raja. The defendant Company is by reason of various intermediate assignments in the position of a lessee of the colliery. It is said that the lease contains a clause authorising the Company to take parti land required for the service of the Company at the rate of 4 annas a bigha. It was neither pleaded nor proved that the tank now in question was required for the service of the Company, and on the findings it is impossible to hold that the tank is parti land within the meaning of the lease. And this brings me to the last point which has been urged by the learned Counsel for the Company, namely, that the Company is entitled to resist this suit because it is being "supported" by the Raja. This expression is used by the Court of First Appeal and it was relied upon by the learned Judge of this Court. I do not know what the Court of First Appeal meant by saying that the defendant Company was being "supported" by the Raja. As far as I can ascertain it meant no more than that the Company was being assisted in its defence by the Raja. It appears to me that such support by the Raja gives the defendant Company no right whatever to retain the land against the plaintiff and, when the learned Judge of this Court held that the support of the Raja placed the Company in as good a position as that of the plaintiff, I think he must have overlooked the important finding by the lower Appellate Court that the Company had failed to prove the permission of the Raja pleaded by them. The defendant company was in my opinion in the position of a trespasser at the date of this suit and the fact that the Raja "supported" the defence does not put the Company in any better position. For these reasons I am of opinion that this suit should not have been dismissed by this Court. I would allow this appeal and set aside the judgment of the learned Judge of this Court and dismiss the appeal to this Court with costs of both hearings. The result is that the suit will be decreed with costs throughout.

LAKHI U. AMAR SINGH.

SHARFUDDIN, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed.

COURT OF THE FINANCIAL COMMISSIONER, PUNJAB.

REVENUE REVISION PETITION No. 64
OF 1915-16.

August 5, 1916.

Present:—Mr. P. J. Fagan, F. C.
LAKHI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—PETITIONERS
versusAMAR SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), s. 5 (1) (c)
—Settlement "along with the founder" and "by the founder," distinction between—Presumption.

Settlement along with the founder in section 5 (1) (c) of the Punjab Tenancy Act means settlement contemporaneously, or in association with the original founder during the initial stages of foundation and development of the village. [p. 1007, col. 2.]

Atar Singh v. Diwan Singh, 94 P. R. 1880, referred to.

Settlement by the founder might take place after those stages had passed. There is a fair presumption, though it is rebuttable by adequate proof, that where a cultivator is shown to have commenced to reside in and to cultivate shamilat land in a village during the lifetime of a founder thereof, such founder being at the time lambardar or otherwise directly concerned with the management of the shamilat, the cultivator in question was settled in the village "by the founder thereof as a cultivator therein," and so far fulfils the requirements of section 5 (1) (c). [p. 1007, col. 2.]

Revision from the decree of the Commissioner, Ambala, dated the 9th November 1915.

Mr. Broadway, for the Petitioners.

Mr. Duni Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—1. I will deal with the three cases Nos. 64, 65 and 66 in one order as the facts with which the revision is concerned are the same in all of them. They are fully set out and discussed in the orders of the learned Commissioner, of the Collector and of the original Court.

2. The learned Commissioner came to the conclusion that Hazari was not settled as a cultivator in the village of Bobwa, that is to say, as I understand, that he did not cultivate land there but was engaged solely in carrying out whatever at that period may have been the duties of a patwari. There is, of course, no direct proof that he did cultivate land. From an inspection of the Settlement Record of 1840 (the first Regular Settlement) it appears that the cultivating body of the village consisted of proprietors (maliks), qadim kisans and toladars. The last two terms are explained at pages

LAKHI V. AMAR SINGH.

218, 229* and 230 of the Hissar District Gazetteer from which it will be seen that the kadim kisan was a proprietor of his holding without any share in the shamilat. The Settlement Record of 1840 contains no list nor register of cultivators, except one of kadim qisans and the name of Hazari does not appear on this. He and his appointment as patwari are expressly mentioned in the wajib-ul-arz of 1840, but nothing is said as to his having been given land to cultivate, whereas had he been a cultivator it seems very unlikely that this fact would not have been alluded to. It is true that the word be-dakhl is used with reference to him but this is a somewhat slender foundation on which to rest the conclusion that he was a cultivator in addition to being a patwari. A good deal has been made of the fact that Hazari's recorded emoluments only amounted to Rs. 2 per mensem, but it must be remembered that he was a banya by caste and as was customary with the patwaris of those days it is probable that he made money by trade and money-lending. It is true that in 1857 his son Nathu appears from the Settlement Record of 1863 to have been cultivating some 200 bighas or 150 acres as a tenant but this does no more than render it possible that Hazari may have cultivated some or all of that area in his life-time and certainly does not amount to proof that he did so. On the whole I agree with the Commissioner as regards this part of the case, being of opinion that there is not sufficient material for a definite affirmative finding that Hazari was a cultivator in the village.

3. There remains the question whether Nathu in virtue of his having cultivated land in the village from 1857 or thereabouts, can be regarded as having been settled in the village by the founder thereof as a cultivator therein. Regarding this the facts are that, as appears from the Settlement Records of 1840 and 1863 A. D., Basti, son of Piru, one of those who joined in the original foundation of the village and who was, therefore, one of the joint founders, was alive as late as 1863. He was not a lambardar. Basti who was one of the three persons who held that office was a son of Sham Das, one of the founders. The land which Nathu, son of Hazari, cultivated in 1863 was village shamilat which according to an entry in the wajib-ul-arz of 1863 was managed by the lambardars in consultation with certain other proprietors who are mentioned by name but do not include Basti, son of Piru. It would appear, therefore, that Basti, son of Piru had nothing to do with settling cultivators on the shamilat in 1863 and we may assume that the same was the case in 1857.

4. There are no published rulings as to the facts or circumstances which would for the purposes of section 5 (1) (c) of the Tenancy Act constitute in the case of a tenant a settlement of him in a village by the founder thereof as a cultivator therein. Settlement along with the founder, the other alternative allowed by the above clause, doubtless means settlement contemporaneously or in association with the original founder during the initial stages of the foundation and development of the village—see Atar Singh v. Diwan Singh (1). Settlement by the founder, on the other hand, might take place after those stages had been passed. As to this it is, I think, a fair presumption, rebuttable of course by adequate proof of facts inconsistent with or contradicting it, that where a cultivator is shown to have commenced to reside in and to cultivate shamilat land in a village during the lifetime of a founder thereof, such founder being at the time a lambardar or otherwise directly concerned with the management of the shamilat, the cultivator in question was settled in the village "by the founder thereof as a cultivator therein" and so far fulfils the requirements of section 5 (1) (c).

In the present case it appears that when Nathu, son of Hazari, began to cultivate shamilat land, Basti, son of Piru, the then sole surviving founder, was not a lambardar nor did he share in the management of the shamilat. Under these circumstances the presumption which has been defined above is not applicable or rather would, if applied, be sufficiently rebutted. For these reasons I agree with the learned Commissioner's conclusion that it is not satisfactorily established that Nathu was settled in the village of Bobwa by one of the founders. The plaintiffs have, therefore, no claim to occupancy rights under section 5 (1) (c). The petitions for revision are dismissed. Applicants will pay respondent's costs in this Court.

KALIKA DUTT MANDAR v. TULSI MANDAR.

Revision rejected.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2055 OF 1915.

July 11, 1916.

Present:—Mr. Justice Roe and Mr. Justice Jwala Prasad.

KALIKA DUTT MANDAR—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT

versus

TULSI MANDAR—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 27 (b), interpretation of—Appeal—Evidence, additional, when may be admitted—Court, discretion of.

Rule 27 (b) of Order XLI of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, does not mean that in order to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce judgment in favour of a particular party additional evidence should be admitted in appeal; it means only that where it is impossible to pronounce judgment at all on the evidence, the Court may call for a document.

Second appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Bhagalpur, dated the 25th May 1915, confirming that of the Munsif, Madhupura, dated the 9th January 1915.

Mr. Rajendra Prasad, for the Appellant.

Mr. Krishna Sahay, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff in this suit sued upon a bond in which it was set forth that the consideration upon which this bond was given was an existing consideration under a previous bond and account. The Court of first instance refused to accept the oral evidence given in support of this consideration and pointed out that it was impossible to give the plaintiff a decree without reliable accounts, the previous bond itself and a close inspection of these papers.

Upon appeal from the decree of the first Court dismissing the plaintiff's suit, the appellant offered to place before the District Judge the original bond whereby the original consideration might have been proved. The learned District Judge refused to accept the bond and dismissed the plaintiff's appeal. Against that decision an appeal is made to this Court. The short point, therefore, is, what document should an Appellate Court accept under Order XLI, rule 27? •Rule 27 (a) has nothing to do with the case before us, and the case comes under rule 27 (b), "If the Appellate Court requires any document to be produced...to enable it to pronounce judgment, or for any other substantial cause, the Appellate Court may allow such evidence...to be produced." This does not mean that in order to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce judgment in favour of a particular party additional evidence should be admitted in appeal; it means only that where it is impossible to pronounce judgment at all on the evidence the Court may call for a document. In this case the burden of proof was upon the plaintiff and in the absence of proof of the consideration the Court was in a position to pronounce judgment in favour of the defendant. The document was not required to enable the Court to pronounce judgment. The highest at which it can be put is that it might have been required in order to enable the Court to pronounce judgment in favour of the plaintiff which is an entirely different thing. The question remains whether sufficient cause was shown for admitting the document in the lower Appellate Court. From the record of the case as tried before the learned Munsif it is clear that the plaintiff was fully aware of the precise place, namely the record-room at Bhagalpur, in which this document might have been found. He took no steps to search for it and produce it in time for use during the adjudication of his claim, and the learned District Judge exercised, in our view, a very sound discretion in refusing to regard the pure laziness of the plaintiff in the lower Court as sufficient cause for giving him a peculiar license in the Appellate Court.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

GENERAL INDEX

VOLUME XXXVII, 1917.

— 1-0: —

ABANDONMENT, what constitutes.

Where a holding has been split up, a sale by the tenant of an entire plot that has been separated constitutes abandonment which entitles the landlord to re-enter. PAT RAM LOCHAN KOER v. JAGERNATH MISHRA. 1 P. L. J. 270 440

ABWASS—Rent, consolidated. several items, one of which is given as jama, tot. lled as.

Where, at the head of a kabuliyat, an amount of rent was written down as the consolidated rent or the total rent which the tenant undertook to pay for the land and in arriving at the total several items were taken into consideration, one of which was given as the jama rent:

Held, that the items, other than the one given as the jama, were not abwabs, as what was agreed to be paid by the tenant was the consolidated rent which included those items. C NAGENDRA LAL v. HANDOO MIA 965

ACCOUNTS, suit on—Proof—Evidence, value of balance—s—Suit on advances in cash and grain Limitation 300

ACCOUNT BOOKS, entries in, admissibility of, in evidence 877

ACTS—GENERAL.

- ACT 1850—XXI. See CASTE, DISABILITIES REMOVAL ACT
- 1850—XIV. See PENAL CODE.
- 1863—XX. See RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS ACT.
- 1864—IV. See DIVORCE ACT.
- 1871—I. See CATTLE TRESPASS ACT.
- 187—IX. See LIMITATION ACT.
- 1872—I. See EVIDENCE ACT.
- 1872—IX. See CONTRACT ACT.
- 1877—I. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT.
- 1877—XV. See LIMITATION ACT.
- 1879—XVIII. See LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT.
- 1881—V. See PROBATE AND ADMINISTRATION ACT.
- 1881—XXVI. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS ACT.
- 1882—II. See TRUSTS ACT.
- 1882—IV. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT.
- 1882—VI. See COMPANIES ACT.
- 1882—XIV. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
- 1882—XV. See PRESIDENCY SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT.
- 1884—IV. See EXPLOSIVES ACT.
- 1887—VII. See SUIES VALUATION ACT.
- 1887—IX. See PROVINCIAL SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT.
- 1890—VIII. See GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT.
- 1894—I. See LAND ACQUISITION ACT.
- 1897—X. See GENERAL CLAUSES ACT.

ACTS—GENERAL—concl'd.

- ACT 1898—V. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE.
- 1899—II. See STAMP ACT.
- 1899—IX. See ARBITRATION ACT.
- 1902—II. See CANTONMENT HOUSE ACCOMMODATION ACT.
- 1907—III. See PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT.
- 1908—V. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
- 1908—IX. See LIMITATION ACT.
- 1908—XVI. See REGISTRATION ACT.
- 1909—III. See PRESIDENCY TOWNS INSOLVENCY ACT.
- 1910—I. See PRESS ACT.
- 1912—IV. See LUNACY ACT.
- 1913—VII. See COMPANIES ACT.
- 1915—I. See EMERGENCY LEGISLATION CONTINUANCE ACT.

ACTS—(LOCAL)—BENGAL.

- ACT 1859—X. See BENGAL RENT ACT
- 1859—XI. See BENGAL LAND REVENUE SALES ACT
- 1879—IX. See COURT OF WARDS ACT.
- 1865—VIII. See BENGAL RENT RECOVERY ACT.
- 1869—VIII. See BENGAL LANDLORD AND TENANT PROCEDURE ACT.
- 1870—VI. See BENGAL VILLAGE CHAUKIDARI ACT.
- 1876—VIII. See BENGAL ESTATES PARTITION ACT.
- 1880—IX. See BENGAL CESS ACT.
- 1884—III. See BENGAL MUNICIPAL ACT.
- 1885—VIII. See BENGAL TENANCY ACT.
- 1897—V. See BENGAL ESTATES PARTITION ACT.
- 1898—III. See CALCUTTA MUNICIPAL ACT.
- 1906—IV. See SAMBALPUR CIVIL COURTS ACT.
- 1908—VI. See CHOTA NAGPUR TENANCY ACT.

ACTS—(LOCAL)—BOMBAY.

- ACT 1879—V. See BOMBAY LAND REVENUE CODE.
- 1879—XVII. See DEKKHAN AGRICULTURISTS' RELIEF ACT.
- 1887—IV. See BOMBAY PREVENTION OF GAMBLING ACT.
- 1890—I. See BOMBAY KHOTI SETTLEMENT ACT.
- 1910—IV. See BOMBAY DISTRICT POLICE ACT.
- 1905—I. See BOMBAY COURT OF WARDS ACT.

ACTS—(LOCAL)—BURMA.

- ACT 1893—XIII. See BURMA LAWS ACT.

ACTS (LOCAL)—CENTRAL PROVINCES.

- ACT 1881—XVIII. See C. P. LAND REVENUE ACT.

ACTS—(LOCAL)—MADRAS.

- ACT 1892—VII. See MADRAS CITY CIVIL COURTS ACT.
 — 1895—III. See MADRAS HEREDITARY VILLAGE OFFICES ACT.
 — 1903—I. See MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT.

ACTS—(LOCAL)—PUNJAB.

- ACT 1887—XVI. See PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.
 — 1900—XIII. See PUNJAB ALIENATION OF LAND ACT.
 — 1912—III. See PUNJAB TENANCY AMENDMENT ACT.
 — 1913—I. See PUNJAB PRE-EMPTION ACT.
 — 1914—III. See PUNJAB COURTS ACT.

ACTS—(LOCAL)—U. P.

- ACT 1876 XVIII. See OUDH LAWS ACT.
 — 1886—XXII. See OUDH RENT ACT.
 — 1901—II. See AGRA TENANCY ACT.
 — 1901—III. See U. P. LAND REVENUE ACT.
 — 1912—IV. See U. P. COURT OF WARDS ACT.

REGULATIONS.

- REG. 1819—VIII. See BENGAL REGULATION.
 — 1886—I. See ASSAM LAND AND REVENUE REGULATION.

ORDINANCES.

- ORD. 1914—III. See FOREIGNERS ORDINANCE.
 — 1914—V. See INGRESS INTO INDIA ORDINANCE.
 — 1914—VI. See COMMERCIAL INTERCOURSE WITH ENEMIES ORDINANCE.

STATUTES.

- 5 & 6 Geo. V, C. 61. See GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT.
 24 & 25 VICT., C. 67. See INDIAN COUNCILS ACT.
 24 & 25 VICT., C. 104. See HIGH COURTS ACT.

ADJOURNMENT—Discretion of Court—Process-fee to be filed within reasonable time.

The question of granting time is always one of discretion and that discretion cannot be properly exercised until the general conduct of the party applying for time throughout the case has been scrutinized.

When a date is fixed for a case, it is the business of the litigant to see that the processes for the attendance of witnesses are placed in the hands of the Court within reasonable time for securing their attendance upon the date fixed. If he chooses to file a process-fee only two days before the date fixed for hearing, any order passed by the Court for the issue of those processes must be understood to have been issued at the risk of the party in fault, and it is not for the Court to grant an adjournment when the case comes on for hearing.

PAT. AGABA DHU v GOREY LAT, 1 P. L. J. 173 200

ADVERSE POSSESSION—Hindu Law—Possession adverse to claimant, whether adverse to reversioners 33

—, nature and commencement of 107

— Pleadings—burden of proof.
 In a suit for declaration of title upon the allegation that the defendant had repudiated it, the onus is on the defendant both to plead and to prove adverse possession for the statutory period. A MUHAMMAD KAMIL v. HABIBULLAH 794 — Possession, non-adverse in inception, when becomes adverse—Landlord and tenant—Non-payment of rent after expiry of term, effect of—Kabuliyat, contents of, when admissible—Evidence.

ADVERSE POSSESSION—concl.

When possession is non-adverse in its inception, it is necessary to prove some overt act of adverse possession before adverse possession can be deemed to exist.

Mere non-payment of rent by the tenant after the expiry of the stipulated term will not make his possession adverse as from that date. The presumption is that the tenant continues to retain physical possession as he retained it before.

Where there is a kabuliyat but no lease, the executant of the kabuliyat cannot utilise the contents of that document against the owner of the land for his own benefit. But the owner of the land can utilise the contents of the kabuliyat to prove what the executant of the kabuliyat has undertaken to do. A BIJAI NARAIN SINGH v. PARBHU NARAIN SINGH 395

— Proprietor, defaulting, adverse possessor of part of estate sold for arrears of, revenue, when becomes.

A person whose adverse possession of part of an estate has not, at the time of the revenue sale of the estate, continued for the statutory period so as to ripen into ownership, cannot be deemed a defaulting proprietor at the date of the sale. C JITENDRA KUMAR PAL CHOWDHURY v. MOHENDRA CHANDRA SARMA, 24 C. L. J. 62 239

—, title by, effect of, as against mortgagor and mortgagee 277

—, title by, whether can be set up in bar of right to enforce mortgage 756

AGRA TENANCY ACT (II of 1901), S. 41—U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 36—Expropriatory tenant—Agreement to enhance rent before 10 years of creation of tenancy, validity of.

A registered agreement executed by a tenant of an ex-proprietary holding, before the expiration of the period of 10 years from the creation of the ex-proprietary tenancy, to pay enhanced rent is a valid agreement and effect can be given to it. A BHAIROD PRASAD v. SOMVARPURI, 15 A. L. J. 117 1001 — Ss. 150, 152, 158, 173, 177, 180—Settlement Officer—Resumption, suit for—Question of proprietary title raised—Appeal to District Judge, maintainability of—S. 51, scope of.

An appeal lies from an order of a Settlement Officer, exercising the powers of a Collector, to the District Judge in a suit in which a question of proprietary title is raised by the defendant in the Court of first instance and is also involved in the appeal.

Section 158 of the Agra Tenancy Act is not limited in its application to grants made subsequent to the passing of the Act. It confers certain rights upon certain individuals who have been in occupation of lands for the periods mentioned in the section, irrespective of when that occupation commenced. A MAHAPAT RAI v. BHARADDWAJ DAMODAR DAS, 15 A. L. J. 200 818

— Ss. 152, 158, 173, 177, 180 818

AGRA TENANCY ACT—concl'd.

— Ss. 177 to 180—Appeal—Decree severable—Question of proprietary title—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts.

Where the decree of a Revenue Court in a case in which the question of proprietary title is raised is severable, an appeal as to that part which raises the question of proprietary title lies to the Civil Court while the appeal as to the other portion which raises no such question lies to the Commissioner. A ISABELLA JACKSON v. SARJIT SINGH, 15 A. L. J. G 771

— Ss. 178, 179, 180 771

— S 197—Object of Act.

A suit for a declaration that a certain lease is invalid does not lie in a Civil Court.

The intention of United Provinces Act II of 1901, as well as of the Acts before it, was that when a Rent Court could try the issue which lay between the parties, then the Rent Court and Rent Court alone had jurisdiction. A POORAN SINGH v. HAIDRI 358 AHMADEES, whether Muhammadans

Members of the Ahmadiya sect of Qadian are Muhammadans. PAT KHALIL AHMAD v. ISRAFIL, 2 P. L. J. 108; 1 P. L. W. 284 302

ALIEN ENEMY, meaning of.

The term "alien enemy" includes not only the subjects of a state at war with Great Britain but also British subjects and subjects of a neutral state who are voluntarily residing in a hostile country. L B GREENBERG v. A. S. PINTO, 9 BUR L T. 176 88

—, suit by Lease granted by alien enemy as agent of non-enemy subject, enforceability of Contracts with alien enemies, principles affecting, validity of 457

APPEAL (CIVIL)—Application for adjudication dismissed—Parties, proper—Practice—Insolvency Court, power of, to refuse application for adjudication—Adjudication, order for 391

—, basis, fresh, for claim, whether can be adopted in 862

—, dismissal of—Discussion of matters affecting respondents, propriety of.

In an appeal by a defendant in which he is found to be a mere benamidar, it is not open to the Court to go into other matters that affect the rights of the respondents. C JAGABANDHU DUTT v. RAJANI KANTA PAL 790

—, Lower Court's decree, failure to comply with whether bars appeal 125

—, Order rejecting application to set aside ex parte decree, whether appealable 845

—, plea of law, whether can be taken for first time in—Law prohibiting institution of certain suits.

If the law prohibits the institution of certain suits, effect must be given at any stage of a suit to the plea that the suit falls within such prohibition. Thus, a plea to the effect that a suit is barred by the provisions of section 68, Civil Procedure Code, can be raised for the first time in appeal. O RAMADHIN v. BISHESHAR DAYAL, 3 O. L. J. 608 111

—, proper presentation of, what constitutes 103

—, right of—Acceptance of benefit under order appealed against—Estoppel 804

APPEAL (CIVIL)—concl'd.

— Small Cause suit heard as a regular suit—Jurisdiction—Revision.

Where a Small Cause suit, instituted in the Court of a Munsif invested with Small Cause Court powers, is heard and decided by the Munsif as a regular suit and not summarily, his decree is not appealable. But if appealed from and reversed, the High Court is bound to set aside the appellate decree on revision as passed without jurisdiction. A ABDUL MAJID v. BEDYADHAR SARAN DAS, 14 A. L. J. 94 92

— Suit for rent not exceeding Rs. 100 in value—Order of District Judge in execution, whether appealable, when not relating to questions of title.

There is no appeal to the High Court against an order passed in execution of a decree in a rent suit not exceeding Rs 100 in value, the order not deciding any question relating to title to land or some interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto or to any of the matters specifically referred to in section 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. C PRAFULLA KRISHNA DEB v. NOSIBANNESSA BIBI, 24 C L J 331 425

— Suit undervalued Jurisdiction—Appellant, duty of—Objection, how taken 451

— Withdrawal of suit, leave for—Appellate Court, powers of—Jurisdiction—Order giving leave "to withdraw appeal with liberty to bring a fresh suit," effect of—Intention of Court—Res judicata 414

— (CRIMINAL, pendency of, against findings

— Stay of criminal proceedings, expediency of 477

—, (SECOND) See APPEAL.

— Adverse possession, plea of, whether open in second appeal.

The question of adverse possession is a mixed question of law and fact and cannot be allowed to be raised for the first time in second appeal. C PRIYANATH MITER v. ANATH NATH DEV 942

— Decree, dismissing suit but granting permission to bring fresh suit, construction of—Appeal against granting permission to bring fresh suit, whether maintainable—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, r. 1.

A suit for redemption was deliberately dismissed by the first Court. Plaintiffs appealed and the lower Appellate Court upheld the decree by the following order: "However, in upholding the order of the lower Court, I order that the appellant hereby has permission to sue again when he has collected his evidence provided that this cause of action is still continuing." Defendants appealed against so much of the decree, as purported to permit the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit. A single Judge of the High Court held that no appeal lay treating the appeal as one against an order under Order XXIII, rule 1, of the Civil Procedure Code, of 1908. On an appeal under the Letters Patent:

Held, that the decree of the lower Appellate Court could not be treated as an order granting the plaintiff permission to withdraw the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit and that, therefore, the appeal to the High Court was not an appeal from an order but an appeal against that portion of the decree of the lower Appellate Court which was in favour of the plaintiffs. A BHARAT SINGH v. JAWALI 940

APPEAL (SECOND)—concl'd.

——— Finding of fact—Circumstantial evidence.

A finding of fact, although based merely upon circumstantial evidence, cannot be questioned in second appeal, unless it is vitiated by some illegality or irregularity. O BALKISHEN v. RAJ BAHADUR, 3 O. L. J. 644 439 ——— Findings of fact, whether can be questioned.

Findings of fact can be questioned in second appeal if they are not clear. O SARABJIT SINGH v. RAMPUR MATHRA ESTATE, 3 O. L. J. 468 27

——— Findings of mixed law and fact 92——— Limitation, plea of, whether can be raised for first time in second appeal

Per Piggot, J.—It would be contrary to sound principles to allow a defendant to raise for the first time in second appeal a plea, even one of limitation, which could not be determined without the taking of fresh evidence upon a question of fact not at all raised in the Courts below. A BABU LAL v. JALAKIA, 14 A. L. J. 1146 343

——— Misjoinder of parties, whether good ground 97——— Notice, insufficiency or invalidity of, if can be pleaded for first time in second appeal.

In an ejectment suit where the defendants did not plead any want of notice in the first Court and there was no issue regarding it:

Held, that the plea of insufficiency or invalidity of notice could not be allowed to be raised for the first time in second appeal. M MUTHU REDDI v. MUTHU VENKATAPATHI REDDI, 4 L. W. 168; 31 M. L. J. 354; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 180 1

——— Question of law—Question of fact—Construction of document—Sale or mortgage

If a question decided by the lower Appellate Court is a question to be decided on the construction of a deed then the question is one of law, but if it is to be decided not on the construction of the deed but on the deed combined with surrounding circumstances then it is a question of fact

For instance, if the question a Court has to answer is, is this document, taken on its own wording, a sale or a mortgage, then the question is one of law, if on the other hand the question to be answered by the Court is, this document on the face of it is a mortgage, but was the contract actually entered into between the parties something different, namely a sale, and if in order to decide this question the Court has to consider the terms of the mortgage and the surrounding circumstances, then it is a question of fact. P AHMAD KHAN v. ALAM KHAN, 120 P. L. R. 1916; 115 P. W. R. 1916 297

ARBITRATION, reference to, scope of—Right of arbitrators to rely on custom—Award decreasing allowance on reduction, legality of 271ARBITRATION AND AWARD—Award set aside, effect of—Estoppel 198——— Objections, evidence in support of—Objector to be given chance of adducing proof—Court, duty of Civil Procedure Code Act of 1908, s. 15—Material irregularity—Revision.

ARBITRATION AND AWARD—concl'd.

Where a party to a suit referred to arbitration files objections to the award, he ought to be given a chance of calling evidence in support of his objections; and, if the Court refuses to give him such time, the refusal amounts to a material irregularity. O BETANA v. KEDAR NATH, 3 O. L. J. 683 400

ARBITRATION ACT (IX OF 1889), applicability of 140ASSAM LAND AND REVENUE REGULATION (I OF 1886), S. 63 252——— S. 70 239

——— Ss. 70, 71, 63—Sale, auction, for arrears of revenue Person having acquired title by adverse possession, whether defaulter—Purchaser, rights of

In an auction sale held under section 60 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation, 1886, what is sold is the estate and the purchaser is entitled to take that estate as against the defaulting proprietors.

Where, at the time a revenue sale takes place under section 70 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation, 1886, a person has by adverse possession acquired a good title to a portion of the estate sold, he is also a defaulter by reason of section 63 of the Regulation and cannot assert a good title as against the purchaser as an unrecorded proprietor. AFT. R. ALL v. BROJENDRA KISHORE ROY, 24 C. L. J. 60 252

——— S. 71 252

——— Ss. 70, 80, 85—Date of confirmation of sale—Sale certificate, whether conclusive as to date of confirmation of sale.

An entry in a sale-certificate as to the date of confirmation of sale cannot possibly affect the provisions of sub-section (2) of section 80 and sub-section (3) of section 85 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation. Such entry cannot, under section 85 of the Regulation, be conclusive evidence as to the date of confirmation of sale and the Court is competent to look beyond the sale certificate to determine the date of confirmation of sale.

Title to property purchased at a sale held under the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation vests in the purchaser from the date when the sale becomes final under section 80, and the possession of a person who occupies portions of it becomes adverse to the purchaser from that date, and not from the date when possession is delivered to the purchaser by the Revenue Authorities. C JITENDRA KUMAR PAL v. CHOWDHURY v. MOHENDRA CHANDRA SARMA, 24 C. L. J. 62 239

——— Ss. 80, 85 239

ATTORNEY AND CLIENT—Admission by attorney, effect of.

An admission of an attorney, until satisfactorily explained away, is cogent evidence against his client. C KETOKKY CHURAN v. SARAT KUMARI DABEE, 20 C. W. N. 995 71

BATHARA PAPERS, admissibility of, in evidence 829, 895

BENGAL CESS ACT (IX B. C. OF 1880), Ss. 14, 20—Suit for recovery of rent due under karn liyat, whether comes under the Act

A suit brought by a landlord to recover certain rent, alleged to have been due by the tenant under a kabuliyat, does not come under section 14 of the Cess Act IX B. C. of 1887), and, therefore, the Court is not precluded by reason of section 20 of the Act from giving the plaintiff-landlord a larger amount than the amount mentioned in the cess return. C SRINANTES LAL MAITY v. SIBU RAUL 755

BENGAL CESS ACT—concl'd.

— S. 20

755

BENGAL ESTATES PARTITION ACT (VIII B.C. OF 1876)—Partition of holding—Consent of tenant—Abandonment, what constitutes

There is nothing in the Estates Partition Act of 1876 to prevent the partition of a tenancy into separate tenancies without the consent of the tenants and on general principle there is no reason why such a partition should not be made.

There is in this respect no difference between a partition under the Estates Partition Act and a partition made by a Civil Court.

Where a holding has been split up, a sale by the tenant of an entire plot that has been separated constitutes abandonment which entitles the landlord to re-enter. PAT RAM LOCHAN KORE v. JAGERNATH MISSEB, 1 P. L. J. 270 440

BENGAL ESTATES PARTITION ACT (V OF 1897), Ch. VI 495

BENGAL LANDLORD AND TENANT PROCEDURE ACT (VIII B. C. OF 1881), S. 53—Landlord and tenant—Tenant holding over without landlord's assent, right of—Ejection—Notice to quit, necessity of.

Under the Bengal Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act a tenant, who is not a cultivator with a right of occupancy, remaining in possession, without the landlord's assent after the expiration of his lease, does not acquire any interest in the land and is liable to be ejected forthwith in the manner prescribed in section 53 of the Act without any previous notice to quit.

Semble—The position might be different where the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act apply.

From the mere fact that the landlord tolerates the continuance in occupation of the tenant after the expiry of the term of his lease, the inference does not follow as a matter of course that he accepts his former tenant as his tenant in future.

On the determination of the lease for a term, the lessee is bound to surrender possession to the lessor; on default he may be ejected without notice to quit, unless he has been allowed to hold over with the landlord's assent, either express or implied; but the mere continuance by a tenant of his possession after the expiration of his lease does not give him the status of a tenant. C PARAMANANDA SINGH v. SYJOU SINGH, 24 C. L. J. 80 201

BENGAL LAND REVENUE SALES ACT (XI B. C. OF 1859), S. 3, object of—Benami purchase, right of third party to raise question of.

The object of section 36 of Act XI of 1859 is to prevent the true owner from disputing the title of his benamidar 'certified purchaser', and not to preclude a third party from enforcing his claim against the true owner in respect of the benami property.

BENGAL LAND REVENUE SALES ACT—concl'd.

Therefore, in a suit by a third party to enforce his right in respect of property sold under Act XI of 1859, the question whether the defendant purchased the property benami is not excluded from the consideration of the Court by reason of section 36 of the Act. C JAGABANDHU DUTT v. RAJANI KANTA PAL 790

BENGAL MUNICIPAL ACT (III B. C. OF 1894), Ss. 44, 45 515

— Ss. 237, 271, 353, 44, 45—Sanction for prosecution by public authority, whether to be under seal—Report of out-door inspector recommending prosecution signed by Chairman, whether complaint—Notice against accused by Vice-Chairman how validated.

In the absence of any legislative enactment a sanction for prosecution by a public authority does not require to be under seal.

Where a report of offences under sections 230 and 271 of the Bengal Municipal Act was made by the out-door inspector of a Municipality in a printed form, the columns of which were duly filled up and in the remarks column occurred the remark, "submitted to the District Magistrate with recommendation to prosecute the party under sections 230, 271 of the Bengal Municipal Act," and it bore a stamp of eight annas and was signed by the Chairman of the Municipality:

Held, that the document was not a petition of complaint by the Chairman but was an order or consent by the Chairman as representing the Commissioners for or to the prosecution as required under section 353 of the Bengal Municipal Act and was sufficient under the law for the purpose of the prosecution.

Held, also, that the notice against the accused issued on the authority of the Vice-Chairman without any delegation of authority by the Chairman by a written order, was not invalid as the consent of the Chairman was subsequently obtained to the act of the Vice-Chairman. C KRISTO LALL v. CHAIRMAN OF HOOGHLY-CHINSURAH MUNICIPALITY, O C W. N. 824; 24 C. L. J. 57 515

— Ss. 240, 241, 242A (b)—Construction of platform on open space between house and drain, whether 'erection' of building—Gaya Municipal Rules, r. 1, whether ultra vires—Statutory rules, object and construction of—Notice of removal or demolition under section 241—3—Remedy of party aggrieved—Omission to appeal to Commissioners, effect of—Suit for declaration and injunction against Municipality, maintainability of.

The erection of a platform on an open space between the outer wall of a house and the street drain is an 'erection' within the meaning of section 240 of the Bengal Municipal Act, for which the previous sanction of the Municipality is necessary.

Rule 1 of the Rules framed by the Gaya Municipality under the powers vested in them by section 241 of the Act is not ultra vires or unreasonable.

An order, therefore, issued by the Municipality to a house owner to leave an open space between the external wall of his house and the drain adjoining the road is not illegal.

BENGAL MUNICIPAL ACT—concl'd.

A person aggrieved by an order under section 241 (3) must exhaust the statutory remedy provided in section 242A before going to the Civil Courts for redress.

Section 241 (d) indicates the line or foundation upon which a Municipality should frame their rules. If they exceed their jurisdiction and the limitation imposed upon them by the section, then their rules will be ultra vires. Where the rules are framed in the interests of public health they should not be construed in too strict and too limited a sense.

The rules, after receiving the assent of the Lieutenant-Governor, should be read as if they were incorporated in the Statute, unless there is something in them patently outside the jurisdiction conferred by it. PAT CHAIRMAN OF GAYA MUNICIPALITY v. SUKAN SINGH

— Ss. 241, 242A (b) 854
— Ss. 271, 353 515

BENGAL REGULATION VIII OF 1819, Ss. 8, 18—

Co-sharer zemindars—Application for sale—Notice—Place of service.

When co-sharer zemindars jointly making an application for the sale of a patni under Regulation VIII of 1819 have several kutcheries, the notice required by section 8 of the Regulation must be served upon each kutchery and the service of notice at the kutchery of any individual co-sharer would not be a sufficient compliance with the provisions of the Regulation.

The provisions of Regulation VIII of 1819 must be strictly complied with. C PANCHANON v. RAMENDRA SUNDAR TRIBEDI

— S. 18 895

BENGAL RENT ACT (X B. C. OF 1859), S. 10—

Abwab, meaning of—Illegal cess.

If a tenant in consideration for the use and occupation of land agrees to pay a certain amount of rent in cash and the price of certain quantities of produce, the total of the two items to constitute one whole rent or jama, the price of the produce would be recoverable as rent and would not be an abwab. PAT SADANAND TEWARI v. DEB NATH MANJHI 980

— S. 82—Eviction of raiyat—Status of under-raiyat after ejectment of occupancy tenant for non-payment of rent—Locus standi to object to decree against occupancy tenant.

After an occupancy tenant has been ejected from a holding for non-payment of rent, his under-raiyat is a mere trespasser, and is liable to ejectment at the instance of the landlord.

An under-raiyat has no locus standi to question the validity of a decree of ejectment passed against the occupancy tenant. PAT BISHEK NARAIN DAS v. CHANDRA KANTA NAIK, 20 C. W. N. 1240; 1 P. L. J. 543 658

BENGAL RENT RECOVERY ACT (VIII OF 1881, Ss. 4, 11, 16 955

BENGAL TENANCY ACT (VIII B. C. OF 1885), Ss. 3 (5), 105—Landlord and tenant—Holding declared kabil lagan—Rent assessed—Suit by landlord for damages for use and occupation previous to assessment of rent, nature of—Small Cause Court, jurisdiction of.

Where a holding was entered in the survey as kabil lagan and a rent fixed for it under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and the landlord sued the tenant for damages for use and occupation of the land previous to the assessment of rent:

Held, that the sum claimed was 'rent' within the meaning of section 3 (5) of the Bengal Tenancy Act and, therefore, the suit was not cognisable by a Small Cause Court. PAT MAHADEO RAI v. KESHO PERSHAD SINGH, 1 P. L. W. 45; 2 P. L. J. 91 909

— Ss. 19, 20—Occupancy rights, acquisition of—Hindu Law—Widow's estate—Acquisition of occupancy rights during lifetime of widow—Ejection by reversioners, validity of.

Occupancy rights are not the creation of a zemindar or of the manager or of the temporary holder of an estate; any person cultivating lands in an estate acquires in time occupancy rights therein and the temporary holder can do nothing to prevent the acquisition of those rights save by evicting the occupancy ryot by legal process. Any person holding in good faith as a cultivating ryot land under a temporary manager, proprietor or even lease-holder would acquire occupancy rights therein after twelve years' cultivation.

Hence occupancy rights acquired during the time when an estate was in the hands of a Hindu widow cannot be questioned by the reversioners after her death. PAT HARMANOGEE NARAIN SINGH v. GANOUR SINGH

— S. 20 360
— S. 23 999

— S. 23—Occupancy holding, rendering unfit of, for tenancy—Holding market on portion of holding, whether makes it unfit for tenancy—Injunction, grant of.

The withdrawal of one-tenth portion of an occupancy holding from actual cultivation for a purpose totally unconnected with agriculture, such as the establishment of a market, renders the holding unfit for the purpose of the tenancy within the meaning of section 23 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Where some of the landlords of an occupancy holding, in whose favour a deed of release has been executed by the tenants and to whom possession of one-tenth portion of the holding has been relinquished for the purpose of enabling them to hold a market thereon, attempt to erect structures and hold a market thereon, the other landlords are entitled to restrain them from executing their design.

Section 23 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is applicable not only to cases where the land (of an occupancy holding) is made permanently unfit but also to cases where it is made temporarily unfit for the purposes of the tenancy. C RAJKISHORE MONDAL v. RAJANI KANT, 24 C. L. J. 85 249

— S. 25—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882, s. 114(g))—Landlord and tenant—Ejectment—Forfeiture—Denial of landlord's title, what amounts to.

The denial of a landlord's title by a tenant, in order to involve forfeiture of the latter's interest, must be expressed and not implied and must precede the institution of the suit for ejectment on the ground of denial of title. PAT SAMUNDAR SINGH v. MUKH LAL SINGH 935

BENGAL TENANCY ACT—contd.

S. 29—Landlord and tenant—Amalgamation of tenancies, whether changes their incidents—Enhancement of rent—Pleadings—Appeal, fresh basis for claim, whether can be adopted in.

Where two occupancy holdings are amalgamated without any registered document, the lands remaining the same, and the consolidated jama is enhanced more than 2 annas in the rupee on the old jama, then unless it is proved that a new tenancy has been created or the parties intended to create a new tenancy, the incidents of the old tenancy remain unchanged, so that the landlord cannot get enhanced rent in contravention of the provisions of section 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Where the plaintiff's case in the lower Court was not that a new tenancy had been created or that the parties had intended to create a new tenancy by the amalgamation of the old tenancy, he cannot be allowed to contend in second appeal that a new tenancy was created by the amalgamation. C KRISTADHAN GHOSE v. GOLAM MANDAL 862

S. 29, scope of—Compromise decree enhancing rent more than two annas in rupee, validity of.

Section 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act applies only to the case of a money rent of an occupancy raiyyat and not to that of a tenant at fixed rate. There is nothing in that section or in any other provision of the Act to prevent a landlord or tenant from entering into any agreement whereby the status of the tenant is raised from an occupancy raiyyat to that of a tenant at fixed rate, and as a consideration for the tenant for acquiring a higher status the rent is enhanced more than two annas in the rupee. PAT MOHAMAD JAN v. COMMISSIONER OF PATNA 797

Ss. 52, 188—Co-sharer landlord, right of suit by, for his share of excess area—Kabuliyat, construction of.

Where a kabuliyat described the land let out as 50 bighas by guess, and provided that the lessees should enjoy the land rent-free for two years and thereafter should pay rent at the rate of Rs. 2 per bigha fixed in perpetuity for as much land as was cleared and brought under cultivation, and that when the surrounding lands were all brought under cultivation, the lessees would be liable to pay rent for the entire area in their possession at the stipulated rate:

Held, (1) that, after all the surrounding lands had been brought under cultivation, a co-sharer landlord could, under the general law, maintain a suit upon the kabuliyat for his share of the rent for the entire area, (which was in excess of the 50 bighas provided he made the other co-sharers pro forma parties to the suit;

(2) that such a suit was not a suit for the rent of additional area under section 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and, therefore, section 188 would be no bar to it. C BHOSAI v. AMINUDDI, 21 C. W. N. 371 847

S. 73 Rent, suit for—Parties, necessary—Transferee of tenant, liability of.

BENGAL TENANCY ACT—contd.

Under section 73 of the Bengal Tenancy Act a landlord has a right to make both the tenant and his transferees jointly liable for the rent. PAT SURAJ-NARAIN SINGH v. SUGRA 842

S. 74—Illegal cess—Katihari, whether legal charge.

Where katihari is entered in the Record of Rights as payable by a tenant, the presumption is in favour of the charge being legal.

A katihari charge payable by a tenant to the zemindar in respect of looms worked by the latter in his house, is not an illegal cess within the meaning of section 74 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. PAT BHAGWATI PRASAD v. MAHBUB MOMIN 813

Ss. 76 (1), (2), cl. (f), 23—Gardening lease—Occupancy raiyyat, right of, to erect dwelling-house on holding.

An occupancy raiyyat does not exceed his right in building a pucca dwelling-house on an insignificant portion of his holding taken for the purpose of gardening.

Such building need not be suitable to the holding, but it must be suitable under the circumstances of the raiyyat who makes it. C NARAIN CHANDRA DALAL v. MANINDRA CHANDRA NANDI 999

S. 87—Abandonment—Forfeiture—Usufructuary mortgage with possession, whether amounts to abandonment.

Mere execution of a usufructuary mortgage and delivery of possession to the mortgagee of his holding by a tenant who continues to reside in the village, does not entail forfeiture of the tenancy nor does it amount to an abandonment of the holding within the meaning of section 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. PAT AJODHYA PRASAD SINGH v. JAGDEO SINGH 915

S. 87—Landlord and tenant—Abandonment of holding—Waiver of abandonment, suit for rent, whether amounts to.

Abandonment can be found without any reference to section 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, as the Act does neither lay down that an abandonment by a tenant can only be made according to the procedure prescribed by section 87 nor does it confine the tenant to that procedure.

A suit for rent against a tenant, after he has abandoned the lease, without any knowledge of the abandonment on the part of the landlord, cannot operate as a waiver of the abandonment. C PRIYA-NATH MITTER v. ANATH NATH DEV 942

C. H. X Ss 106, 107, scope of—Withdrawal of suit under s. 106, when bars civil suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIII, r. 1 (3).

Order XXIII, rule 1 (3) of the Civil Procedure Code, in the absence of permission to bring a fresh suit, precludes the plaintiff from instituting any fresh suit in respect of such subject-matter or such part of the claim from which he has withdrawn; but the withdrawal of a suit without permission to bring a fresh suit under section 106, Bengal Tenancy Act, for a declaration that the entry of the defendant's name in the Record of Rights as the owner of a share in a haveli was not correct, does not bar a suit in the Civil Court for declaration of the plaintiff's title to and for recovery of possession of the said share.

BENGAL TENANCY ACT—conold.

The bar under section 109 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is a bar only in respect of matters which are legally the subject-matter of the investigation made under Chapter X of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Questions relating to declaration of title to and recovery of possession of immoveable property are entirely foreign to the jurisdiction of a Revenue Officer under section 103, Bengal Tenancy Act, his work being confined to a decision of the point whether the entry in a Record of Rights is correct or not. C. ASWINI KUMAR AICH v. SARADA CHANDAN BASU, 24 C. L. J. 79 253

Ss. 103B, 17B, 74—Record of Rights, presumption as to correctness of entries in—Katihar, whether legal charge illegal cess 813

S. 11 B, scope of—Record of Rights, entry in, history of proceedings as to, relevancy of.

The statutory provision in section 103, Bengal Tenancy Act, says nothing as to the value to be attached to an entry in the Record of Rights: it only says that the entry must stand and be presumed to be correct until it is proved by evidence to be incorrect.

It is open to a Court to consider the history of the proceedings which have resulted in a particular entry in a Record of Rights. PAT MAHTAB KHAN v. SHEOBARAT FLEI 353

— S. 105 909

— S. 105A 641

— Ss. 106, 09 253

— Ss. 109, 105, 105A—Record of Rights, suit for amendment of entries in—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

In proceedings under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, to which plaintiffs were parties, certain entries in the Record of Rights, describing plaintiffs as tenure-holders and defendants as riyats, were affirmed as correct. Plaintiffs brought a suit asking that the Record of Rights be amended and their names entered as riyats instead of those of the defendants, and that they should be put in possession:

Held, that the status of the plaintiffs having already been determined under section 05 of the Bengal Tenancy Act by a Revenue Court having jurisdiction, the suit was barred by section 09 of the Act. PAT RAM DAYAL PANDEY v. GENDA TEWARI, 1 P. L. J. 49 641

— S. 147B 813

— S. 53 25

S. 113—Appeal in suit for recovery of rent where amount claimed does not exceed Rs. 100—Rent—Mafi allowed to jeth riyat; whether amounts to rent.

A mafi from the total rent allowed by the landlord to a jeth riyat in consideration of services to be performed by the latter is not rent, inasmuch as the amount is payable by the landlord to the tenant and, therefore, a decision ascertaining the amount of such mafi is not a decision as to the amount of rent annually payable by a tenant, within the meaning of section 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. PAT SAFAIT HOSSAIN v. WAIZUDDIN, 20 C. W. N. 1207; 1 P. L. J. 501 670

— S. 188 847

BENGAL VILLAGE CHAUKIDARI ACT VI B. O. OF 1870), S. 48—Chaukidari chakran land—Settlement with one of several zemindars, validity of—Jurisdiction.

The Collector has no jurisdiction to settle village chowkidari chakran land with only one of several zemindars under section 43 of Act VI of 1870. PAT MUHAMMAD ABU ZAFAR v. RAM PERSHAD KUMAR 937

BILL OF EXHIBITION—Consignment of goods—War, declaration of, effect of—Acceptance 258

BILL OF LADING, construction of—"Or so near thereunto as a ship may go," meaning of—Restraint of Princes, what amounts to—Reasonable apprehension.

The clause usually inserted in bills of lading to the effect that the goods shipped are to be delivered at a certain port "or as near thereunto as the ship may safely get", must be taken to refer not to the voyage or the carriage of the goods but to their unloading or delivery. It means that the ship should get within the ambit of the port although she may not be able to enter it. The clause would not justify a shipowner delivering the goods at a different destination owing to war or natural causes.

The exception as to 'restraints of Princes' will justify a shipowner refusing to ship goods, which he has agreed to carry to a certain port, if he has a reasonable apprehension that the adventure will be frustrated by restraints of Princes. It is not necessary that the apprehension should be due to a restraint in operation at the date of the refusal.

Defendants agreed on 21st July 1914 to carry 1,250 tons of seeds for the plaintiffs to Antwerp by the 'September shipment'. On August 4th war broke out between England and Germany, and by September 11th the latter had overrun Belgium. On the latter date the defendants refused to ship the goods:

Held, that the defendants could avail themselves of the exception as to restraints of Princes contained in the bill of lading, as they had a reasonable apprehension that Antwerp was no longer a safe port.

Obiter dictum—The apprehension of restraint of Princes may be reasonable, though it is unfounded.

Occurrences subsequent to the refusal of a shipowner to ship goods may be taken as a text of what was the true state of things when the breach of agreement to ship occurred. S. SANDAY PATRICK & Co. v. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION Co., 10 S. L. R. 100 25

BOMBAY COURT OF WARDS ACT (Bom. Act I of 1905), Ss. 31, 3, applicability of 186

BOMBAY DISTRICT POLICE ACT (Bom. Act IV of 1890), S. 13 353

— Ss. 42, 44, 13, scope of—Public street—Vyasan-tol of procession, prohibition of, for all time and throughout a district—Government Resolution of the 11th May 1911, if ultra vires—Public, right of, to use public roads.

The Government of Bombay Resolution dated the 6th of May 1911 prohibiting Vyasan-tol processions in the District of Belgaum for all time is illegal and ultra vires and is not covered either by section 42 or by section 44 of the Bombay District Police Act.

Section 42 of the Bombay District Police Act expressly limits the powers of prohibition conferred upon the Magistrate both in time and in place, the limitation of place being to a particular town or village or the vicinity thereof. Section 44 (1) of the District Police Act deals not with the prohibition of religious ceremonials, but with the maintaining of public order at religious ceremonials which are not prohibited.

BOMBAY DISTRICT POLICE ACT—concl'd.

Section 13 (2) of the District Police Act does not confer any unlimited power on the Government to prohibit processions.

All members of the public have a right to use the public streets in a lawful manner, and it lies on them who would restrain them to show some law or custom abrogating the privilege.

Therefore, the Lingayats of the District of Belgaum have a right to exhibit Vyasantol, their religious symbol, in procession in any public street, subject to the lawful orders that may be passed under any provisions of law such as section 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure or sections 42 and 44 of the Bombay District Police Act. B DUNDAPPA MALAPPA SIGANDHI v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 18 BOM. L. R. 460 363

BOMBAY KHOTI SETTLEMENT ACT (BOM. ACT I OF 1890), S. 9 22BOMBAY LAND REVENUE CODE (BOM. ACT V OF 1879), Ss. 56, 153 295BOMBAY PREVENTION OF GAMBLING ACT (BOM. ACT IV OF 1887), S. 6—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 103—Search of gaming house by Police without mashirs, legality of—Evidence discovered in illegal search, admissibility of.

A search conducted under section 6 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act, is not rendered illegal by the mere non-presence of mashirs as required by section 103 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

But such an omission in case of searches conducted under the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code would render them illegal, although the illegality would be no bar to the consideration of the evidence discovered by the search. S KADIR MOHAMED v. EMPEROR, 18 CR. L. J. 49; 10 S. L. R. 137 33

— S. 6—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 123, 125—Warrant issued under s. 6, containing direction for seizure of all money found on people in gaming house, legality of—Complaint on oath forming basis of warrant issued under s. 6, right of accused to inspection of.

A warrant issued under section 6 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act is not rendered wholly bad or illegal by reason of its containing a direction for seizure of all money found on people in the gaming house; such a direction should be regarded as mere surplussage not affecting the main purpose of the warrant.

Non-production by a Court of the complaint on oath which forms the foundation of a warrant issued under section 6, is not improper, if the object of the production is to ascertain merely the name of the informer.

Per Fawcett, A. J. C.—The Court should decline to sanction any step which would in practice almost necessarily result in the disclosure of the name of the informer, contrary to the provisions of section 123 of the Evidence Act. S BAGHUMAL WAPHUMAL v. EMPEROR, 18 CR. L. J. 70; 10 S. L. R. 134 54

BOMBAY PREVENTION OF GAMBLING ACT—concl'd.

— S. 12—Playing cards for very insignificant stakes near a masjid—Offence, trifling—Sentence.

Accused, who were peons and mill-hands, were convicted by a Magistrate for gambling in that they played cards for very insignificant stakes on a hot afternoon under the cool shades of a masjid and were sentenced to fifteen days' imprisonment each:

Held, that the offence was very trivial and the sentence inflicted grossly disproportionate and that a warning or a small fine would have answered the ends of justice. B MAHAMAD NATHU v. EMPEROR, 18 CR. L. J. 97; 18 BOM. L. R. 940 305

BURDEN OF PROOF—Consideration, non-receipt of, plea as to—Bond, recital in, as to receipt of consideration, whether evidence of such receipt 31

— Corporations and individuals, position of.

So far as the rule of burden of proof goes no difference can be made between corporations and individuals. PAT LACHMI NARAIN MARWARI v. CHAIRMAN OF THE RANCHI MUNICIPALITY, 1 P. L. J. 197 269

— Ejectment suit 924

— Ex parte case—Evidence, otherwise unreliable, not to be relied upon—Court, duty of.

A Court ought not to rely in an ex parte case on evidence otherwise unreliable, simply because the case is ex parte. O SARABJIT SINGH v. RAMPUR MATHRA ESTATE, 3 O. L. J. 468 27

Landlord and tenant—Ejectment—Assignee from tenant, resistance by, to landlord's entry—Right to resist, proof of, by defendant 357

— , objection as to, in appeal after evidence fully recorded:

The question of the burden of proof is only a question of procedure and where the evidence has been fully recorded on both sides and the Court has only to adjudicate upon it, no such question arises. PAT MAHTAB KHAN v. SHEOHARAT TELI 353

— Order-sheet, correctness of entries in—Presumption 66

— Registration—Consideration, receipt of—Presumption.

Where a vendor admits receipt of consideration in respect of a transfer at the time of registration, the onus is on him to show that he did not in fact receive it, and the presumption arising from his admission is not rebutted by his mere denial of such receipt. P RAHMAT v. ZABITA 874

BURMA LAWS ACT (XIII OF 1896), S. 13—'Hindu,' meaning of—Hindu Law, applicability of—Kalais, law applicable to—Caste regulations, force of—Court, duty of 780

CALCUTTA MUNICIPAL ACT (III B. C. OF 1899), Ss. 152, 158, 160—Notice for re-valuation—Fresh notice, necessity of, when altering valuation from one basis to another.

Section 158 of the Calcutta Municipal Act provides only for the issue of a notice for re-valuation and there is no provision in the Act for the issue of a fresh notice when, after hearing objections under section 160, the Chairman alters the valuation already made by him.

CALCUTTA MUNICIPAL ACT—contd.

Where, therefore, the Chairman of the Calcutta Municipal Corporation, after issuing a notice under section 158 of the Calcutta Municipal Act for the re-valuation of a holding on the basis of the cost of construction and value of land instead of on the rental value, made a certain valuation, and then after hearing objections of the owner, taken under section 160 of the Act, altered the valuation on the rental basis:

Held, that the notice given under section 158 was sufficient and not defective. C CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA v. NRITYA KALI DASSEY 932

— Ss. 158, 160 932

— S. 286—Highway or drain, vesting of, in Municipality, effect of—Municipality, powers of—Owner of land covered by drain, rights of—Injunction—Declaration.

A house-drain alongside a public street made by the owner of the adjoining premises, to which the land covered by the drain appertains, for the outlet of water therefrom is excluded from the operation of section 286 of the Calcutta Municipal Act.

The legal effect of the statutory vesting of a street or a drain in a Municipality is not to transfer to the Municipality the ownership in the site or soil over which the street or the drain exists; but only the surface and so much of the air-space above and so much of the soil below the surface vest in and belong to the Municipality as may reasonably be required for its control, protection and maintenance as a highway or drain for the use of the public; and to this extent only, the owner of the land covered by the street or drain is divested of his property.

In construing an Act like the Calcutta Municipal Act, Courts will not presume that the intention of the Legislature was to confiscate private property and vest it in a public Corporation without compensation granted to the proprietor, but the reasonable inference should be that the right of the owner was intended to be abridged only to the extent necessary for the discharge of the statutory duties imposed on the Corporation for the benefit of the public.

When a highway vests under a Statute in a local authority, the property of the local authority concerned does not extend further than is necessary for the maintenance and user of the highway as a highway and subject to this qualification the original owner's rights and property remain, and if the highway ceases to be a highway, the owner becomes entitled to full and unabridged rights of ownership in the property.

English, American and Indian Case-Law considered.

The plaintiffs' land, covered by a drain that had vested in the Calcutta Corporation under section 286 of the Calcutta municipal Act, having been included within the boundaries of the Municipal land, they brought a suit for a perpetual injunction against the Corporation and for a declaration of their title to the land:

Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled not only to a declaration of title but also to a perpetual injunction restraining the Corporation and its officials and servants, from interfering with the exercise by the plaintiffs of their right of ownership in the disputed land, except in so far as such interference might reasonably be required for the control, protection and maintenance of the drain thereon for the use of the public. C KSHETRA MOHAN GHOSH v. CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA, 24 C. L. J. 358; 21 C. W. N. 234 96

CALCUTTA MUNICIPAL ACT—conold.

CANTONMENT HOUSE ACCOMMODATION ACT (II of 1902), S. 6, orders passed under—Appeal—Civil Courts, whether can interfere 267

— Ss. 35, 37, 6—Orders passed under s. 6—Appeal—Civil Courts, whether can interfere.

A Civil Court has no jurisdiction to interfere with, or question the propriety of, orders passed on proceedings before special tribunals created by special legislative enactments for that purpose, and whose orders have been declared by the Legislature to be final.

Section 35 of the Cantonment House Accommodation Act constitutes the Officer Commanding the Division the legal tribunal to which any person aggrieved by a notice issued under section 6 of the Act may have recourse, and under section 37 of the Act his decision is final. S DE VERTEUIL v. CANTONMENT COMMITTEE, KARACHI, 10 S. L. R. 113 267

— S. 37 267

CASTE DISABILITIES REMOVAL ACT (XXI of 1830), S. 1—Apostacy, effect of, on descendants of convert—Claim, reversionary, by descendant of convert to estate of deceased Hindu, maintainability of—'Renouncing,' 'excluded,' 'deprived,' meaning of.

The removal of disabilities on rights of inheritance by an apostate provided for by Act XXI of 1830 applies only to the convert himself and not to his descendants.

The descendants of a convert to Christianity, therefore, cannot maintain a reversionary suit to the estate of a deceased Hindu.

Per Oldfield, J.—The 'renunciation' and 'deprivation' referred to in section 1 of the Act apply only to rights which have accrued and not to persons who were born in another religion before the succession opened. Under the section protection is, in terms, given only to one person, the one who has renounced or been excluded or deprived, and it cannot be extended by construction to others.

Per Bakewell, J. The words "having been excluded and being deprived of caste" connote an act directed against a particular person, and do not apply to an individual who is not a member of a particular community because by reason of his birth he is included within another community. VI VAITHILINGA ODAYAR v. AYYATHORAI ODAYAR 753

CATTLE TRESPASS ACT (I of 1871), S. 20 374

C. P. LAND-REVENUE ACT (XVIII of 1881), S. 61A—'Protected' gaontia, whether can surrender tenure—Gaontia, power of, to confer permanent rights—Adverse possession, nature and commencement of.

Plaintiff's ancestor, who was zemindar of the village in dispute, granted a lease of it in gaontia tenure to one D, and fresh leases were in succession granted to his son and grandson, the last named becoming a

C. P. LAND REVENUE ACT—concl'd.

'protected' gaontia under section 65A of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1881. On his death in 1900, his second son K was recorded as gaontia, and in 1907 the latter surrendered the tenure to the plaintiff. In 1911 plaintiff sued defendants for possession of the lands, and the latter, all of whom belonged to the family of the gaontia, resisted the zemindar's claim on the grounds that K had no power to surrender the tenure to the plaintiff, that they had been in adverse possession of the lands both as against the gaontia and as against the zemindar and that the suit was barred by limitation:

Held, (1) that there was nothing in the incidents of the tenure of a "protected" gaontia, as set out in section 65A of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1881, which in any way suggested that a gaontia was not entitled to relinquish his rights;

(2) that the suit was not barred by limitation as possession could not be adverse to a person who was not himself entitled to claim present possession, and so long as the gaontia tenure subsisted, the zemindar was not entitled to actual possession of any portion of the village and the possession of the defendants did not become adverse to the plaintiff until the tenure was relinquished in 1907.

A gaontia cannot confer rights of a permanent character in the village which would be binding upon the zemindar after the gaontia tenure ceases to exist. PAT LAL NARUPRAJA SINGH v. BHABANI TELI, 1 P. L. J. 293 107

— S. 136G—Partition ordered by Deputy Commissioner—Appeal—Jurisdiction—Sambalpur Civil Courts Act (IV B. C. of 1906)—Deputy Commissioner and District Judge, positions of

In the Sambalpur District, the District Judge under the Bengal, N.-W. P. and Assam Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887) has succeeded to the position of the Deputy Commissioner under the Central Provinces Civil Courts Act (XVI of 1885). Therefore, an order passed by the Deputy Commissioner under section 136D of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act (XVIII of 1881) must be deemed to be an order of the District Judge and an appeal against it lies to the High Court and not to the District Court. PAT PADMAN LOCHAN MISRA v. KRISHNA CHANDRA MISRA, 1 P. L. J. 290 115

— S. 138—Lambardar Gaontia in Sambalpur District, settlement of rai-yati lands by, validity of.

A lambardar Gaontia of a village in the District of Sambalpur has authority, according to custom, to make settlement of rai-yati lands without the consent of his co-sharer Gaontias.

Quære.—Whether he can grant a permanent lease of such lands. C. SIDHESWAR PANDA v. PITBAS GAONTIA, 24 C. L. J. 83 261

CHOTA NAGPUR TENANCY ACT (VI B. C. of 1908) 658

— S. 208 955

— Ss 212, 215—Sale in execution of decree—Right to deposit purchase-money—'Claims', meaning of—Jurisdiction of Court to determine whether person depositing money is interested in the holding sold—Appeal, whether lies—Jurisdiction.

CHOTA NAGPUR TENANCY ACT—concl'd.

A person cannot get a sale set aside under section 212 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act merely upon his putting before the Court a series of statements which may be totally untrue. The Court is bound to enquire into the truth of the allegations made in the application.

The word "claims" used in section 212 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act is used in the sense of asserting that a thing is one's own or affirming one's possession of a thing.

In execution of a decree for rent a tenure was sold. A person claiming to hold dar-mukavari interest in the tenure claimed to be entitled to deposit in the Court the sum indicated by section 212 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act to get the sale set aside. The first Court rejected the application but on appeal the Judicial Commissioner held that he was entitled to deposit the sum in Court:

Held, that an appeal lay to the Judicial Commissioner from the order of the first Court. PAT PAN-CHANAN MAHTO v. KUNAI MAHTO, 2 P. L. J. 153 891
— S. 215 891

— S. 231—Execution—Sale—Judgment-debtor, application by, to set aside sale—Limitation.

Respondent obtained a decree on a mortgage-bond executed by the appellant, and in execution of that decree the latter's holding was sold and purchased by the former. Appellant applied to set aside the sale more than one year after its date:

Held, that under the provisions of section 231 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, the application should have been made within one year of the date of the sale, and that, consequently, it was barred by limitation. PAT NILMANI GOSWAMI v. ROHAN MAHTI, 20 C. W. N. 1243; 1 P. L. J. 483 683

CHOWKIDARI CHAKRAN LANDS—Right of zemindar—Burden of proving that land is chowkidari chakran land—Kabuliyat executed at Permanent Settlement, construction of—Undertaking to continue sardars and paiks in Pergunnah, meaning of—Right to determine employment of paik on service tenure—Resumption of land.

Chowkidari chakran lands are lands which at or before the Permanent Settlement had been appropriated or assigned for the maintenance of the Police force and by reason of such appropriation excluded from the zemindari assessment. The zemindar is precluded by Bengal Regulations I of 1793 and XIII of 1805 from utilising chowkidari chakran lands for remunerating persons who are his personal servants and perform no Police duties, but the onus of proving that the lands in dispute are so appropriated or assigned is on the Government.

Where in January 1801, the zemindar of Pergunnah Nayabasan, which was settled with him in that year, executed a kabuliyat in favour of the Government under which he was bound to maintain and keep the same "sardars and paiks" that had all along existed in the Pergunnah, and to carry out whatever orders might be passed by the Magistrate on the paiks:

Held, that the sardars and paiks referred to in the kabuliyat were sardars and paiks employed on Police duty; that the document had no reference to paiks.

CHOWKIDARI CHAKRAN LANDS—concl'd.

who held jagirs within the Pergunnah on tenure services personal to the zemindar himself and having no connection with the local Police; and that the zemindar was entitled to determine the employment of a paik who was in his personal service and held a jagir on service tenure determinable when his employment ceased, and to recover possession of his jagir. P C RAM CHANDRA BHANI DEO v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 20 C. W. N. 1245; 20 M. L. T. 235; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 175; 4 L. W. 251; 14 A. L. J. 1009; 18 Bom. L. R. 838; 24 C. L. J. 296; 31 M. L. J. 745; 43 C. 1104 223

CIVIL COURTS, whether can determine questions of orthodoxy.

Per Twomey, J.—It is not within the province of Civil Courts to determine questions of orthodoxy. L B MAUNG CHIT MAUNG v. MA YAIT 780

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT XIV OF 1882), S. 244 836

— Ss. 282, 283 78

— S. 283 767

— S. 287 872

— S. 315—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 93—Sale under old Code—Sale, setting aside of, after passing of new Code—Refund of purchase-money, claim for—Procedure—Execution—Suit.

The last clause of section 315 of the old Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) prescribing that the right to recover the purchase-money on cancellation of a sale can be enforced in execution, has been repealed by O. XXI, r. 93, of the new Code (Act V of 1908). The latter rule provides for the refund of purchase-money where a sale is set aside in execution proceedings. But even where the sale was held under the old Code, if it is set aside in a separate suit after the passing of the Act V of 1908, the purchaser must enforce his claim only by a separate suit. M INRI TARINI v. KOMOLO BISOI 763

— S. 375—Compromise decree—Decree creating mortgage and directing sale of property—Lawful agreement—Decree, whether in excess of what 'relates to the suit'—Registration, whether necessary—Interest, provision for, penal whether relievable—Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17, Excep. cl. VI—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 99.

A decree based on the terms of a compromise between the parties to a suit for money and creating a mortgage of properties for the amount that is payable and directing sale of the properties in default of payment within a certain time, is a mortgage decree and is executable as such. An agreement in pursuance of which such a decree is passed is a lawful agreement within the meaning of section 375 of Act XIV of 1882. Section 99 of the Transfer of Property Act has no application to such a decree nor is it repugnant to public policy.

Such a decree is not beyond the scope of section 375, Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), as not relating to the suit which was one for money and, therefore, is not one passed without jurisdiction.

Such a decree falls under section 17, exception clause VI, of the Registration Act and does not require to be registered.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1882—concl'd.

An agreement to pay an enhanced rate of interest, not from the date of default but from that of the original obligation, is in the nature of a penalty and is unenforceable.

A penalty will be relieved against even where it is embodied in a decree passed by consent of parties. M KANDULA PEDA LINGA REDDI v. KAKUMANU HANUMAYYA 764

— S. 462—Compromise for minor by Court of Wards—Leave of Court, whether necessary—Court of Wards Act (IX B. C. of 1879), Ss. 18, 57 971

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT V OF 1908), S. 2 900

— S. 2, O. XXI, R. 66—Proclamation of sale—Order fixing upset price—Decree—Appeal.

An order of a Court tentatively fixing, for the purpose of an auction-sale, the market value of the property and deciding the figure at which the bidding should commence, cannot be regarded as a conclusive determination of any right of parties and is not a decree within the meaning of section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. No appeal lies against such an order. M RAMANATHAN CHETTY v. SOMASUNDARAM CHETTIAR, (1917) M. W. N. 141 897

— S. 10—Stay of suit Jurisdiction—Principal and agent—Accounts, agent, whether can demand.

One of the essential conditions which have to be fulfilled before an order staying a suit under section 10 of the Civil Procedure Code can be passed, is that both the Courts before whom the suits are pending must be of "concurrent jurisdiction", in the sense that the suit to be stayed could be tried in the Court in which the first suit was instituted.

Obiter dictum.—An agent cannot bring a suit for accounts against his principal, but only for the balance due upon an account. The agent alone is liable to render accounts, the principal is not. N GOPIKISAN v. PADAMRAJ, 12 N. L. R. 174 510

— Ss. 11, 107, O. XXII, R. 11, O. XXIII, R. 1—Appeal—Withdrawal of suit, leave for—Appellate Court, powers of—Jurisdiction—Order giving leave 'to withdraw appeal with liberty to bring a fresh suit', effect of—Intention of Court—Res judicata—Decree, construction of—Order incorrect—Party, duty of.

By the Full Bench.—It is open to an Appellate Court in proper cases when reversing the decree of the lower Court to give the plaintiff leave to withdraw the suit with liberty to file a fresh suit.

Per Spencer, J.—Where, in an appeal by a plaintiff against a decree dismissing his suit, the Appellate Court permits him to withdraw his appeal with liberty to bring a fresh suit, the decree of the lower Court is wiped out and in effect set aside though nothing else is substituted for it and the institution of a fresh suit, pursuant to the order, is not barred as res judicata.

A decree should be given an effect which is intelligible and it should be presumed to be legally effective for obtaining the relief sought and granted.

Per Phillips, J., contra.—An order of a Court of Appeal allowing a plaintiff appellant to withdraw the appeal with liberty to bring a fresh suit does not operate per se as a reversal of the lower Court's decree, or as wiping it out. The order amounts, in substance, to a striking off of the appeal, the decree of the Trial Court being left unaffected, and a fresh suit on the same cause of action is barred as res judicata. The order cannot be read in the light of what the Court might have intended.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

Where an order of Court is drafted in such a way as to fail to give effect to the Court's intention, it is the duty of the party to apply to have it set corrected. M BALIDE KAMAYYA v. PRAGADA PAPATYA, 21 M. L. T. 82; (1917) M. W. N. 217; (1917) M. W. N. 246 414

— S. 11, O. XXI, Rr. 60 to 63—Claim petition, order on—Res judicata.

An order in a claim case deciding the question of the validity of a wakf is not conclusive as res judicata in a suit between the same parties in which the property in dispute is not that which was the subject of the claim case though both were included in the wakf.

An order in a claim case is conclusive as between the parties only as regards the particular property in dispute. C ASNA BIBI v. JAIGUNNISSA BIBI, 21 C. W. N. 222 887

— S. 11—Execution proceedings—Connected suits, for partition, decrees in—Identity of subject-matter and parties—Execution application, dismissal of, on ground that relief was granted on previous application in connected suit—Subsequent application for division of specific omitted properties—Patent mistake of Court, effect of—Res judicata.

Two suits were filed for partition (Original Suit No. 1 of 1889 and Original Suit No. 1 of 1899) in which the parties were the same, though differently arrayed, and the properties in dispute were identical. The Court decreed in Original Suit No. 1 of 1889 that the properties be divided into equal parts and that the plaintiffs should be put in possession of one of them. Plaintiffs in the said suit made an application for execution of the decree, but it was dismissed on the ground that the properties had already been divided in a prior execution of the decree in the other suit, Original Suit No. 1 of 1889, and that the matter could not be re-opened. It was pointed out that 3 acres and 72 cents were left undivided in the previous execution proceedings, but the Subordinate Judge took no notice of it and his order of dismissal was affirmed on appeal by the High Court. The plaintiffs put in the present application for division of the 3 acres and 72 cents. The records disclosed that the Subordinate Judge made a patent mistake when he said that all the properties including the said 3 and odd acres were divided. It was contended that the application was barred as res judicata:

Held, that the real question in the previous application and in the appeal to the High Court was whether the previous partition was liable to be re-opened at all, and not as to the particular items of property which had or had not been divided and that the present petition was not affected by the rule of res judicata. M PODURU LAKSEMI NARAYANA v. PONNADA PALLAMRAJU, 4 L. W. 101; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 118 354

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

— S. 11—Res judicata—“Allegus contrarius non-audiendus,” applicability of—Widow, alienations by—Reversioners, suit by—Suit, subsequent, by reversioners to redeem mortgage by widow, whether barred—Cause of action.

A claim for possession by way of denunciation of alienations made by a previous holder of land is based on a different cause of action from a claim for redemption.

Therefore, a suit for redemption of a mortgage by the representatives of the mortgagor is not barred, either by the rule of res judicata or by the maxim “Allegus contrarius non audiendus”, simply because the plaintiffs in a previous suit, as reversioners of the mortgagor, denounced alienations made by the latter. P SHAM SINGH v. GAMAN, 172 P. W. R. 1916 447

— S. 11—Res judicata—Compromise decree disallowing interest—Execution—Interest, claim for, legality of 674

— S. 11—Res judicata—Execution proceedings, order at one stage of—Right to question in another stage—Order-sheet, correctness of entries in—Presumption—Burden of proof.

An order made at one stage of execution proceedings cannot be questioned at a later stage, unless the party sought to be bound by such order had no notice of the proceedings.

A first application for the execution of a decree was not made in accordance with law within three years of the passing of the decree. On a second application for execution made within three years of the first, the Court directed a writ of attachment to issue. The order-sheet showed that the order for attachment was made after service of notice upon the judgment-debtor, but the execution case was dismissed for default. On a third application for execution made within three years of the second, the judgment-debtors appeared and contended that the execution was barred:

Held, that so long as the order for attachment passed on the second application for execution stood, the judgment-debtors could not contend that the execution of the decree was barred unless they established that the order was made without notice to them.

Held, also, that in view of the entry of service of notice in the order-sheet the onus lay upon the judgment-debtors to establish that the notice was not served upon them.

Ex parte entries made in the order-sheet of a Court are not conclusive evidence of their correctness, but there is no presumption that the entries are false.

A party, therefore, who contends that they do not correctly state the events that have taken place must start his case. But the position is different where the entry affects a person who is not a party to the proceedings and he questions its correctness. C BINDU RASHINI DASYA v. KESHAB LAL BASU 66

— S. 11—Res judicata—Execution—Sale of khoti lands—Suit by judgment-debtor to recover possession of lands sold on ground of non-transferability, whether barred.

Certain khoti lands belonging to plaintiff were sold in execution of a decree obtained by defendant against plaintiff and were purchased by the former. Plaintiff subsequently sued to recover possession of the lands on the ground that they were occupancy lands and were not transferable under section 2 of the Khoti Settlement Act:

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

Held, that, as the sale in execution decided as between the plaintiff and defendant that the lands sold were not occupancy lands, the plaintiff could not be allowed to re-open that question. B KASHINATH KRISHNA JOSHI v. DHONDSHET BHAWANSHET, 18 Bom. L. R. 786; 40 B. 675 22

— S. 11—Res judicata—Jurisdiction, ouster of, by plea of res judicata—‘Competency of Court’—Decision as to jurisdiction, affirmation of, by common Court of Appeal or Revision, effect of—Rent, suit for—Jurisdiction, finding on, whether res judicata in rent suits for later years—Civil or Revenue Court—Madras Estates Land Act (Mad. I of 1908), ss. 3, (2), 189—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 25.

The doctrine of res judicata does not apply to questions of jurisdiction, in other words, the plea of res judicata to oust or confer jurisdiction is an incompetent plea.

The finding of a Court on an issue joined by the parties that a particular Court or a particular class of Courts has jurisdiction to try a case or a case of a particular nature, is not res judicata in a subsequent suit, whether the decision was given purely as a question of law or on the facts found in the particular case. A Court cannot be compelled to try a case which it has in reality no jurisdiction to try by preventing the parties from proving the facts which show it. The finding cannot comply with the requirements of section 11, Civil Procedure Code, unless it is that of a competent Court, and the competency of that Court to record the finding has to be determined by the facts and considerations put forth in the later suit.

Plaintiffs sued defendants for rent for Fasli 1322 in a Small Cause Court. Defendants pleaded that the suit was cognizable by the Revenue Court, as the land for which rent was claimed was an estate under section 3 (2) of the Estates Land Act. The plaintiffs urged that the plea was res judicata by virtue of the finding of the same Court in a prior suit for rent for Fasli 1321, which the High Court refused to disturb in revision under section 25 of Act IX of 1887:

Held, that neither the finding in the former suit nor the mere refusal of the High Court to interfere with it operated as res judicata.

Per Oldfield, J.—The refusal of the High Court to interfere with the Munsif's decision under section 25, Act IX of 1887, did not supersede that decision or substitute any new decision for it. Although the High Court, as the appellate authority from both Civil and Revenue Courts, might have been a 'competent Court' and its confirming decision might have been res judicata between the parties if the question had been raised in an appeal, the decision relied on by the plaintiffs is useless for that purpose.

Per Krishnan, J.—The jurisdiction of a Court created by a Statute is determined by the Statute itself; it can neither be added to nor determined by any act of the litigant parties; and such jurisdiction cannot be conferred on a Court by any estoppel operating between the parties. The plea of res judicata is really a plea of a species of estoppel, i.e., estoppel by judgment or verdict, and such a plea to oust or confer jurisdiction is an incompetent plea.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE - 1908—contd.

A Court of Appeal or Revision, when it comes to a finding of its own, really finds only what the Trial Court should have found if it was acting correctly and legally, and for purposes of res judicata, that finding can be treated as the correct finding of the first Court and not as a finding of the Appellate or Revisional Court as the Original Court. M SUREN RAO v. PERUMAL REDDY, 5 L. W. 467 906

— S. 11—Res judicata—Litigating under the same title, meaning of—Decree against person as heir of another wrongly described as dead, whether binding upon him when he becomes such heir.

Defendant No. 1 got a decree for khas possession of certain property in a contested suit brought against defendant No. 5 as the son and heir of the plaintiff who was wrongly described as dead. Subsequently the plaintiff, on return home from pilgrimage, instituted a suit against defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 5 for recovering possession of the property on declaration of his title, and got a decree. Defendant No. 1 thereupon preferred an appeal, during the pendency of which the plaintiff having died, defendant No. 5 was substituted in his place as his legal representative:

Held, that the decree obtained by defendant No. 1 against defendant No. 5 in the previous suit was not binding as res judicata upon defendant No. 5 in the subsequent litigation as he was not litigating under the same title in the two cases. C RAMANI MOHAN ROY v. JAGUBANDHU KARMAKAR 881

— S. 11, O. XIV, R. 1—Res judicata—‘Matter’ in s. 11, meaning of—Question of law, decision on, when res judicata—Mixed questions of law and fact, treatment of—Landlord and tenant—Ghattathumulu, levy of, finding as to, whether res judicata in subsequent suit between same parties.

A decision on an abstract question of law is not res judicata.

Where a decision on a point of law, whether it be on the construction of a document or of a Statute or on Common Law or on Customary Law settles a question that arises directly out of the conflicting views as to the rights of the parties, it is res judicata.

Though it is a convenient treatment to say that a particular case is a mixed question of law and fact and that the doctrine of res judicata does not, therefore, apply to it, it must be seen what exactly are the issues involved and decided. The question whether an issue arising in a case is of law or of mixed fact and law, must depend on the way in which the issues are framed, quite apart from the question which is really decided in the case. Any issue which, as framed, contains questions of fact and law must be split up in such a manner that a pure issue of law can be framed on the hypothesis of the finding of fact one way or the other.

A defence or claim based on a question of law is a 'matter' within the meaning of Explanation II to section 11, Civil Procedure Code. A 'matter' must sometimes include an issue of law and where the point of law directly affects the rights in litigation between the parties to the suit, it is a 'matter' within the meaning of the section.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

Plaintiff, a zemindar, sued his tenants to recover a cess known as ghattuthumulu in 1902. The Munsif held that the plaintiff was not entitled by sheer force of custom to a perpetual payment of the cess by the inamdars without any obligation on his part to maintain any of the old irrigation works in the villages concerned. Plaintiff preferred a similar suit against the defendants in 1905 when a similar decision was given. The District Judge, on appeal, reversed the Munsif's decree. In second appeal, the High Court called for findings as to whether the parties and the subject-matter were the same as in the suit of 1902 and, on receipt of findings in the affirmative, pronounced judgment in 1912 stating, 'we accept the finding and set aside the decree':

Held, that the Munsif's judgment of 1902 was res judicata and the decision of the High Court in 1912 that that decision was res judicata was also res judicata. M. BONMEDEVARA VENKATA v. ANDAVOLU VENKATARATNAM, 32 M. L. J. 63 857

— S. 11—Res judicata—Mortgage-decree—Sale of mortgaged property—Execution for balance due after appropriation of sale-proceeds 741

— S. 11—Suit to vacate order in claim proceedings—Res judicata.

Where the object of a suit is to vacate an order passed in claim proceedings, the latter cannot operate as res judicata. M. PANTHASARATHY CHETTY v. YELCHOORI NARAYANA CHETTY, 5 L. W. 161 401

— S. 11, EXPL. IV, O. II, R. 2—Res judicata—Matters which ought to have been made grounds of attack in previous suit—"Intentionally relinquishes a portion of his claim," meaning of—Ignorantia juris haud excusat, applicability of.

A right which a litigant possesses without knowing or ever having known that he possesses it, can hardly be regarded as "a portion of his claim" which can be "intentionally relinquished" within the meaning of Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code.

The word jus used in the maxim "ignorantia juris haud excusat" denotes general law and not a private right.

Where plaintiff sued as one of several joint plaintiffs seeking a declaration of their alleged reversionary rights and not claiming possession, and on the dismissal of that suit, he claimed possession on an alleged exclusive title which would have been inconsistent with the claim preferred by him and his co-plaintiffs in the previous suit and of which he had no knowledge until the decision in the former suit:

Held, that the subsequent claim was not barred under explanation IV of section 1, Civil Procedure Code, as it could not have been brought forward by the plaintiff as a ground of attack in the former suit.

Held, also, that the subsequent suit was not barred under rule 2, Order II.

Quare.—Whether in a suit to recover possession of property a plaintiff is bound to support the claim made by him by bringing forward every title which he has, or claims to have, in respect of such property. P. AISHAN v. MUHAMMAD DIN, 24 P. R. 1916 119

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

— Ss. 20 (c), 21—Jurisdiction—Breach of betrothal contract, suit for damages for—Court, jurisdiction of.

A Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit if the cause of action arose, wholly or in part, within the local limits of its jurisdiction. Therefore, a suit for the breach of a contract of betrothal can be tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the breach took place, even though the defendants reside elsewhere.

A judgment of a Court which had no jurisdiction to try a suit should not be set aside, unless there has been a failure of justice by reason of the suit having been instituted at the wrong place. P. BHAG SINGH v. LABH SINGH, 93 P. R. 1916 114

— S. 20 (c)—Promissory note, assignment of—Place of assignment, institution of suit at—Jurisdiction of Court—"Cause of action wholly or in part," meaning of.

The assignment of a promissory note by the payee is a part of the "cause of action" within the meaning of section 20 (c), Civil Procedure Code, and the assignee can sue on it in the Court having jurisdiction where the assignment took place.

On the principle of stare decisis, the said rule is applicable to India. M. MANEPALLI MANGAMMA v. MANEPALLI SATHIRAJU, 32 M. L. J. 816; 5 L. W. 246 681

— S. 24 484

— S. 24—"Court of Small Causes" interpretation of—Suit of Small Causes Court nature, transfer of, to Court not invested with Small Cause powers—Decision—Appeal.

The expression "a Court of Small Causes" in section 24 (4) of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 includes Courts invested with Small Cause Court Jurisdiction as well as Courts constituted under Act IX of 1867.

Therefore, where a suit of Small Cause Court nature instituted in a Court lawfully empowered to try it as such is transferred by a District Judge under section 24 (4) of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, to a Court not invested with the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes, the latter Court must, for the purposes of the suit, be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes and as such no appeal lies from its decision in such a case A. SURESH v. RAGHUNATH DAS, 15 A. L. J. 69 809

— S. 47 825, 836

— S. 47, O. XXI, R. 2, O. XX, R. 11—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 244—Agreement for stay of execution before decree, whether adjustment of decree—Execution—Agreement, plea of, in bar 836

— S. 47, O. XXI, r. 90—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 166—Execution—Sale, application to set aside—Objections—Limitation.

Where objections in a petition to set aside an execution sale relate not only to material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale but go further and include objections to the whole procedure starting with illegal attachment, the petition is admissible under section 47, Civil Procedure Code, and is not time-barred though filed beyond the 30 days allowed for an application under Order XXI, rule 90, Civil Procedure Code. L B RAMASWAMY CHETTY v. MAUNG TAU 827 — Ss. 47, 115, O. XXI, Rr. 58, 63, O. XLIII—Madras Civil Rules of Practice, rr. 134, 179—Application under r. 179 for payment of moneys standing to credit of different suits—Objection by decree-holder in latter suit—Order upholding objection, nature of—Remedy of party aggrieved—Appeal—Revision.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

C filed a suit on a mortgage against A and obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged property. B, who held a decree against A in another suit, attached the profits of the mortgaged property deposited in Court to the credit of C's suit by a Receiver, and applied under rule 179 of the Civil Rules of Practice, Madras, for the issue of a cheque for a sufficient part of the attached money. C objected claiming a charge on the amount for any balance that might be due to him after sale of the property. C's objection was upheld by Court and B's petition dismissed. B filed a petition in the High Court to revise the said order:

Held, (1) that B's petition should have been for the transfer of moneys to the credit of B's suit;

(2) that the dispute was not covered by section 47, Civil Procedure Code, and the order was not appealable as one passed under section 47, Civil Procedure Code;

(3) that the order should be treated as one falling under Order XXI, rule 58, Civil Procedure Code, on C's claim and was not subject to appeal or revision, whether it was passed under rule 179 of the Civil Rules of Practice in C's suit or under rule 137 of the Civil Rules of Practice in B's suit or under Order XXI, rule 60, in B's suit;

(4) that B's remedy was to proceed by way of a suit under the provisions of Order XXI, rule 63, Civil Procedure Code.

Per Oldfield, J.—The words "proceed as if the attaching decree-holder was the assignee of the judgment-debtor to the extent of the amount due to the latter" in rule 179 of the Madras Civil Rules of Practice are intended merely to make provision for the method by which the attaching creditor is to obtain the benefit of his attachment; it invests him with no legal character and does not expressly or impliedly justify the application of section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the determination of his rights.

Attachment no more creates or transfers a right of ownership in a fund in Court than in any other description of property.

It may not be safe to hold generally that where the remedy by suit is open, interference by way of revision is unjustifiable, but where the Court's order is based on the merits of the case, though in the exercise of a jurisdiction wrongly assumed, and where it is not shown how the party aggrieved will be unfairly prejudiced by being made to resort to a suit, the High Court will refuse to interfere in revision. M PONNURANGAM PILLAI v. LAL KHAN SAHIB 348

— S. 47—Mortgage—Mortgaged property whether can be sold in execution 397

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

— Ss. 47, 73, 115, 2—Rateable distribution applications, order on—Appeal—Revision.

Respondent, judgment-debtor, applied for payment to him of a certain sum of money lying in Court deposit and realised by the sale of his partition decree by the Court. Certain creditors who had applied for rateable distribution of the same objected to the application. The Court decided that the money was not attachable by the decree-holders as their decrees were against the respondent's family property, whereas the money in Court was his separate property. The decree-holders appealed against the said order. The Appellate Court held that no appeal lay and dismissed the appeals. They then preferred appeals and revision petitions separately to the High Court against the order in appeal:

Held, that the order was virtually one under section 47, Civil Procedure Code, and was appealable, and that no revision petition lay.

Per Oldfield, J.—An order obtained by an attaching creditor under section 73, Civil Procedure Code, ordinarily embodies expressly or impliedly three distinct decisions (1) that his application for execution is generally valid; (2) that the fund in Court is available towards satisfying his claim; and (3) that he is entitled to a particular portion of it. When an objection to the order is based on the invalidity of the execution application or the character of the fund in Court, the question is between the judgment-debtor and individual creditors, not the creditors as a body, and the decision on it is really given under section 47, though it may be contained in an order passed ostensibly under section 73, Civil Procedure Code.

Per Krishnan, J.—The order, so far as it affected each decree-holder separately, was an order between him and the judgment-debtor and related to the execution of his decree, as it refused his prayer to pay towards his decree a certain sum of money of his judgment-debtor representing his rateable share in the whole amount, which he claimed was attachable. It is thus an order falling under section 47, Civil Procedure Code, and is clearly appealable.

In so far as an order under section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure can be treated as an order under section 47 between the parties to a suit, an appeal lies at the instance of either party, where such an appeal does not affect orders in favour of third parties such as other decree-holders. SI VENKATAKRISHNA PATTAR v. VENKATAKRISHNA PATTAR, 31 M. L. J. 820; 20 M. L. T. 538; 5 L. W. 354 900

Ss. 47, 102, 115—Small Cause decree—Execution proceedings—Claim by exonerated defendant, allowed by first Court, but dismissed on appeal—Appeal or revision to High Court, whether lies.

A defendant who is exonerated from liability to the plaintiff under a Small Cause decree, does not cease to be a party to the suit unless his name is actually removed.

An enquiry, therefore, into a claim presented by a defendant, thus exonerated, to property attached in execution against a co-defendant, against whom the suit was decreed, is a proceeding under section 47, Civil Procedure Code, and an appeal lies against the order passed therein. There is no further appeal to the High Court under section 102, Civil Procedure Code, against the order of the Appellate Court, nor does a petition lie in revision under section 115, Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as the Appellate Court does not act without jurisdiction in entertaining the appeal. M ABDUL KASIM v. THAMBUSAMI PILLAI, (1917) M. W. N. 93 673

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

— Ss. 48 (1) (a), (b), 11—Mortgage decree—Composite decree for sale of mortgaged property with provision for recovery of balance outstanding from other properties of mortgagor—Execution for balance due after appropriation of sale-proceeds—Limitation—Question of law—Res judicata—'Certain date', meaning of.

A combined decree in a mortgage suit for sale of the mortgaged properties and, if the sale-proceeds are insufficient to satisfy the decree, for recovery of the balance from the other properties of the mortgagor, though irregular, is not illegal.

The proper procedure in such a case is to pass a decree for sale of the mortgaged properties in the first instance, and if the mortgaged properties are found, on sale, insufficient to satisfy the decree, a separate decree or order should then be made for realization of the balance from the person and other properties of the judgment-debtor.

Per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J., and Seshagiri Aiyar, J. (Phillips, J. dissenting.) The starting point of limitation for execution of the portion of the decree relating to the unsatisfied balance under section 48, Civil Procedure Code, is the date when, after the remedy against the mortgaged property has been exhausted, it is ascertained that there is a balance due to be recovered from the defendant and his other properties.

Per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J., and Phillips, J.—Such an application is not covered by clause (b) of section 48, Civil Procedure Code, for the decree does not direct payment on a 'certain date'. For that clause to apply, the date should be fixed in the decree or at least should be ascertainable from its terms. The expression 'certain date' cannot be construed to mean a date which can be made certain, and there is no authority for applying the maxim 'whatever can be made certain is to be treated as certain' to the construction of a Statute of Limitation.

Per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J.—The application however, falls under clause (a) of the section. The date of the decree sought to be executed need not necessarily be the date put down at the time it was drawn up. The words 'sought to be executed' in the clause indicate that the date is to be ascertained with reference to the time when the decree becomes capable of and ripe for execution according to its terms, and not always the date which it bears on its face.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—The essence of the law of limitation is to provide against dilatoriness and negligence in the enforcement of a man's rights. But where the party is unable to seek his remedies, it cannot be said that he has failed to avail himself of the cause of action that has accrued to him.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

Per Phillips, J.—Such an application falls neither under clause (a) nor under clause (b) of section 48, Civil Procedure Code. The Legislature has laid down a period of twelve years as the maximum period within which a decree can be executed (save in the case of fraud) and presumably this period has been fixed to avoid a prolonged harassing of the judgment-debtor, and consequently the section must be construed strictly.

It is open to the decree-holder in the case of such a composite decree, to apply for amendment by omission of the personal decree, in which case, if a personal decree is subsequently given, twelve years' time will run from the date of the latter decree. The words of section 48 should be interpreted as they stand, viz., the date of the decree must be one date alone and from that date twelve years must be calculated.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J. (in the referring order):—The decision on a question of law in one proceeding is not res judicata in any later proceeding except to this extent, namely, that the right which was the object-matter of the former proceeding and was established in favour of one party cannot be questioned in the subsequent proceeding. M AIYASAMIE v. VENKATACHELA MUDALI, 31 M. L. J. 513; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 296; 20 M. L. T. 391; 4 L. W. 507 741

— S. 51, O. XXI, R. 10—Execution of decree—Stranger benefited under compromise filed in suit, position of—Compromise, from what time enforceable—Presumption—Court, duty of—Court-fee to be charged.

Section 51 and Order XXI, rule 10, of the Code of Civil Procedure contemplate that an application for execution can only be made by the holder of a decree.

A decree was passed in the terms of a compromise which granted certain monthly allowances to some of the parties to the suit as well as to 'a stranger', and provided that if its terms were not complied with in favour of the parties to the suit to whom the allowances were granted, they would be entitled to take proper proceedings as regards such non-compliance. Subsequently, these persons, including the stranger, applied to the Court in which the suit had been instituted to recover their monthly allowances from the date of the compromise by execution of the compromise-decree. The Court allowed execution to proceed in favour of each of the applicants for the allowances claimed from the date of the decree, on the finding that they were not entitled to claim the same from the date of the compromise.

Held, (1) that the stranger applicant, who was no party to the suit or the decree, had no right to apply for execution, though he was entitled to bring a separate suit based on the portion of the compromise relating to him;

(2) that, in the absence of anything to the contrary appearing in the compromise, the presumption was that such of the applicants as were parties to the suit, were entitled to claim their allowances from the date of the compromise.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1903—contd.

No Court can sanction an irregularity the effect of which is to perpetrate a fraud on the Government revenue and to deprive the State of the Court-fee that is legitimately its due. O DIL AFZA BEGAM v. DEPUTY COMMISSIONER, BAHRAICH, 3 O. L. J. 570 133

— Ss. 64, 47—Auction-sale, invalidity of—Estoppel, plea of, available to decree-holder, whether enures to auction-purchaser—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115.

A judgment-debtor or any one deriving title from him, who is estopped from questioning the validity of an auction-sale as against the decree-holder, is equally estopped from contesting it as against the auction-purchaser at the execution sale, for the decree-holder has a legal right to bring the property to sale and that right would enure for the benefit of the purchaser so far as the judgment-debtor and his representatives are concerned.

The principle that the auction-purchaser is not the representative of the decree-holder is restricted to cases under section 47, Civil Procedure Code, and does not apply to the plea of estoppel under section 115 of the Evidence Act. M SWAMINATHA VELLALA v. DARMALINGA CHETTIAR, (1617) M. W. N. 88 825

— S. 66, O. XXI, Rr. 98 to 103—Execution sale, purchase at, benami—Resistance to certified purchaser by person deriving title from judgment-debtor—Suit for possession by benamidar purchaser, whether lies.

A certified benami purchaser at an execution sale who has been obstructed in securing possession by a person deriving title from the judgment-debtor cannot maintain an action in ejectment against the latter. There is no distinction between ordinary suits for ejectment and suits by benami purchasers at Court sales.

There is nothing in section 66 of the Civil Procedure Code which confers such a right. That section is designed to protect the person who has obtained a sale-certificate and has acquired possession under it. It has no application to a purchaser who seeks to oust another from possession. M GULLA-PALLI VENKATRAMAYYA v. KOONAPARJU VENKATRAJU, 4 L. W. 609; 31 M. L. J. 577 497

— S. 66—Hindu Law—Joint Hindu family, separated members of, suit between—Applicability of s. 66—Appeal, plea of law, whether can be taken for first time in—Law prohibiting institution of certain suits.

The terms of section 66, Civil Procedure Code, do not apply to the case of a suit brought by one member of a joint Hindu family against another, inasmuch as such members are entitled, by operation of law and not by virtue of any private agreement or understanding, to treat as part of common property an acquisition made out of joint family funds.

But the section applies to a suit between the separated members of a joint Hindu family, irrespective of the fact that when separation took place, certain property belonging to the joint family was not actually divided. O RAMADHIN v. BISHESHER PAYAL, 3 O. L. J. 508 111

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1903—contd.

— S. 70—Rules framed by U. P. Government under section 70, r. 3 78
— S. 73 900

— S. 83—Alien enemy, suit by—Lease granted by alien enemy as agent of non-enemy subject, enforceability of—Contracts with alien enemies, principles affecting, validity of.

The prohibition as regards intercourse between hostile aliens is confined only to commercial dealings and does not render illegal all contracts whatever be their nature. It extends to contracts which tend to increase the enemy's resources and every kind of trading or commercial dealing, but does not prevent an agreement made in enemy territory to pay money there out of funds accruing there.

A lease granted, after the commencement of hostilities, by an alien enemy in British India on behalf of one who is not shown to be an enemy subject, the rent whereof is intended to be used in this country and by persons who are not enemies, is enforceable.

In any event, there is no objection to an action being laid on the lease when it is brought by an agent, who is not an enemy subject.

Enemy subjects resident in British Territory who are permitted to remain are not alien enemies and can contract like subjects, whether such permission is express or implied. The permission should be presumed in the case of aliens who were residing in British Territory before the outbreak of war and who continue to remain after such outbreak, unless they are ordered to remove themselves within a certain time and they do not.

Principles relative to intercourse between the subjects of belligerents after commencement of hostilities discussed. M WETHRIK v. DAVID, 31 M. L. J. 860; (1917) M. W. N. 73; 5 L. W. 275 957

— S. 89, O. XXIII, R. 3, Sch. II—Arbitration without intervention of Court—Award, filing of—Procedure—Arbitration Act (IX of 1899).

Under section 89 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, the provisions of the Second Schedule govern all arbitrations in a suit or otherwise except such arbitrations as are specially excluded. An arbitration between the parties to a suit without an order of the Court is not excluded and, therefore, comes under the provisions which deal with arbitration without the intervention of the Court.

A party applying to a Court for a decree on an award is bound, if the case does not come within the provisions of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899, to apply under the Second Schedule of the Civil Procedure Code. There is no other law in force under which such an application can be made.

Order XXIII, rule 3, of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, only refers to the adjustment of suits wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise and no application can be made to obtain a decree on an award under that Order. B SHAYAKSUA DINSHA DAYAR v. TYAB HAJI AYUB, 18 Bom. L. R. 559; 40 B. 386 140

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

S. 92, object of—Suit for private purposes—Abuse of process of Court—Legal Remembrancer, duty of—Good faith—Permission, when to be granted.

The institution of a suit, under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, for the private purposes of some individual or individuals is an abuse of the process of the Court. The section is intended to enable suits to be brought for the benefit of persons interested in a trust, and is not intended to enable persons to gain private ends by putting forward men of straw to institute suits to put their adversaries or the trust funds to wholly unnecessary and improper costs.

When an application is made to the Legal Remembrancer for permission to bring a suit under section 92, the applicants ought with the utmost good faith to set forth and specify in their petition the reason for and the object of the intended suit, and before granting permission the Legal Remembrancer should satisfy himself that the proposed suit is prima facie bona fide and that the applicants are interested in the trust. A NARAYAN DAS v. KHUNNI LAL 897

S. 92 and Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863), s. 14, scope of—Public Trusts—Suit for removal of trustee of temple—Sanction under latter Act, if necessary—Alienees from trustees, joinder of—Alienations, decision as to nature of, whether necessary in scheme suit—Decree, form of—Public or private temple, question as to—Onus of proof—Decision that temple public, whether binding on alienees.

Sub-clause (2) of section 92, Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), is intended to set at rest the doubts that were entertained in the construction of the old Code of 1882, whether a trustee could be removed and whether persons who had any special interest in the trust of a public charity could institute suits and ask for the reliefs specified in the section without sanction or whether persons interested in charities could bring representative suits under section 30 of the old Code in the ordinary Courts.

Sub-clause (2) of section 92 is added to make it clear that the terms of the section are mandatory and that no suit could be brought for any of the reliefs specified in the section except under the conditions laid down therein; at the same time the special jurisdiction of the District Courts under the Religious Endowments Act was saved, so that a person desirous of suing for the removal of a trustee or for such other specific relief as can be given to him under that Act is at liberty to do so, and is not bound to comply with the provisions of section 92, Civil Procedure Code.

No sanction, therefore, is required under section 14 of the Religious Endowments Act for the institution of a suit to remove a trustee or for any other relief comprised under section 92, Civil Procedure Code.

The joinder of alienees from the trustees of a temple in a suit to remove the latter from office under section 92, Civil Procedure Code, will not entail the dismissal of the whole suit because, in the suit as framed, no relief could be given against the alienees. The jurisdiction of a Court does not depend on its decision whether it can or will allow some of the reliefs asked for.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

In a suit under section 92, Civil Procedure Code, the Courts cannot decide the question whether alienations by the trustee sought to be removed are binding on the institution and give appropriate reliefs against the alienees.

A decree, however, declaring the temple, whose trustee it is sought to remove, to be a public one is binding on the alienees, who will not be permitted to agitate that question in future proceedings where the binding nature of the alienations on the institution may be in question. The decree should make it clear that this declaration is binding on them also.

The onus of proving that a temple is a public one, in respect of which the reliefs are claimable under section 92, Civil Procedure Code, is on the plaintiffs. The fact that a predecessor of the trustee defendant made a statement that it was a public temple is not enough to shift the burden on to the defendant.

Where a temple is proved to be an ancient one with hereditary offices and emoluments fixed for services therein and the utsavams and ubayams are performed by public subscriptions and oaths are taken there under the Oaths Act and the public have a right to worship the temple deity, the temple must be regarded as a public one. M SUBRAMANIA Aiyar v. VENKATACHALA VADEYAR, (1916) 2 M. W. N 351; 4 L. W. 444 688

S. 92—Suit against minor—Guardian not named, effect of—Bombay Court of Wards Act (Bom. Act I of 1905), ss. 31, 32, applicability of.

A suit under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, properly instituted in relation to a public charitable or religious trust against a Government ward is not one directly affecting, at all events, the property of the ward and, therefore, is not bad on the ground that the statutory notice provided for by section 31 of the Bombay Court of Wards Act has not been given, nor is it bad under section 32 on the ground that the Court of Wards was not named as guardian from the commencement of the suit.

Where an omission to name the guardian of a ward in no way affects the merits of the case, it should be treated as a mere defect or irregularity in procedure. B AMIN SAHEB v. MASLEUDIN, 18 Bom. L. R. 563; 40 B. 541 186

S. 99 964

S. 99—Misjoinder of parties—Second appeal, whether competent.

A second appeal is not competent on the ground of misjoinder of parties if it has not affected the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. P SHAH NAWAZ v. SHAH NAWAZ, 118 P. L. R. 1916 197

S. 100 666

S. 100—Appeal, second—Decision on issue by what law parties governed, whether decision on 'usage having the force of law'.

A decision on an issue in a suit that the parties are governed by one system of law and not by another, is not a decision on a 'usage having the force of law' within the meaning of section 100 (a), Civil Procedure Code, which the High Court can interfere with in second appeal.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

The expression 'usage having the force of law' in the section means an usage set up in derogation of the ordinary law, and the decision which can be taken up in second appeal under clause (a) of the section is not only on the existence of the usage but also on its having the force of law. M MAHAMAD MEERAN BIBI v. MAHAMAD ROWTHER, (1917) M. W. N. 98 879

— S. 102 673
 — S. 102—Rent, suit for—Appeal, second, whether lies 980

— S. 105 844

— S. 107 414

— S. 109—Appeal to Privy Council—Final order passed in appeal—Order rejecting application for restoration of appeal dismissed for default—Decree.

An order of a High Court rejecting an application for restoration of an appeal dismissed for default is not appealable to His Majesty in Council, inasmuch as it is not a decree or final order passed in appeal nor an order passed in the exercise of the original civil jurisdiction of the High Court. A BISMILLAH BEGAN v. HIRA LAL 832

— S. 110—Appeal to Privy Council—Claim for legacy under Rs. 10,000—Interest decreed, addition of, for purposes of appeal—Decision affecting future claims of other legatees, whether within clause (2) of the section.

Where the subject-matter of a claim is less than Rs. 10,000, there is no right of appeal to the Privy Council merely by reason of the decree amount exceeding the said sum at the date of application for leave to appeal by the addition of subsequent interest allowed by the decree.

Where, in a claim based on a legacy under a Will, the value whereof is below Rs. 10,000, a decision is given as to the source from which the legacy is payable, the aggrieved party has no right of appeal to the Privy Council under section 110 (2), Civil Procedure Code, on the ground that the decision would affect, though not conclude, future claims by other legatees which may exceed that amount.

The second clause of the section refers to a decree involving a larger claim, i.e., there must be something in the decree which affects the larger subject-matter. In effect, the smaller decree must have the effect of estopping either by the rule of res judicata or otherwise a party from claiming rights under a larger claim. M CHINNAM RAJAMANNARU v. LINGAMALLU RADHAKRISHNIAH, 32 M. L. J. 400 502

— S. 110—Appeal to Privy Council—Subject-matter of suit, value of—Suit for injunction and declaration—Fiscal valuation—Real value, if can be shown.

In the Bombay Presidency it is open to a plaintiff to sue in a second class Subordinate Judge's Court for a declaration and injunction, even though the immoveable property referred to or affected by the injunction exceeds the pecuniary limit of that Judge, i. e., Rs. 5,000;

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

Therefore, a plaintiff by suing for a declaration and injunction in a second class Subordinate Judge's Court makes neither directly nor indirectly any sort of representation to the defendant as to the real or market value of the property to be affected, as distinguished from the fiscal value which, as the law allows him to do, he places upon the relief which he is seeking. B MOHANLAL NAGJI v. BAI KASHI, 18 Bom. L. R. 469; 40 B. 477 371

— S. 113, O. XLVI, R. 1—Reference to High Court, when competent.

Section 113, Civil Procedure Code, should be read in conjunction with Order XLVI, rule 1, and only those cases should be referred to the High Court under the section which are not open to further appeal. P NIAZ ALI v. MUHAMMAD RAMZAN, 130 P. R. 1916 227

— S. 115 900, 872, 673, 348

— S. 115—Government of India Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V, C. 61), s. 107—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 25—High Court, power of, to interfere in revision or in superintendence—Jurisdiction—Discretion of lower Court, when to be interfered with.

Under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code, a High Court can only interfere if the question be one of jurisdiction. A High Court's powers under the Charter Act are ordinarily exercised only in cases where jurisdiction has been exceeded or a Judge has ignorantly or perversely refused to exercise or made only a colourable pretence at exercising a jurisdiction vested in him by law, and this power should be exercised only when irreparable injury would be caused to one of the litigants if matters were not set right.

Where a discretion is vested in a Court, it is not open to interference by the High Court unless it has been exercised ignorantly or perversely. PAT GANGA PRASAD v. NANDU RAM, 20 C. W. N. 1080; 1 P. L. J. 465 129

— S. 115—Jurisdiction—Small Cause suit tried on Original Side—Defendant not objecting in first instance—Revision—High Court, power of, to interfere.

Where a Small Cause suit is tried on the Original Side, the parties not raising any question of jurisdiction in the Trial Court, and an appeal from the decree of the latter Court is heard and decided by the District Judge, it is open to the High Court to look into the merits of the case and either to interfere or not to interfere with the decree of the lower Courts as the justice of the case may require. PAT JADUNANDAN SAHAY v. JUNG BAHADUR SAHAY, 1 P. L. W. 232 991

— S. 115—Material irregularity—Revision 400

— S. 115—Revision 131

— S. 115—Revision—Error of law.

An error of law committed by the lower Court does not furnish any ground for interference in revision under section 115, Civil Procedure Code. O DIWAN SINGH v. BALDEO SINGH, 3 O. L. J. 459 19

— S. 144—Restitution, principles governing—Property, sale of, not covered by proclamation—Sale certificate, cancellation of, in appeal—Application for restitution—Auction-purchaser, rights of.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

On an application for restitution under section 144, Civil Procedure Code, the Courts should not only restore parties to the positions which they held before the erroneous order was made, but should also make restitution from party to party, as nearly as possible, simultaneous.

Where a sale of property not covered by the proclamation is afterwards set aside, the judgment-debtor can claim restitution only on payment to the purchaser of the purchase-money. The purchaser cannot be forced to seek his remedy against the decree-holder or required to vacate, till restitution is made of the sum paid by him for the property erroneously offered for sale.

Courts acting under section 144, Civil Procedure Code, will only re-place parties in the position which they actually occupied at the time of the order reversed and will not consider all the various subsequent positions voluntarily taken up by the parties as the remote consequences of that order. PAT KEDAR NATH v. JAI BERHMA 863

— S. 149—Plaint insufficiently stamped—Court-fee, deficiency in, made up after expiry of period of limitation—Suit, date of institution of—Limitation. The plaint in a suit was filed within limitation but was insufficiently stamped. The deficiency in the Court-fee was made up after the expiry of the period of limitation, but was accepted by the Court:

Held, that the suit must, under section 149 of the Civil Procedure Code, be taken to have been instituted on the date on which the plaint was originally filed. PAT GAYA LOAN OFFICE, LTD. v. AWADH BEHARI LAL, I. P. L. J. 420 507 — Ss. 151, 152—Amendment of judgment and decree—Error in judgment.

When by some oversight or otherwise a Judge in writing his judgment commits a mistake which injuriously affects either party to the case he can, and should, exercise his power under sections 151 and 152 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, to correct the mistake and amend the decree accordingly. P JHANDA MAL v. SARDAR BEGAM, 169 P. W. R. 1916 378

— S. 151—Decree, amendment of—Power of Court.

In a partition suit a preliminary decree was made and a commissioner was appointed to make an allotment. While the case was before the commissioner one K, whose name was not in the decree, applied for amendment of the decree so as to include his name in it and also asked for the allotment of a separate share to him. The Court made the amendment and ordered the case to proceed de novo:

Held, that the Court had no power under section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code to make such order. Under that section it had power only to amend the decree so as to bring it into conformity with the pleadings and should have acted accordingly. PAT NANOO THAKUR v. KULDIP THAKUR 352

— S. 151—Order passed without notice—Remedy of party aggrieved.

Every litigant is entitled to be heard before an order is made to his prejudice, and the proper remedy of a party against whom an order has been made without hearing him is to apply to the same authority for a re-hearing.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

Apart from the provisions of section 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure, a Court has an inherent power to rectify any inadvertent mistakes made by it and when a party can have a mistake corrected by the Court which made the mistake, he should adopt that course rather than resort to the Appellate Court. M RAGHUNADA DOSS v. MAHARAJA OF JEYPORE, 31 M. L. J. 319; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 203; 4 L. W. 240 385 — Ss. 151, 152—Reductio ad absurdum—Defective judgment and decree.

Section 152 of the Civil Procedure Code is wide enough to enable a Judge to avoid a reductio ad absurdum. P SARDAR BEGAM v. JHANDA MAL, 129 P. R. 1916 382

— O. I, R. 3 976

— O. I, R. 8 977

— O. I, R. 8—Ejectment, suit for—Necessary parties—Co-owner, maintainability of suit by.

Where a number of persons hold a joint interest in a cause of action and where the extent of the interest of each is an unspecified interest, it is open to any one of those persons to maintain on behalf of the whole body of interested persons a suit to establish the cause of action set forth and in the event of success of that one person all persons interested will enjoy the fruits of the litigation, unless there is some specific law forbidding such a procedure.

Therefore, one of several co-owners can, on behalf of the whole body, maintain a suit for the recovery of the land against trespassers. PAT RAGHUBAJ SINGH v. BISHEN TEWARY 384

— O. II, Rr. 1, 2 (1) 642

— O. II, R. 2—Cause of action, meaning of—Suit for possession, after suit for declaration dismissed, whether barred.

A cause of action consists of the circumstances and facts which are alleged by the plaintiff to exist and which, if proved, will entitle him to the relief or some part of the relief prayed for, and is to be sought for within the four corners of the plaint.

A plaintiff whose suit for a declaration of title to land has been dismissed on the ground that he was not in possession at the time of filing the suit, is not debarred by Order II, rule 2 (3), Civil Procedure Code, from bringing a subsequent suit on the same title for recovery of possession of the same land. L B MAUNG BA THAUNG v. MA SHIN MIN 15

— O. II, R. 2—"Intentionally relinquishes a portion of his claim," meaning of.

A right which a litigant possesses without knowing or ever having known that he possess it, can hardly be regarded as "a portion of his claim" which can be "intentionally relinquished" within the meaning of Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code. P AISHAN v. MUHAMMAD DIN, 94 P. R. 1916 119

— O. II, R. 17—Plaint, amendment of, grounds for—Alteration necessitated by recent decision—Limitation—Discretion of Court.

The sanctioning of leave to amend a plaint is a matter within the discretion of the Court.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

In certain circumstances, where no substantial change is made in the plaint averments and the claim was not barred on the day when the plaint was filed, leave to amend should not necessarily be refused on the ground that the plaint as amended would be barred by limitation.

Ordinarily, however, delay in asking for leave to amend and the resulting argument from limitation are not to be disregarded, when the Court is called on to exercise its discretion in the matter. Each case must be dealt with on its merits.

Leave to amend a plaint on the ground that an alteration is necessitated in consequence of a recent judicial decision and that there was a pardonable mistake regarding it in the plaint, will not be granted after a long delay and where the decision has effected no change in the existing law. M. GATIGANTI SUBBARAYULU v. ARUMILLI SRANYA 914

O. III, R. 4—Pleader, delegation of duty by, to another—Appearance by Pleader not duly appointed, effect of—Appeal, proper presentation of, what constitutes—Power of attorney, name of Pleader omitted from body of, effect of—Objection taken at late stage, effect of.

The provisions of Order III, rule 4, of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, are clear and imperative, and the Courts have no power to relax them.

A Pleader whose name is omitted from the body of a vakalatnamah is not a duly appointed Pleader, and an appeal presented by him is not properly presented, even though the omission might be only due to an oversight.

The fact that no objection is taken till a very late stage, does not validate the appointment of a Pleader which was not duly made.

An act or appearance by any Pleader, not duly appointed by the person for whom he is to act, is no act or appearance in law.

Where a Pleader, expressly empowered to employ a colleague to act for or with him, makes such appointment, he must strictly comply with the provisions of Order III, rule 4 (1), Civil Procedure Code, unless exempted by clause (3) of the same rule. N. DHANOOALAL v. RAJI, 12 N. L. R. 189 103

O. VII, R. 7—Further relief 161

O. VII, R. 14, 18, O. XIII, r. 1—Documentary evidence, permission to file at late stage, application for—Court, duty of.

Where a party to a suit applies on the first hearing for permission to file certain documentary evidence at a subsequent stage, the Court ought to decide the application at once. O. PIYARI v. JAGANNATH KURAR, 3 O. L. J. 538; 19 O. C. 314 84

O. VII, R. 18 84

O. VIII, R. 6 (1)—Set-off, legal and equitable—Landlord and tenant—Rent, suit for—Liability to defendant on accounts—'Ascertained sum', meaning of—Set-off, right to, in claims arising in respect of same matter.

The expression 'ascertained sum' in Order VIII, rule 6 (1), Civil Procedure Code, means an amount which is beyond challenge and beyond dispute, concluded and conclusive.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

A set-off can be claimed on the basis of a contractual relation between the parties.

In the absence of such a contract, there is a right to an equitable set-off when the set-off arises out of the same transaction out of which the claim springs. If it is found that the set-off is foreign to the original claim, the set-off will not be allowed.

In a claim for rent due by a tenant under a lease, it is not open to the latter to plead a set-off of amounts due to him by the plaintiff on accounts in respect of payments made on the plaintiff's behalf in respect of other properties which are not the subject-matter of the suit. The defendant can, however, claim a set-off in respect of payments made on the plaintiff's behalf qua the property which he holds under him. PAT DILTOR KOER v. HARKHOOSINGH 367

O. IX, R. 9 229

O. IX, R. 13—Decree, ex parte, application to set aside—Minor—Guardian ad litem, father, whether proper—Hindu Law—Joint family.

A father is fully competent to be the guardian ad litem of his minor son and to protect his interests.

A mortgagee sued his mortgagors, members of a joint Hindu family one of whom was a minor, on the mortgage. The minor's father, who was himself a defendant, was appointed guardian ad litem of his son, but he failed to put in any defence and an ex parte decree was passed against the minor. The latter applied to set aside the decree:

Held, that the minor was fully represented in the case by his father, and that the decree was, therefore, binding on him. PAT INDRA DEO NARAYAN SINGH v. MATUKDHARI SINGH 389

O. IX, R. 13—Order rejecting application to set aside ex parte decree, whether appealable—Appeal.

An appeal lies from an order rejecting an application to set aside an ex parte decree made under Order IX, rule 13, Civil Procedure Code, for default of the applicant to appear in support of the application. C. PAKARI PARAMANIK v. SARAT SUNDARI DEBYA 835

O. XIII, R. 1 84

O. XIV, R. 1 857

O. XX—Decree—Court, cognizance by, of events happening after institution of suit or appeal—Jurisdiction.

In exceptional cases Courts can take cognizance of events since the institution of a suit or appeal where the adoption of such a course tends to shorten litigation and best subserve the ends of justice.

A plaintiff, therefore, is entitled to a decree for khas possession of a land on declaration of title in a suit brought for the purpose, where it is found that the defendant was holding the land under an ijara lease subsisting at the time of the institution of the suit but which expired before the date of the decree. C. CHINTA HARARAN DAS v. RADHA CHARAN PODDAR 962

O. XX, R. 4, 5 304

O. XX, R. 5, 6, 7, S. 11—Decree, construction of, principles applicable to—Order contingent on certain information called for, whether final—Review of order, dismissal of, effect of—Appeal, dismissal of, as premature—Enunciation of principles obiter—

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

Appeal, subsequent, against final order—Res judicata —Compromise decree disallowing interest—Execution —Interest, claim for, legality of.

Where a compromise decree for mesne profits, which reserved the determination of the amount in execution, expressly disallowed interest thereon, an order passed in execution on the application of the decree-holder allowing interest, on the ground that under the Code of Civil Procedure the term 'mesne profits' includes interest on mesne profits, is illegal.

Where a decree is ambiguous or not clear it should be read in the light of the judgment, as the decree states only the final relief granted or other determination of the suit and does not afford any information as to the matters which were in issue or have been decided.

An order passed by a Court contingent on certain information which the parties are directed to furnish is not a final decision, and the dismissal of an appeal against such order on the ground of its being premature, is not an affirmance of that order so as to operate as res judicata in a subsequent appeal against the final order passed after the information was furnished in respect of the matters in controversy. The decision in the earlier appeal is only an affirmance of the order directing the parties to furnish further information, and the discussion of some principles of law by the Appellate Court which were intended to help the parties and the Court below to arrive at the final order and to save the necessity of a further appeal, is only to be understood as obiter dicta and is not res judicata in an appeal against the final order. When no appeal lies, the Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to affirm, reverse or modify the decree or order of the Court below.

The rejection of an application for review of a preliminary order does not give it any finality or make it res judicata in a subsequent proceeding.

Per Walsh, J.—No Court should construe a decree without looking at the issues and ascertaining what was really determined with the help of the judgment. Similarly, no satisfactory conclusion can be arrived at as to what was determined by an appellate decree without looking at the grounds raised in appeal and in some way or another ascertaining what issues were actually discussed and decided. An executing Court cannot go behind a decree in the sense that it cannot alter, modify or amend its terms. But it can go behind it to ascertain what the decree operates upon.

A compromise decree was passed in favour of S for possession of certain property and mesne profits, the amount of the latter being left to be determined in execution. The decree specifically disallowed interest on the mesne profits. The mesne profits having been determined, S applied for execution and claimed interest on the amount. The Subordinate Judge considered that, though the decree was silent as to interest, the same was legally awardable and he concluded his order by saying that S. was entitled to recover from T and others "Rs. 7,460-4-0 mesne profits up to date of plaint. This set of defendants are liable to pay the amount of mesne profits with interest and proportionate costs." No final orders were, however, passed but the decree-holders were required to state what amounts were due by each party of judgment-debtors and what sum was realized from T's share and what amount T was liable to pay. The defendants applied for a review of this order, which was rejected. Without furnishing the information and awaiting final decision, the defendants appealed to the High Court against the said order which was dismissed as premature. The High Court proceeded, however, to discuss some principles of law. The final order having been passed allowing interest on the mesne profits, the defendants again appealed against it. It was contended for the plaintiffs that the dismissal of the earlier appeal operated as res judicata:

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

Held, (1) that the first order of the lower Court was not a final order;

(2) that the rejection of the application for its review did not place it on a better footing;

(3) that the dismissal of the appeal preferred against that order did not operate as res judicata in the present appeal;

(3) that it was competent to the High Court to construe the decree unaffected by its earlier order in appeal and to regard the matter as now open to appeal for the first time;

(4) that, on the construction of the decree, interest could not be awarded on the mesne profits. A TAR
BEGAN v. SARVI BEGAN, 14 A. L. J. 1171 674

— O. XX, R. 6, 7 671

— O. XX, R. 11 836

— O. XX, R. 12—Mesne profits, ascertainment of, application for—Decree directing ascertainment in execution, legality of—Dismissal for default, effect of—Subsequent application barred—Decree for possession and mesne profits, form of.

Under the terms of Order XX, rule 12, Civil Procedure Code, mesne profits are assessed by an enquiry in the suit itself and not in execution, and the mesne profits so assessed form part of the money recoverable under the decree.

A Court, therefore, acts in excess of its powers under the new Civil Procedure Code of 1908, if it passes a decree directing that mesne profits should be ascertained in execution.

The dismissal for default of an application for ascertainment of mesne profits bars subsequent applications even though the decree in terms directed its ascertainment in execution.

Per Richardson, J.—The proper way or ways of drawing up a decree for mesne profits are indicated in Mulla's Edition of the Civil Procedure Code in the notes to rule 12, Order XX. C GANGA PRASAD DUTT v. HEMANGINI DEBI 997

— O. XX, R. 14—Pre-emption—Decree based on compromise, compliance with.

Plaintiff in a pre-emption suit was given a decree in terms of a compromise, according to which he was inter alia to separate off and give to defendant a certain area of land within one month from the date of the decree. Before the expiration of that period plaintiff ceased to cultivate the area mentioned in the decree, with the intention to let the defendant have possession of the land;

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

Held, (1) that inasmuch as the decree was based upon a compromise, it was not a decree in a pre-emption suit to which the provisions of rule 14, Order XX, of the Civil Procedure Code could apply;

(2) that even if it was a decree in a pre-emption suit, plaintiff had substantially complied with its terms. P JAM HAMID ALI v. KAIM DIN 806

— O. XXI, R. 2, O. XX, R. 11, S. 47—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 244—Agreement for stay of execution before decree, whether adjustment of decree—Execution—Agreement, plea of, in bar.

Per Curiam.—Order XXI, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code, which speaks of a decree being adjusted in whole or in part, assumes the existence of the decree at the time of adjustment. It has no application to cases in which the alleged adjustment was by virtue of an agreement entered into between the parties before the passing of the decree.

Per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J. (Seshagiri Aiyar, J., dubitante and Phillips, J., dissenting).—An agreement between the parties to a suit made before the passing of a decree, by which the decree is not to be executed for a certain time, is a matter to be enquired into and decided by the executing Court within the meaning of section 47, Civil Procedure Code.

Authorities reviewed.

Per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J.—The Court which can postpone execution of a decree under Order XX, rule 11, Civil Procedure Code, is the Court which passed the decree and the section does not define the powers of the executing Court. The power of the executing Court to grant postponement is derived from the language of section 47, which is very wide.

The omission of the words 'stay of execution' in section 47 of the Code of 1908, which were embodied in section 244 of the Code of 1882, was not intended to exclude questions relating to stay of execution from the powers of the executing Court. The language of section 47 is comprehensive enough to include such questions. Under this section, questions relating to execution are not necessarily confined to those arising subsequent to the decree.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—In matters of procedure, the principle of consistency and adherence to established practice will conduce to justice more than a strict adherence to logic. On a question of substantive law, the existence of a course of decisions may not be as effective an answer as in the case of procedural law. In the latter class of cases, litigants should be enabled to rely on a settled practice.

Per Phillips, J.—It is very doubtful whether a question relating to the stay of execution of a decree can be said to be a question relating to its execution. The omission of the words 'stay of execution' in section 47, of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908, must have been deliberate and consequently importance should be attached to it.

An agreement for stay of execution made before the passing of a decree which was not brought to the notice of the Court when it passed the decree, is not a question which can be gone into by the executing Court for it impeaches the validity of the decree. The decree must be executed as it stands and the executing Court cannot go behind its terms. A further ground for excluding such an agreement from consideration is that the conduct of the parties amounts to an abuse of process of the Court, for they have collusively induced the Court to pass a decree which, according to their agreement, was never to have effect. M CHIDAMBARAM CHETTIAR v. KRISHNA VATHIYAR, 21 M. L. T. 24; 5 L. W. 132; (1917) M. W. N. 44; 32 M. L. J. 13 836

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

— O. XXI, R. 10

133

— O. XXI, R. 17, SUB-R. (1)—Execution, application for, rejected as not in accordance with law, whether saves limitation 916

— O. XXI, RR. 54 (g), 89, 90, 91, 92, S. 99—Execution of decree—Sale, order for, without prior attachment—Irregularity—Appeal, sale held during pendency of—Loss or prejudice to party, absence of—Appellate Court, duty of.

Attachment is only a step to be taken by the executing Court in bringing to sale the property of a judgment-debtor. If such a step is omitted and sale of the property is ordered, the sale can be set aside only if it has resulted in substantial loss to the party and once the sale is confirmed, the objection as to invalidity of attachment can no longer be urged. The absence of attachment is a mere irregularity, which does not affect the jurisdiction of the executing Court to sell immoveable property.

Section 99, Civil Procedure Code, shows the principle to be adopted in appeals. An Appellate Court should not reverse the order of the first Court on a point which is of no importance and which does not affect the merits of the case.

Where a sale has actually taken place and been confirmed during the pendency of an appeal against an order for sale without a subsisting attachment, the Appellate Court should not set aside the sale where no loss or prejudice is shown to have resulted thereby to a party. M SIVAKOLUNDU PILLAI v. GANAPATHY IYER, (1917) M. W. N. 89 964

— O. XXI, R. 58

348

— O. XXI, RR. 58 to 62—Operative order—Investigation, however little, sufficient—Second appeal Findings of mixed law and fact.

The findings that there was no proper investigation of a claim preferred under Order XXI, rule 58, Civil Procedure Code, and that, therefore, no operative order could be passed against the claimant under Order XXI, rule 61, Civil Procedure Code, are findings of mixed law and fact, which can be questioned in second appeal.

An order passed under Order XXI, rules 60 to 63, Civil Procedure Code, is not an operative order only if there has been no investigation whatever under Order XXI, rule 58, Civil Procedure Code, but it is an operative order if there has been some investigation, whether perfunctory or satisfactory. For example, an order passed to the effect that a deed produced by a claimant or objector is not genuine, although it may be open to criticism on the ground that it is based upon the mere examination of the deed, without a fair opportunity of proving it having been given to the claimant, is nevertheless an operative order. O BAL MAKAND v. MAQSUD ALI, 3 O. L. J. 519; 19 O. C. 357 92

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

— O. XXI, Rr. 60, 61, 62, 63 887

— O. XXI, Rr. 62, 63, S. 70—Rules framed under s. 70, r. 3—Execution—Objections to sale of property—Court, power of, to amend application—Date of application—Construction of document—Decree, interpretation of—Res judicata—Burden of proof—Costs—Mortgagor and mortgagee.

Objections were taken to the sale of proprietary rights in certain plots in execution of a decree, on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no proprietary title to the plots but simply a right to collect and appropriate their revenue. The Court took action under rule 3 framed by the U. P. Government under section 70, Civil Procedure Code, and notified in and referred to in paragraph 181 of the Oudh Civil Digest, Volume I. It considered the objections, without waiting for the result of a petition taking certain objections to the sale that appeared to have in the meantime been sent by one of the objectors to the Local Government, and found that the objections were sound and amended the decree-holder's application so as to confine it to the sale of the right to receive revenue and to omit all reference to full proprietary title:

Notification No. ¹⁸⁸⁷₁₋₃₈, dated 7th October 1911,

Held, (1) that the Court was right in not waiting for the result of the petition sent to the Local Government;

(2) that the Court had authority to amend the application under the provisions of the above-mentioned rule 3;

(3) that the date of the application must be taken to be the one on which it had been originally presented to the Court, and not the one on which the Court subsequently amended it, inasmuch as there was no new application, but simply an application made for the whole was reduced to an application for a part.

A mortgagee got a decree on the basis of a mortgage-deed which described the mortgaged property as a "rent-free jagir" in a village. It appeared that the mortgagor held a settlement decree in his favour, which did not clearly describe his rights in the village. But the entries in the revenue papers showed that these rights were confined to the assignment of land revenue, so that he obtained no land in the village except the right to collect a portion of the land revenue from the zemindars:

Held, that the mortgagor must be taken to have mortgaged all the rights that he possessed under the settlement decree, and that, therefore, the right to receive land revenue, although not mentioned in the deed as having been mortgaged, was affected by the decree obtained by the mortgagee.

The subsequent mortgagees got a decree for sale of the mortgaged property against the mortgagor alone. Later on the prior mortgagee obtained a similar decree against both the mortgagor and the subsequent mortgagee. In execution of the former decree the prior mortgagee applied under section 282, Civil Procedure Code, (1882), [— Order XXI, rule 62, Civil Procedure Code (1908)] for a declaration of his mortgage encumbrance. The Court dismissed the application, holding that the prior mortgage and the decree obtained on its basis did not relate to the same property as was covered by the subsequent mortgage:

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

Held, that the above finding that the prior and the subsequent mortgages did not include one and the same property, did not operate as res judicata between the prior and the subsequent mortgagees, inasmuch as the point was not one that could be decided under the provisions of section 282, Civil Procedure Code (1882) [— Order XXI, rule 62, Civil Procedure Code (1908)]; and that, therefore, the prior mortgagee was under no disability under the provisions of section 283, Civil Procedure Code, (1882), [= Order XXI, rule 63, Civil Procedure Code, (1908)].

The burden of proving that a purchase of the subsequent mortgagee's rights under a decree obtained by him against the mortgagor alone, was made prior to a later decree obtained by the prior mortgagee against both the mortgagor and the subsequent mortgagees, lies on the purchaser asserting that he is not bound by the latter decree.

An objector who impugns the decree-holder's title to the whole property cannot, in case his objections are disallowed, avoid payment of full costs incurred by the decree-holder, on the ground that he claimed only half the property. O SARFARAZ HUSAIN v. AMAR CHAND PAL, 3 O. L. J. 529 78

— O. XXI, R. 63 78, 348

— O. XXI, R. 63—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 102, 110—Suit, regular, to set aside attachment—Burden of proof—Possession, proof of—Order—Appeal.

The initial burden of proof in a regular suit under Order XXI, rule 63, Civil Procedure Code, lies on the person who fails to get the attachment removed. On proving possession, however, the burden is shifted on to the person out of possession under section 110 of the Evidence Act and the finding that he has failed to discharge it is not open to appeal. L B MAUNG PO HNIN v. MA HNYEN 767

— O. XXI, R. 66, S. 115—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 287—Government of India Act, 1915, (5 & 6 Geo. V, C. 61), s. 107—Execution—Sale proclamation—Value of property to be sold, ascertainment of—Court, duty of—High Court, interference by—Jurisdiction—Administrative act.

Order XXI, rule 66, of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, differs from section 287 of the Code of 1882, in that it requires a Court to draw up a proclamation of sale, after notice to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor.

The action of a Court in settling the terms of a proclamation under Order XXI, rule 66, is a judicial act.

It is the duty of a Court in preparing a proclamation of sale to state as fairly and accurately as possible in the proclamation the value of the property. It is absurd to enter in a proclamation two greatly varying estimates of the value of the property.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

Obiter dictum.—The jurisdiction of a High Court to interfere under section 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915, extends not only to judicial but also to administrative acts of the lower Courts. PAT RAGHUNATH SINGH v. HAZARI SAHU, 1 P. L. W. 111; 2 P. L. J. 130 872

— O. XXI, R. 66, S. 2—Proclamation of sale—Order fixing upset price—Decree—Appeal 897

— O. XXI, R. 71, applicability of—Insolvent's estate, sale of, by Receiver—Purchaser failing to deposit one-fourth of purchase-money, liability of—Proceeding, meaning of 830

— O. XXI, R. 79 666

— O. XXI, R. 89 964

— O. XXI, R. 89, object of—Auction-sale, application to set aside, by judgment-debtor after transferring property, if maintainable—Transferee of property, right of, to apply to set aside sale.

A judgment-debtor who has transferred his interest in the property to a third person after the Court-sale has still a right to make an application to have the sale set aside under Order XXI, rule 89, of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, being in the eye of the law the person owning the property.

The object of rule 89 of Order XXI of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, is not merely or not specifically to preserve the immoveable property in the hands of the judgment-debtor, but to ensure, so far as may be possible, that immoveable property shall not at Court-sales be sold at inadequate prices.

Per Batchelor, J.—The change brought about by rule 89 of Order XXI of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, may be understood as embodying the desire of the Legislature to make it clear that a purchaser acquiring title before the auction-sale is competent to apply under this provision of the law. B PANDURANG LAXMAN UPHADE v. GOVINDA DADA UPHADE, 18 Bom. L. R. 571; 40 B. 557 211

— O. XXI, R. 90 964, 827

— O. XXI, R. 90—Sale without notice to judgment-debtor, validity of—Auction-purchaser, extent of protection to, under irregular sale—Notice, absence of—Burden of proof.

A Court auction-sale held without notice to the judgment-debtor, whose interests are to be directly affected by the sale, is vitiated by such a grave and material irregularity that it is liable to be set aside on that sole ground, unless it is proved that the judgment-debtor had knowledge of the execution proceedings or wilfully kept himself in the background or there are other valid defences to his claim.

A bona fide auction-purchaser is protected as against an irregular sale where the decree in execution of which the sale is held, was passed by a Court having jurisdiction, though the decree was vitiated by illegality or was afterwards set aside. But irregularity in the conduct of the sale itself which vitiated it can be urged against the Court auction-purchaser also in proper proceedings by way of application or of suit within the time prescribed by law.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

Where a sale is sought to be set aside for want of notice to the judgment-debtor and that the same was not in fact issued through Court, it is for the Court auction-purchaser to prove that the judgment-debtor was otherwise aware of the sale and to set up appropriate defences. M TANGUTURI JAGANNADHAM v. SESHAGIRI RAO, 20 M. L. T. 479 387

— O. XXI, Rr. 91, 92 964

— O. XXI, R. 93 763

— O. XXI, R. 93—Auction sale—Return of purchase-money when allowed.

Under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, it is only when an execution sale has been set aside that the purchase-money can be returned to the purchaser. A NANNU LAL v. BHAGWAN DAS, 14 A. L. J. 1216 9

— O. XXI, Rr. 98 to 103 Execution sale, purchase at, benami—Resistance to certified purchaser by person deriving title from judgment-debtor—Suit for possession by benami purchaser, whether lies 497

— O. XXI, Rr. 99 to 103 497

— O. XXII, R. 3—Suit for ejectment and arrears of rent—Death of co-plaintiff—Legal representative, failure to bring, on record—Abatement of suit.

Two brothers, B and N, who were not members of a joint Hindu family, sued for ejectment of defendant from a house and for arrears of rent due from him. During the pendency of the suit B died and his legal representatives were not brought on record within the statutory period.

Held, that inasmuch as the suit could proceed in the absence of B's legal representatives, it abated only in respect of his share, and not in respect of the share of N. P NIRANJAN NATH v. AFZAL HUSSAIN 777

— O. XXII, R. 10 998

— O. XXII, R. 11 414

— O. XXIII, R. 1 414, 940

— O. XXIII, R. 1—Appeal, withdrawal of, without express permission to bring fresh suit—Subsequent suit, whether barred.

In order to satisfy the provisions of Order XXIII, rule 1, the permission given by the Court to bring a fresh suit must be in express terms and cannot be implied.

Plaintiff sued for a declaration that a mortgage executed by the widow of a collateral of his should not affect his reversionary rights. His suit was dismissed, and he appealed to the Divisional Judge. During the pendency of the appeal the widow died, and the plaintiff prayed to be allowed to withdraw the appeal, as he was now entitled to sue for possession. The Divisional Judge granted his request and dismissed the appeal. He brought a suit for possession based on the same allegations as the previous suit.

Held, that the suit was barred by Order XXIII, rule 1, as express permission to bring a fresh suit had not been given in the order dismissing plaintiff's appeal and the claim was based on the same cause of action as in the prior suit. P JITA SINGH v. HARI SINGH, 27 P. R. 1916 128

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

O. XXIII, Rr. 1, 3, difference between proceedings under—Withdrawal of suit on compromise—Duty of Court.

The difference between proceedings under rules 1 and 3, of Order XXIII, of the Civil Procedure Code, lies in the fact that under rule 1 a Court is dealing with the plaintiff only and under rule 3 a Court is dealing with the plaintiff and defendant together, and is considering whether there has been any agreement made between the plaintiff and defendant for an adjustment of the claim. As soon as a suit is instituted and a summons served upon the defendant, the defendant is entitled to claim any costs that he incurs by entering appearance. If by any agreement outside the Court a concession is made by the plaintiff on the one hand with regard to his claim and a concession made by the defendant on the other with regard to his costs, then there are present all the elements of a compromise. PAT MUHAMMAD ABDUL GHANI v. BALMOKUND SUKUL 421

O. XXIII, R. 1 (2), S. 115—Court, whether can order withdrawal of suit without permission to institute fresh suit—Revision.

Where the plaintiff makes an application to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit and the Court considers that such liberty ought not to be granted, the proper course is simply to dismiss the application and then proceed with the trial of the suit. In such a case it is not competent to the Court to make an order allowing the application for withdrawal without permission to institute a fresh suit on the same cause of action. C SURADHANI DEBYA v. CHANDRA NATH, 20 C. W. N. 1011 131

O. XXIII, R. 1 (3) 253

O. XXIII, R. 3 140, 421

O. XXIII, R. 3.

Order XXIII, rule 3, of the Civil Procedure Code read with section 83 of the Probate and Administration Act, do not say that it is competent to the Courts to allow the parties to divide the testator's property without proving the Will. PAT JANAK-BATI THAKURAIN v. GAJANAND THAKUR, 20 C. W. N. 986; 1 P. L. J. 377; 1 P. L. W. 41 12

O. XXIV, R. 3—Deposit and tender, distinction between 444

O. XXXII, R. 7—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 462—Compromise for minor by Court of Wards—Leave of Court, whether necessary—Court of Wards Act (IX B. C. of 1879), ss. 18, 57.

Order XXXII, rule 7, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, or section 462, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, does not apply when a suit is compromised by the Court of Wards on behalf of a minor ward. Such compromise is binding without leave of the Civil Court. C NAKYMO DEWANI v. JERANG DEWAN 971

O. XXXIII, R. 5 (e)—Application for leave to sue as pauper—Discretion of Court—"Agreement" and "proposed suit," meaning of.

An application for leave to sue as a pauper is within the discretion of the Court to grant or reject.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

An agreement, in order to bar an application under Order XXXIII, rule 5 (e), must be one with reference to the subject-matter of the proposed suit, and the word "proposed" indicates that it must have reference to the suit which has been instituted and that the agreement referred to must be a champertous agreement. A MANSA PURI v. HARRHAGAT PURI 172

O. XXXIV, R. 1—Joint Hindu family—Manager, whether represents other members 833

O. XXXIV, Rr. 2, 3—Mortgage—Decree for foreclosure—Computation of time for payment—Appellate decree, effect of.

In a decree for foreclosure the period of time allowed to the mortgagor to redeem runs from the date of the decree of the Court of first instance, unless in an appeal from the decree the Appellate Court enlarges the time.

The Trial Court cannot in the exercise of its discretion under Order XXXIV, rule 3 (2), accept payment after the final decree has been passed. C ALI MANUD v. MIARISH 779

O. XXXIV, R. 5 (2) 255

O. XXXIV, Rr. 11, 12 343

O. XXXIV, R. 14, S. 47—Compromise decree—Mortgage—Execution—Mortgaged property, whether can be sold in execution.

In a suit for recovery of money due on a hand-note a compromise was effected in the following terms:—

"Till the realization of the entire decretal amount with costs and interest, the defendants have given as security the under-mentioned property for which a separate registered bond has been executed. In default of one instalment the petitioner shall be bound to pay the entire amount of the decree with costs and interest, etc. The plaintiffs shall be entitled to realize their dues on all the instalments, firstly, from property given in security and afterwards... from the petitioners' persons and other properties."

A decree was passed in terms of the compromise:

Held, that by virtue of Order XXXIV, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code, the property given in security could not be sold in execution of the consent decree.

PAT GOKUL NATH JHA v. PRAN MAL MARWARI, 1 P. L. W. 69 397

O. XXXVIII, Rr. 5 (b), 6 (b)—Surety, withdrawal of—Order permitting withdrawal without notice to parties, effect of—Rescission of order, legality of—Continuing guarantor, position of.

A person who stands surety for a judgment-debtor under Order XXXVIII, rule 5 (b), Code of Civil Procedure, cannot withdraw from the guarantee at any time by simply giving notice of his intention not to be a surety any longer.

An order of a Court discharging a surety without notice to the parties can be rescinded on the application of any of the parties.

Obiter.—Where the guarantee is a continuing one the surety may withdraw as to any future transaction, but where a surety has given a guarantee to cover a definite case he cannot simply by a notice to the creditor withdraw the guarantee so as to nullify altogether the effect of the security. C ABDUL BARY v. BELAYAT ALI 919

O. XXXVIII, R. 6 (b) 919

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

— O. XLI, R. 1, O. XLII, R. 1—Appeal, right of—Acceptance of benefit under order appealed against—Estoppel—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115.
When a party has unconditionally accepted and taken advantage of an order, which directs the payment to him of a certain sum of money by the other party, he is precluded from appealing against that order.

A party who has adopted an order of the Court and acted under it cannot, after he has enjoyed a benefit under the order, contend that it is valid for one purpose and invalid for another.

A suit was dismissed for want of prosecution and on the application of the plaintiff was ordered to be restored to its file, on the plaintiff's paying to the defendants a sum of money towards their costs of and incidental to the application. The defendants accepted the said sum paid by the plaintiff without recording their intention to appeal against the order:

Held, that the defendants, after having accepted the money without protest, were precluded from appealing against the order. C BANKU CHANDRA BOSE v. MARIUM BEGAM, 21 C. W. N. 232 804

— O. XLI, R. 5, applicability of—Execution—Application to stay execution, maintainability of.

The provisions of Order XLI, rule 5, are applicable mutatis mutandis to applications on the execution side.

An application made by an appellant to an appeal pending on the execution side in the High Court, asking for an order to restrain the Court of first instance from taking any steps in execution pending the disposal of the appeal, is entertainable under Order XLI, rule 5, of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908. A BALBIR PRASAD v. KARAN SINGH 752

— O. XLI, R. 23—Preliminary point—Decision on one issue—Remand.

In a case four issues were framed and the first Court decided an issue and finally disposed of the suit. The lower Appellate Court remanded the suit under Order XLI, rule 23:

Held, that the decision was on a preliminary point within the meaning of Order XLI, rule 23, and the suit was properly remanded. A KANTA v. PARBHU DAYAL, 15 A. L. J. 30 383

— O. XLI, R. 23—Remand, order of—Preliminary point 844

— O. XLI, R. 25—High Court, power of, to remit case for trial of fresh issue.

Even if it be competent to the High Court in second appeal to remit a case for re-hearing on an issue not raised in the pleadings or even suggested in the Courts below, it ought only to be done in exceptional cases for good cause shown and on payment of all costs thrown away. P C RAM CHANDRA BHANJ DEO v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 20 C. W. N. 1245; 20 M. L. T. 235; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 175; 4 L. W. 251; 14 A. L. J. 1009; 18 Bom. L. R. 838; 24 C. L. J. 296; 31 M. L. J. 745; 43 C. 1104 223

— O. XLI, R. 27 (b), interpretation of—Appeal—Evidence, additional, when may be admitted—Court, discretion of.

Rule 27 (b) of Order XLI of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, does not mean that in order to enable the

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

Appellate Court to pronounce judgment in favour of a particular party additional evidence should be admitted in appeal; it means only that where it is impossible to pronounce judgment at all on the evidence, the Court may call for a document. PAT KALIKA DUTT MANDAR v. TULSI MANDAR, 1 P. L. J. 435 1008

— O. XLI, R. 31—Judgment of Appellate Court, contents of—Evidence, appreciation of.

In writing a judgment a Court should not quote the judgment of some other Court nor refer to the opinion of that other Court as its own, but ought to give its own reasons for its finding and to set out in its judgment its appreciation of the evidence which it is bound to consider. O JAGAN NATH v. BINDESHWARI PRASAD, 3 O. L. J. 620 435

— O. XLI, R. 33—Appellate Court, power of, to pass decree against co-defendant against whom no appeal has been preferred.

Under rule 33 of Order XLI of the Civil Procedure Code an Appellate Court has power, in an appeal from a decree passed against one or more co-defendants, to pass a decree against any or all of them. PAT SURAJNARAIN SINGH v. SUGRA 842

— O. XLII, R. 1 804

— O. XLIII 348

— O. XLIII—Appeal against order refusing documentary evidence, whether lies.

Obiter dictum.—Order XLIII, Civil Procedure Code, does not contemplate the filing of any appeal against an order refusing or accepting documentary evidence which has been tendered. O PIYARI v. JAGANNATH KUAR, 3 O. L. J. 538; 19 O. C. 314 84

— O. XLIII, R. 1 (w), O. XLVII, R. 7, O. IX, R. 9—Execution application, dismissal of, for default—Restoration—Review of restoration order and its cancellation—Subsequent review of order for dismissal for default, whether lies.

An application for execution of a decree having been dismissed for default, it was, on the application of the decree-holder under Order IX, rule 9, Civil Procedure Code, restored in Execution Petition No. 36 of 1913. In Execution Petition No. 39 of 1913 the judgment-debtors applied for a review of the restoration order on the ground that it was passed without notice to them. The Court granted the review and set aside the order of restoration. The decree-holder then applied in Execution Petition No. 52 of 1913 for review of the original order dismissing the execution petition for default, which was granted:

Held, that Execution Petition No. 52 of 1913 was not in effect for a review of the order in Execution Petition No. 39 of 1913, whose scope could not be enlarged by implication so as to affect the order of dismissal of the original execution petition, which was liable to be reviewed independently. M KALI SHETTATHI v. SHAMA RAO, 5 L. W. 124; 21 M. L. T. 257 229

O. XLVI, R. 1 227

— O. XLVII, R. 4—Review—Production of new document—Proof, necessity of.

A party applying for review of judgment on the ground of discovery of a document not produced at the trial is required, under rule 4 of Order XLVII, to furnish strict proof of the non-availability of the document at the time of the trial or to satisfy the Court that its non-production was not due to any lack of diligence on his part. A KARIYA MAHTO KURMI v. RAM SARUP 399

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—contd.

— O. XLVII, R. 7 229

— SCH. II—Arbitration, reference to, scope of —Right of arbitrators to rely on custom—Award decreeing allowances on reduction, validity of 271

— SCH. II—Arbitration and award—Award, filing of 140

— SCH. II, PARA. 3, S. 105, O. XII, R. 23—Arbitration and award—Award made within time fixed by Court but filed beyond it, validity of—Decision on merits, supersession of award, whether affects—Remand, order of—Preliminary point.

The acceptance or supersession of an award affects the decision on the merits of the case.

There is nothing in the rules in Schedule II of the Civil Procedure Code on arbitration to show that an award would be invalid if not filed on or before the time fixed for the filing of it in Court. All that is required by rule 3 of Schedule II is that the Court must fix a time for the making of the award and an award would be valid if made within the time fixed, though not filed in Court on the date fixed for submitting the award to Court.

A case was referred to arbitration and 19th December was fixed for submitting the award to the Court. On that date the award was not filed, and the Court superseded the reference, and proceeded to hear the case on the merits. The arbitrator signed the award at 7 P. M. on the same day and filed it in Court on 21st December. The Court, nevertheless, decided the case on the evidence. On appeal, the District Judge set aside the decree of the first Court and remanded the case under Order XLI, rule 23, to be tried in accordance with the award:

Held, (1) that the order of supersession of the award was one affecting the merits of the case within the meaning of section 105 of the Civil Procedure Code;

(2) that inasmuch as no particular hour was fixed by the Court for making the award, it must be taken to have been made within the time fixed by the Court, notwithstanding that it was made after the rising of the Court;

(3) that the action of the Court in superseding the award amounted to a decision on a preliminary point within the meaning of rule 23 of Order XLI of the Civil Procedure Code and the order of remand by the District Judge was, therefore, correctly made. PAT RADHA KANTA MISSEER v. JALADHAR JHA 844

— SCH. II, PARA. 15—Arbitration—Award—Arbitrators, authority of—Evidence, insufficiency of, whether ground for refusing to enforce award.

Unless otherwise restricted by the order of reference, arbitrators are the final judges of matters of fact and so long as they act within the authority conferred on them, with fairness, the parties are bound by their decision and it is not for a Court to say that in its opinion the evidence was not sufficient to establish the conclusion at which the arbitrators arrived. The mere fact that the Judge thought that the arbitrators had not given sufficient weight to the provisions of section 110, Evidence Act, is no ground for refusing to enforce an award.

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE—1908—concl'd.

In order to make out a case for impeaching an award on the ground that witnesses were not examined by the arbitrators, there must be evidence to show that witnesses were distinctly tendered to them. L B MA SEIN MYA v. SWAMI 807

COMMERCIAL INTERCOURSE WITH ENEMIES
ORDINANCE 644

COMPANIES ACT (VI of 1882), S. 213 250

COMPANIES ACT (VII of 1913), S. 38—Rectification of register—Appeal, conditions precedent to—Purchaser of shares at Court sale, rights of—Transfer of shares—Articles of association—Discretion of Directors—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s 100, O. XXI, r. 79.

The proviso to section 38 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, should not be confined to the last clause, but must be read as a general reservation imposed on all the clauses of the section.

The conditions precedent to the existence of a right of appeal under section 38 are that the lower Court should have directed an issue to be tried in which some question of law was raised, and that that Court should have come to a decision on such issue.

An appeal can lie from the decision of an issue directed to be tried on the grounds mentioned in section 100, Civil Procedure Code.

The purchaser of certain shares of a limited Company at a Court sale in execution of a decree against the share-holder is not entitled as of right to have the shares transferred by the Company to his name. The position of a purchaser at a Court sale is neither better nor worse than that of a private purchaser.

Per Batchelor, J.—Whether the sale is made by a private individual or by a Court, it is clear that the thing sold and transferred from the seller to the buyer is merely the property in the shares plus a limited, not an absolute, right to have the transfer registered. The Court never has to sell the absolute right of forcing the Directors to register the purchaser's name.

Per Shah, J.—It does not follow from the provisions of Order XXI, rule 79, Civil Procedure Code, that the Directors are compellable to accept the purchaser as the transferee for otherwise the Company would have the benefit of the shares to itself. B MANILAL BRIJLAL SHAH v. GORDON SPINNING AND MANUFACTURING Co., LTD. 18 Bom. L. R. 982; 41 B. 76 666

— S. 171—Jurisdiction—Suit, maintainability of.

Where, after a Bank had been ordered by a Court to be wound-up, a person sued both the voluntary and the official liquidators of the Bank for recovery of his pay for his employment by the voluntary liquidators for the period prior to the winding up order:

Held, that section 171 of the Companies Act applied to the case and that the suit could not be entertained.

COMPANIES ACT—concl'd.

without the leave of the Court conducting the liquidation proceedings. O JIWAN LAL v. RADHA NATH DASS, 3 O. L. J. 641 427 — Ss. 171, 225—Suit against company after order of winding-up—Permission—Appellate Court, power of—Suit for declaration of non-liability—Jurisdiction.

An Appellate Court does not ordinarily interfere with the discretion of a Court in the matter of granting leave to continue an action against a company which is being wound up, but where the order of the lower Court is wholly wrong it will not be sustained.

Persons alleged to be contributories of a company which is being wound up cannot, after the order of winding up, be allowed to have recourse to an action for the purpose of having an adjudication upon their liability to pay calls on their shares. Such a matter is peculiarly within the jurisdiction of the Court conducting the liquidation and cannot be decided by any other Court.

Semble.—An order granting permission to proceed with an action against a company, after the winding-up order has been made, does not amount to a permission to institute the suit. P ANRITSAR NATIONAL BANKING CO., LTD. v. MOHAN LAL, 13 P. R. 1917; 29 P. L. R. 1917 701

— S. 225 791

CONSIDERATION, non-receipt of, plea as to—Bond, recital in, as to receipt of consideration, whether evidence of such receipt.

Ordinarily where a plaintiff sues for the recovery of money due on a bond and proves the execution of that bond, the onus lies on the executant to establish that he executed the bond without receipt of the consideration money.

The recital in a bond as to receipt of the consideration money is admissible in evidence to prove such receipt. O LACHMAN PRASAD v. HARDEO BAKHSH, 3 O. L. J. 473 31

— receipt of—Registration, admission at time of—Presumption—Burden of proof 874

CONSTRUCTION OF DOCUMENT—Ambiguity 870

— Charge or mortgage—Redemption 166

— Conditional sale—Option to repurchase—Mortgage—Test.

The test for determining whether a document is a mortgage or a sale is, whether the relation of creditor and debtor subsists between the parties after execution of the document. If it does, the document is a mortgage. L B MA SHWE U v. MAUNG PO LU, 9 BUR. L. T. 177 91 — Intention of parties—Deed fifty years old, interpretation of.

In interpreting a document the intention of the parties must be gathered from the document or from the language of the document viewed in the light of the surrounding circumstances.

A Court after a lapse of thirty years ought to require cogent evidence to induce it to hold that an instrument is not what it purports to be. A KALPU RAI v. BENI MADHO SAHU 835

— Kabuliya 847

CONSTRUCTION OF DOCUMENT—cont'd.

— Mortgage-deed, interpretation of—Interest, covenant to pay, on default of payment of instalment 442

— Sale or mortgage—Question of fact or of law 297

— Trust, deed of—Property divided into three lots — Limitation as to one, whether applicable to others

— Intention—Addition of words, whether permissible.

In construing a deed of trust, whereby certain property belonging jointly to three brothers is divided into three lots and one lot is allotted to each of the brothers and a limitation is provided as to the share of the first deceased brother but not as to the others, the limitation regarding each scheduled share should be read alike and if such a reading necessitates the addition of some words to the deed, it is permissible. B PRANJIVANDAS KALIDAS v. SHAMKOREBAI, 18 BOM. L. R. 516 263 — Vested interest, transfer of—Will and gift, deeds of, executed simultaneously—Statement in Will as to revocability of gift, effect of—Estoppel.

Where a document, executed on account of natural love and affection and registered as a non-testamentary document relating to immoveable property, stated that, as the executant was "giving" the property to the person named therein to be enjoyed by the latter as owner after the death of the former and his widow, he agreed not to transfer the property by gift, sale, or mortgage, or encumber or hypothecate it:

Held, that the document transferred a vested interest by gift and was not a devise that could be revoked.

Where a deed of gift and a deed of Will are executed simultaneously, the fact that the executant states in the latter deed that he shall have the power to revoke the former on the occurrence of a certain specified contingency, does not detract from the former deed operating as a deed of gift.

Obiter dictum.—Where in consideration of A's withdrawing all claims to properties transferred to B, A is given some property under a deed executed in his favour, B is estopped from questioning the validity of the deed. O DIP NARAIN SINGH v. HARGOBIND SINGH, 3 O. L. J. 525 69

CONTRACT—Contract C. I. F. D./A.—Vendor and purchaser—Shipment of goods—Outbreak of hostilities between Governments of shipper and consignee while goods and shipping documents in transitu—King's Proclamation forbidding commercial intercourse with enemies, effect of—Commercial Intercourse with Enemies Ordinance (VI of 1914)—Tender of bill of lading—Liability of buyer—Vessel seized as prize—Acceptance of bill of exchange after announcement of hostilities—Non-payment at maturity—Subsequent delivery of goods—Liability of buyer to pay bill with interest—Seller negotiating with shipper for passing goods on to buyer—Priority of contract—Effect of War Proclamation—Negotiable Instruments Act (XXI of 1881), ss. 32 43—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 56

Ordinarily C. I. F. contracts, under which one of the parties is bound to supply the other with shipping documents, before the latter can be compelled to repay him his outlay, are regulated by the provisions of sections 32 and 43 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. The consideration for the acceptance of the bill of exchange under C. I. F. contracts D/A, i. e., acceptance against documents, is, according to law and mercantile usage, no more than the tender of good and valid shipping documents to the buyer, and if the buyer accepts the seller's bill, the matter is finally concluded between the seller and the buyer. Any risk thereafter is the buyer's and he is not entitled to refuse payment on maturity, and if he does, he is liable for overdue interest after that date.

CONTRACT—contd.

Exceptions have, however, been grafted on this rule by war conditions.

A contract of affreightment entered into in time of peace between the subjects of countries which go to war, while part at least of that contract is executory, is thereby immediately and finally avoided.

Where the bill of exchange and shipping documents are presented to and are accepted by the buyer before the commencement of hostilities, the buyer is bound to pay for them at maturity even though the goods were for a time detained in transitu as prize if they are subsequently delivered to him and, if he refuses to pay on maturity, he is liable for overdue interest after that date.

Dubitante.—Where the buyer accepts a bill of lading, but neither the goods nor the shipping documents are delivered to the buyer owing to outbreak of war between the Governments of the parties, it must be held, following Arnhold Karberg & Co. v. Blythe, Green, Jourdain & Co., Theodor Schneider & Co. v. Burgett and Neusam, (1915) 2 K. B. 379; 84 L. J. K. B. 1673, that, inasmuch as the bill of lading had become void before it was tendered to the buyer, there was at the time a failure of consideration for the acceptance of the bill and the buyer was not bound to pay at maturity.

Semble.—If the matter were res integra, it is difficult to see how, if the shipping documents came into the possession of the buyer as good contracts before the declaration of hostilities, the fact that war broke almost immediately afterwards, would absolve the buyer from his obligation to pay the bill which he had accepted against the shipping documents.

Contracts entered into between subjects of countries which were at peace when the contracts were made, are not necessarily abrogated by the breaking out of hostilities between those countries. The general rule appears to be that unless the contracts are of a very special kind, the effect of war is not to avoid them totally but merely to suspend the remedies of one or other of the parties to them. Such contracts would doubtless remain in abeyance during the continuance of hostilities but upon their ceasing no good reason can be shown why the rights still enforceable should not be duly enforced, the Governments of the parties to such contracts having now re-established all peaceful and normal relations.

There are, however, exceptions to be engrafted upon these general rules. If the contract is of a kind requiring continuous performance of mutual duties by the parties to it and such duties cannot be so mutually performed during the continuance of a war, and further suspension of such mutual rights and obligations for an indefinite period going much beyond merely placing the contract in abeyance, the result in the eye of the law would be that the original contract is void, inasmuch as taking it up upon cessation of hostilities would be something more than renewing it, would, in fact, be substituting for it an entirely new contract. A like rule would doubtless be applied to the case of partnerships between subjects of belligerent States.

CONTRACT—contd.

Looking to the spirit of the King's Proclamation and the Commercial Intercourse with Enemies Ordinance, VI of 1914, the words 'forbidding commercial intercourse with enemy subjects' would mean purchasing goods, wares or merchandise of and from the enemy's country. It does not prohibit every kind of intercourse between the King's subjects and the enemy. The scheme of the Proclamation, especially the preamble, rests on the old Common Law and is intended to prohibit actual trading or the institution and maintenance of commercial relations with the enemy on and after the date of the existence of a state of war. It is doubtful, however, whether merely taking over a suspended contract, the completion of which, if it ever could be completed, could not by any means augment the enemy's wealth or increase his efficiency, would be any contravention of the spirit of the Proclamation. It would be otherwise if, in order to effect the completion of such a contract, it were necessary to do anything to the detriment or diminution of His Britannic Majesty's resources and the corresponding increase of those of the enemy.

In cases where the seller gets the shipping documents from the shipper and the insurance company and has completed all that he is bound to do under a C. I. F. contract by forwarding to the buyer valid and legal bills of lading and a valid and legal insurance, he has done all that he is required to do under the contract and is entitled to claim immediate payment, though he cannot have the documents owing to intervening conditions of space and time which prevent their instant transference to the buyer. The contract between the shipper, the insurance company and the buyer cannot be treated in the first instance, as has been done by the Courts in England, as a contract between the shipper, the insurance company and the seller, so that in the event of its becoming void before the goods reach the seller, the resultant loss would fall on the seller and not on the buyer.

Defendants, a Bombay firm, ordered of the plaintiffs, merchants in Glasgow, certain goods to be delivered at Madras C. I. F. terms. The plaintiffs shipped the goods from a German port through two German ships, Barenfels and Kybfels on 15th July 1914 and 25th July 1914 respectively. The bill of exchange for the first shipment and other shipping documents were presented to defendants and accepted by them on 31st July 1914. The bill of exchange for the second shipment was presented to and accepted by defendants on 10th November 1914. Both bills were not honoured at maturity. War having broken out between England and Germany the Barenfels was seized as a prize during voyage, but was allowed later to continue her voyage and the goods were delivered to defendants at Madras on payment of the first bill. The cargo by the Kybfels was never delivered to defendants. Plaintiffs sued for interest on the first bill from the date of maturity to date of payment and for the amount due on the second bill with interest:

CONTRACT—concl'd.

Held, (1) that defendants were liable on the first bill for the overdue interest after maturity;

(2) that as the bill of lading for the second shipment had become a void contract before it was tendered to the defendants, defendants were not liable for the amount of the bill or interest. B. MARSHALL & Co. v. NAGINCHAND PHULCHAND, 18 Bom. L. R. 915 644

— — — — — Mercantile custom, plea of, in variation of contract, whether sustainable 271
— — — — —, verbal—Burden of proof.

A plaintiff suing upon a contract must establish it conclusively to the satisfaction of the Court. FAT BALDHARI SINGH v. BASAR ALI KALAL 967

CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), S. 1 241, 271

— — — — — Ss. 7 (2), 3, 119—Proposal - Counter-proposal - Silence, when amounts to acceptance - Binding contract, when made - Order for goods - Consignment of larger quantity - Refusal to take delivery - Damages.

Where acceptance of a proposal is not absolute and unqualified, but is subject to reservations, it amounts to a counter-proposal.

Under sections 3 and 7 (2) of the Contract Act read together, a mere failure to reply to a counter-proposal would not per se amount to an acceptance of it.

Quære.—Whether the omission to reply to a counter-proposal which conveyed an intimation that silence would be regarded as an acceptance of it, would amount to an acceptance.

The consignment of a larger quantity of goods than that ordered will not entitle the person ordering to refuse to take delivery of the consignment altogether, when the goods ordered can be easily separated from the quantity consigned.

Defendant wrote to plaintiff on 17th October 1909 to send 15 or 20 bags of areca nuts "at once." Plaintiff replied on 28th October 1909 that he would send the goods "within 15 or 20 days." On 1st December 1909 plaintiff, without waiting for a reply, sent 25 bags of areca nuts, which the defendant refused to accept. In a suit for damages for breach of contract:

Held, that under section 119 of the Contract Act, defendant was not justified in refusing to take delivery as the separation of 5 bags from the main consignment was not attended with risk or trouble.

Held, also, that the plaintiff's letter dated 20th October 1909 was in effect a counter-proposal, the defendant's omission to reply to it did not amount to its acceptance and there was no binding contract between the parties. M. PERALA KRISHNAYYAR CHETTIAR v. PADMANATHAN CHETTIAR, 5 L. W. 149; (1917) M. W. N. 91 792

CONTRACT ACT—cont'd.

— — — — — S. 45—Co-contractees—Suit by one co-contractee for his share of the obligation, maintainability of.

As a general rule all co-contractees ought to be joined as plaintiffs, but a suit by one co-contractee to enforce his share of the obligation would not be bad if the others are joined as defendants and if there is good reason for not joining them as plaintiffs. C. BHOSAI v. AMINUDDI, 21 C. W. N. 371 847

— — — — — S. 55 776

— — — — — S. 56 644

— — — — — S. 56 (2) 761

— — — — — Ss. 62, 63 693

— — — — — S. 65—Contract, void, when becomes.

In India a contract becomes void when its performance becomes impossible. S. SANDAY PATRICK & Co. v. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO., 10 S. L. R. 100 285

— — — — — S. 69 664

— — — — — Ss. 73, 74—Contract, breach of—Remedy of party wronged—Non-reservation of right to damages, effect of—Deposit, forfeiture of, effect of, on claim for damages.

In cases of breach of contract, parties have their right to damages under section 73 of the Indian Contract Act, and unless they expressly contract out of that right, under section 74, they are entitled to such compensation as flows from the breach.

The forfeiture of a deposit for failure to perform a contract is not affected by section 74 of the Act, though in estimating the damages, the amount forfeited may be taken into account and may go towards mitigating the claim. M. SUBRAMANIAM CHETTIAR v. ARJUNA PERUMAL 377 — — — — — Ss. 73, 74—Damages for breach of contract—Travelling expenses—Remoteness.

Travelling expenses of the seller to the place where a breach of contract occurs, to have the goods re-sold under section 107 of the Contract Act, are too remote and cannot be recovered as damages under section 73 of the Contract Act. S. KARACHI STEAM ROLLER FLOUR MILLS v. INDO-CONTINENTAL AGENCY, 10 S. L. R. 118 7

— — — — — S. 74 377

— — — — — S. 74—Compound interest, stipulation for—Penalty—Compensation in lieu of penalty, award of.

The addition of the words "or if the contract contains any other stipulation by way of penalty" to section 74 of the Contract Act by the Indian Contract (Amendment) Act of 1899 has considerably enlarged the scope of that section and has the effect of getting rid of all subtle technicalities on the application of the equitable principle regulating the duty of the Court to relieve against penalties.

In contracts stipulating for payment of compound interest in default of payment of interest, there are generally two contracts, one primary and the other subsidiary, and wherever the intention of the parties appears to be that the object of the subsidiary stipulation is to enforce or secure the performance of the primary contract, that subsidiary stipulation will be regarded as a penalty.

CONTRACT ACT—contd.

A provision for payment of interest on interest overdue may be a penalty within the meaning of section 74 of the Contract Act. And it makes no difference in principle whether the interest payable on default is a higher rate of interest or the same rate of interest.

Where the parties stipulated for payment of compound interest at 18 per cent. per annum in default of payment of interest each month, the rate on loans secured by an equitable mortgage of properties being also the same:

Held, that the provision for compound interest was penal and should be relieved against.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—There may be cases where enhanced interest is secured in contemplation of a possible loss or damage; in such cases it would not be penal; but where the object of the stipulation is to secure punctual payment the provision would ordinarily be regarded as penal. M VENKATARAMIAH PILLAI v. SURAMANIA PILLAI 799 — Ss. 76, 178—Certificates of shares, whether 'goods' or 'documents of title' to goods.

Certificates of shares are neither 'goods' nor 'documents of title' to goods within the meaning of section 178 of the Contract Act.

The definition of 'goods' in section 76 of the Contract Act should not be extended to the term as used in section 178 C LALIT MOHUN NUNDY v. HARIDAS MUKHERJEE, 24 C. L. J. 335 707 — Ss. 79, 82, 83, 84—Contract for sale of goods on C. I. F. terms, passing of property to buyer under.

Where goods are sold on C. I. F. terms, the property in them passes to the buyer upon their shipment by the seller, and any subsequent damage to them must be borne by the former. S KARACHI STEAM ROLLER FLOUR MILLS v. INDO-CONTINENTAL AGENCY, 10 S. L. R. 118 7

— Ss. 82, 83, 84, 107 7

— Ss. 108, 178, scope of—Estoppel—Holding out—Bona fide purchaser for value.

Sections 108 and 178 of the Contract Act are enacted for the protection of bona fide purchasers and pledgees and are grounded upon principles of estoppel.

If the true owner of property puts another in ostensible possession of it and holds him out to the world as being fully capable of disposing of and conferring a good title to it, and such a person does dispose of it, the true owner has no good ground of complaint against the bona fide purchaser for value. B TEHLILRAM GIRDHARIDAS v. LONGIN D'MELLO, 18 Bom. L. R. 587 231

— Ss. 118, 1—Contract for sale of goods—Variation in contract—Goods not according to sample—Rescission for breach—Mercantile custom, plea of, in variation of contract, whether sustainable—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92 proviso 5—Arbitration, reference to, scope of—Right of arbitrators to rely on custom—Award decreeing allowance on reduction, legality of—'Delivery,' physical and constructive—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1903), Sch. II.

In a suit to recover goods contracted to be sold, a mercantile custom contradicting the written contract, which will have the effect of entitling the vendor to require the purchaser to accept that which was not in accordance with the description stipulated for, cannot be pleaded.

CONTRACT ACT—contd.

Evidence as to custom is, however, admissible provided it is not repugnant to the written contract or inconsistent with its expressed terms.

It is permissible for arbitrators, who are experts in the trade in which the question referred to them has arisen, to act upon their own knowledge of the usages of that trade, and, if it is within the scope of their reference, to award that the buyer should take the goods found not to be according to sample with a reduction of price.

Where, under the terms of a contract for sale of goods, the buyer is to clear the goods on receipt of a delivery order by the seller, the vendor ceases to be liable after the transmission of the said delivery order and is entitled to interest and godown rent from that date. When the seller in possession holds the goods on account of the buyer, this has the same effect as physical delivery.

Per Heaton, J.—Variation from the written contract is inevitable where a custom has to be relied on. But variation need not be contradiction or repugnance. B RUTTONSEY ROWJI v. BOMBAY UNITED SPINNING AND MANUFACTURING CO., LTD., 18 Bom. L. R. 532 271

— S. 119—Order for goods—Consignment of larger quantity—Refusal to take delivery—Damages.

The consignment of a larger quantity of goods than that ordered will not entitle the person ordering to refuse to take delivery of the consignment altogether, when the goods ordered can be easily separated from the quantity consigned. M PERALA KRISHNAYAN CHETTIAR v. PADMANATHAN CHETTIAR, 5 L. W. 149; (1917) M. W. N. 91 792 — Ss. 128, 137, 140—Surety, liability of—Rights of creditor—Postponement of surety's liability.

Sections 128, 137 and 140 of the Indian Contract Act make it clear that a creditor has the right to proceed against a surety without exhausting his remedies against the principal debtor. The last section pre-supposes that the surety can be compelled to pay without the creditor resorting to the principal debtor for payment. M PARTHASARATHY CHETTI v. YELCHOORI NARAYANA CHETTI, 5 L. W. 161 401

— S. 130 919

— Ss. 137, 140 401

— S. 178 231, 707

— Ss. 211, 215, 216—Principal and agent—Agent, right of, to trade on his own account in business of agency without knowledge and consent of his principal—Trade usage inconsistent with Contract Act, validity of—Principal, right of, to repudiate transactions made by agent with himself in contravention of instructions of principal—Proof, quantum of.

In matters touching the agency, an agent must never place himself in a position where it would be possible that his own interests might stand in opposition to his duty towards his principal.

CONTRACT ACT—concl'd.

Where a commission agent, instructed to sell goods for future delivery 'in the market', purchased them himself under a fictitious name, and on the approach of the due date, being asked to fulfil the contract of sale by purchasing like goods of equal quantity 'from the market', purchased the same from himself under the same fictitious name, and concealed on both occasions the fact of himself being the purchaser and the seller respectively, but on the contrary misrepresented to his principal that the transactions were made with outsiders:

Held, that the concealment being dishonest was clearly disadvantageous to the principal, as the contracts being for future delivery, the agent had still several duties to perform for the principal, which almost necessarily came into conflict with the agent's interests, and that the principal was, therefore, entitled to repudiate the transactions under sections 211 and 215 of the Contract Act.

Where, however, a commission agent having purchased goods for future delivery from an outsider, closed the transaction on the due date by selling the same to himself on the market rate, the latter transaction was held binding on the principal, as the transaction was not disadvantageous to the principal and brought about no conflict of interests between the agent's duty to his principal and his own interests as a purchaser. The agent, however, was held not entitled to any commission on such a transaction.

Obiter dictum.—In India, a trade usage inconsistent with the terms of the Contract Act, e. g., permitting an agent to trade on his own account in the business of the agency without the knowledge and consent of the principal, may be valid but it should be specifically pleaded and strictly proved.

According to the law in England such a usage, even if proved, being both illegal and unreasonable, would not be binding on a principal not proved to have known it and agreed to be bound by it. S JANKIDAS-BANARSIDAS v. DHUMANMAL, 10 S. L. R. 86 241

— Ss. 215, 216 241

— S. 241 728

COSTS—Land acquisition cases.

Costs in matters under the Land Acquisition Act should be calculated in the same way as in ordinary suits. P D. A.-V. COLLEGE MANAGEMENT AND TRUST SOCIETY v SECRETARY OF STATE, 126 P. R. 196 760

COURT OF WARDS ACT (IX B. C. OF 1879), Ss. 18, 57 971

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (ACT V OF 1898), Ss. 54, 491—Directions of the nature of habeas corpus—Application to be made to Judge on Original Side of High Court—S. 54, scope of Circumstances justifying arrest "Credible information" and "reasonable suspicion", meaning of—Discretion to be exercised by police officer, delegation of.

An application under section 491, Criminal Procedure Code, is to be made to the High Court in its Ordinary Original Criminal Jurisdiction.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE—cont'd.

The petitioner, who was the managing agent of a certain Provident Company of Calcutta, was arrested by the Calcutta Police under section 54, Criminal Procedure Code, on receipt of a letter written by an Inspector of Police in a certain district in the Bombay Presidency to the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, in which it was stated that on enquiries into complaints against the Company and their local agent in Bombay it appeared, there being prima facie evidence to that effect, that the managing agent and the local agent had committed offences under sections 409 and 420, Indian Penal Code. The letter contained a request to cause the arrest of the petitioner and was forwarded by the District Magistrate with a note that the petitioner might be arrested under section 54, Criminal Procedure Code, and sent to the Magistrate, 1st class, of the District, to be tried by him. It was admitted that the officer effecting the arrest in Calcutta relied solely on the aforesaid letter and had no personal knowledge of the facts of the case:

Held, that the arrest of the petitioner under section 54, Criminal Procedure Code, was not proper.

That section 54, Criminal Procedure Code, gives wide powers to a Police Officer to make an arrest without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant only in certain circumstances limited by the provisions contained in the section and it is necessary in exercising such large powers to be cautious and circumspect.

The section gives a Police Officer personal authority and involves personal responsibility, and the "reasonable suspicion" and "credible information" must be based upon definite facts which the Police Officer must consider for himself before he acts under the section. He cannot delegate his discretion or take shelter under the belief or judgment of another Police officer.

In the circumstances of the case the High Court under section 491, Criminal Procedure Code, directed the release of the petitioner. C In the matter of CHARU CHANDRA MAJUMDAR, 20 C. W. N. 1233; 44 C. 76; 18 Cr. L. J. 73 57

— S. 103—Search of gaming house by Police without mashir, legality of—Evidence discovered in illegal search, admissibility of 33

— S. 106—Appellate Court, power of, to order security in affirming conviction—Jurisdiction.

An Appellate Court has power, in affirming a conviction and sentence passed on an accused, to pass an order binding down the accused under section 106 of the Criminal Procedure Code, even though the Court convicting in the first instance was not competent to do so. PAT BRUCHAN SINGH v. EMPEROR, 2 P. L. J. 21; 18 Cr. L. J. 115 470

— S. 106—Breach of peace 145

— Ss. 107, 145—Concurrent proceedings—Order under s. 145 after passing order under s. 107—Jurisdiction.

Proceedings under sections 107 and 145, Criminal Procedure Code, may go on concurrently between the same parties.

A Magistrate by reason of having passed an order under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, does not lose his jurisdiction to make an order under section 145 in proceedings pending before him, though the order may be defective on other grounds. C NASIRUDDIN SIRCAR v. GOFURUDDIN MOHAMED, 21 C. W. N. 160; 18 Cr. L. J. 129 481

• CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE—contd.

— S. 109 482

— S. 110, cl. (f)—Evidence of general repute, whether admissible—Proof.

In order to bring a case within clause (f) of section 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code, it is necessary to prove by definite evidence that the accused is so desperate and dangerous a person as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community.

Evidence of general repute is not admissible in proceedings taken under that clause. P NUR MUHAMMAD v. EMPEROR, 8 P. W. R. 1917 Cr.; 18 Cr. L. J. 119 471

— Ss. 145, 107—Concurrent proceedings 481

— Ss. 145, 146—Disputed land under water—Recent possession, determination of, impossible—Procedure.

Where in a proceeding under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate finds that none of the parties was in undisturbed possession of the land in dispute within two months preceding the date of the proceeding owing to the land remaining under water, the proper order for him to make is one under section 146, Criminal Procedure Code, and not to make an order in favour of the party who was in possession during the previous year. C SATYENDRA NATH v. KRISHNADHAN ADHIKARI, 20 C. W. N. 1014; 18 Cr. L. J. 80 64

— Ss. 145, 435, 439—Jurisdiction of Magistrate acting under section 145—Preliminary order—Grounds not recorded, effect of Revision—High Court, non-chartered, revisional powers of 308

— S. 145, possessory order under, recital of claim in—Admissibility in proof of title 911

— S. 145, proceedings under—Arbitration, reference to—Magistrate, delegation of duties by—Jurisdiction, excess of, effect of.

Section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not give the Magistrate charged with holding the enquiry under that section the right or power to delegate the duties which have been vested in him to any other person. The procedure laid down by the section does not contemplate that the question as to who was in actual possession should be delegated, even by consent of parties, to arbitrators.

Where there has been excess of jurisdiction, the whole proceeding and the result following from that excess of jurisdiction is a nullity. PAT HAMIDUL HAQ v. ATAET HOSSAIN, 1 P. L. W. 81; 2 P. L. J. 86; 18 Cr. L. J. 145 513

— S. 145—Rent of land, dispute as to—Dispute, whether should be between rival claimants—Jurisdiction.

A dispute as to the right to collect rent is a right concerning "tangible immovable property or land" within the meaning of section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

To take action under the section it is not necessary that the apprehended breach of the peace should be between the rival claimants.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE—contd.

The grounds of a Magistrate's belief need not be set out seriatim in the notice issued to parties under the section. It is enough if the Magistrate states in his order that he believes the statement of the petitioner which contains such grounds. M In re MEDAI DHALAVOY TIRUMALAYAPPA MUDALIAR, 18 Cr. L. J. 156 524

— S. 147—Dispute concerning right to collect tolas from hat, whether falls within the section.

The words "concerning the right of use of any land or water" in section 147, Criminal Procedure Code, are wide enough to include the right to go upon a hat for the purpose of collecting gratuities; therefore, a dispute concerning the right to collect tolas (gratuities) from a hat falls within the purview of the section. C SARAT CHANDRA MADAK v. MOBARAK MALLIK, 24 C. L. J. 47; 21 C. W. N. 439; 18 Cr. L. J. 113 465

— S. 162 314

— S. 177 487

— Ss. 185, 527—Construction and scope of sections—Jurisdiction—Form of order—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 409, 420.

Per Curiam (Woodroffe, J., dissenting).—Section 185, Criminal Procedure Code, is not restricted to cases in which there is doubt as to whether one Court or another has jurisdiction, but includes cases in which the doubt arises as to the suitability of one Court as compared with another (by which the offence shall be enquired into or tried), from the point of view of convenience or expediency.

Per Sanderson, C. J. and Newbould, J.—The jurisdiction under section 185 should be exercised sparingly by a High Court, when proceedings against an accused residing within the local limits of the Criminal Appellate jurisdiction of that Court have been instituted in a Court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to another High Court.

Per Woodroffe, J.—The "doubt" referred to in section 185 is a doubt as to the competency or jurisdiction of a Court and does not include a doubt whether one or another Court should enquire into or try a case on the ground of convenience or expediency.

Section 185 is not designed to cut down admitted jurisdiction, but to determine cases where the facts said to constitute jurisdiction are doubtful.

The doubt as to what are the acts which are said to constitute the offence and where they were committed is not the "doubt" which is referred to in section 185, Criminal Procedure Code.

Per Mookerjee, J.—Jurisdiction cannot be conferred by consent of parties where there is an entire absence of jurisdiction.

Scopes of sections 185 and 527 explained.

A narrow construction should not be placed upon section 185.

The High Court has jurisdiction to make an order under section 185 in respect of an enquiry instituted or trial commenced in a Court not subordinate to itself.

Where proceedings against the accused residing within the criminal appellate jurisdiction of the High Court of Calcutta were instituted in respect of alleged offences under sections 409 and 420, Indian Penal Code, in a Court within the Presidency of

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE—contd.

Bombay, on an application by the accused a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court (Woodroffe and Neubould, J., dissenting), in consideration of the circumstances of the case and the convenience of the parties, made an order under section 185 declaring that the case against the accused should be enquired into or tried by the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate in Calcutta.

The form of the order under section 185, Criminal Procedure Code, in such a case laid down. C CHARU CHANDRA MAJUMDAR v. EMPEROR, 21 C. W. N. 320; 25 C. L. J. 165; 18 Cr. L. J. 81 145

— Ss. 185, 526, 527—Scope of s. 185—Transfer, powers of, of High Court—Conflict of jurisdiction of different High Courts—Transfer from Court subordinate to another High Court—Opinion, expression of, competency of—Practice—Procedure.

Section 185 of the Criminal Procedure Code gives no powers of transfer to the High Court even inferentially. The power to transfer vested in the High Court under the Code is dealt with solely by section 526.

A High Court has no jurisdiction, under section 185, to transfer a case pending in a Court outside its jurisdiction and subject to the superintendence of a different High Court, though it has the power to prevent a Court subordinate to itself from grasping at jurisdiction or trying a case which had better be tried by another Court, whether subordinate to that High Court or not.

The only person who has any jurisdiction to pass orders binding on different High Courts is the Governor-General acting under section 527.

Section 185 cannot be availed of by any High Court even to express a pious opinion that a case pending outside its jurisdiction should be inquired into and tried by a Court subordinate to it.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—Section 185 was intended only to apply to and provide for the following two sets of circumstances: (1) Where two cases 'are pending' in two Courts within the jurisdiction respectively of two separate High Courts on the same set of facts, the High Court within which the offender is found has the deciding voice 'whether the Court within its own jurisdiction' shall or shall not proceed against the accused. If it decides in the affirmative, the outside Court cannot proceed further, as the High Court has full powers to prevent a person who is within its jurisdiction from being taken out of that jurisdiction till the case in its subordinate Court is concluded; (2) Where only one case has been instituted in a Court subordinate to the High Court in whose jurisdiction the offender is, that High Court can decide whether the case should be enquired into and tried by its own subordinate Court or should be tried in a Court within the jurisdiction of some other High Court. M MAHOMED GHOUSE v. NATHU VALABHJI, 5 L. W. 349; 18 Cr. L. J. 148 516

— S. 195 487 494

— Ss. 195, 439, 537—Chief Court, power of, to examine record and pass orders—Sanction, application for—Notice to accused, whether necessary—Sanction granted by successor of Munsif before whom alleged offence committed, whether valid—Misdescription of officer granting sanction effect of.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE—contd.

Under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, the Chief Court has full powers to examine the record of a case and pass such orders as may be necessary.

Before granting sanction under section 195 it is advisable to give notice to the accused, although the issue of such a notice is not provided for in the Code.

There is no Court of a Munsif of the 1st class as a permanent Court with a perpetual succession of Judges, and on the transfer of a Munsif from a District, the Court of the Munsif who takes over the pending work is not identical with the Court of the Munsif who has been transferred. Therefore, a Munsif before whom an offence has not been committed cannot grant sanction to prosecute under section 195, merely because he has succeeded a Munsif in that particular place or district.

A misdescription in the order of sanction of the officer granting sanction to prosecute a person does not vitiate the sanction accorded, and section 537, Criminal Procedure Code, covers the irregularity.

Where the officer who granted sanction had a dual capacity, being both a 1st class Munsif and a 1st class Magistrate, and he erroneously described himself as 'Magistrate' when he should have written 'Munsif':

Held, that it was only an irregularity which was cured by section 537, Criminal Procedure Code. P MAULA BAKHSH v. LAL CHAND, 23 P. R. 1916 Cr.; 18 Cr. L. J. 121 473

— Ss. 195, 109, 439—Sanction—Magistrate exercising jurisdiction in one district, whether can delegate powers to Magistrate in another district—False statements made in ultra vires proceedings—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 193.

A Magistrate exercising jurisdiction in one district has no jurisdiction to make an enquiry into the sufficiency of security required under section 109, Criminal Procedure Code, by a Magistrate of another district. Therefore, persons making false statements in the course of such enquiry cannot be prosecuted for perjury under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code.

Obiter.—The inquiry by the former Magistrate would be illegal even if the latter were to authorise it. P KHUDA BAKHSH v. EMPEROR, 52 P. W. R. 1916 Cr.; 18 Cr. L. J. 130 482

— S. 195—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 193—Sanction—Order granting sanction, form of.

An order granting sanction to prosecute for giving false evidence ought to specify the statement alleged to be false. L B NG A PO YIN v. EMPEROR, 9 BUR. L. T. 203; 18 Cr. L. J. 98 306

— S. 195—Sanction, proper Court to apply to for—Notice—Order granting sanction.

Ordinarily an application for sanction to prosecute for giving false evidence should be made to the Court in which the alleged false evidence was given. When application is made to another Court, it is incumbent on such Court to send notice to the opposite party to show cause.

An order granting sanction to prosecute should show reasons why the sanction is granted. L B NG AUNG GYI v. EMPEROR, 9 BUR. L. T. 202; 18 Cr. L. J. 97 305

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE—contd.

— — — Ss. 195, 476—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 225B—Sending persons to Magistrate for abetting escape from custody—Omission to make preliminary enquiry—Jurisdiction.

A Court has no power to accord sanction for prosecution of a person under section 225B, Indian Penal Code, for snatching away a judgment-debtor from the custody of one of its process peons, as section 225B, Indian Penal Code, is not mentioned in section 195, Criminal Procedure Code.

A Court acts without jurisdiction under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, in sending a person to take his trial, for an alleged offence, without making a preliminary enquiry as to the circumstances constituting the alleged offence. The enquiry may be unnecessary when the Court is already in possession of the material facts from the evidence recorded at the trial, but where the incident constituting the alleged offence took place outside the Court as to which the Judge himself has no knowledge, it is incumbent on the Court to make an enquiry preliminary to passing orders under the section. C TARU BABU v. EMPEROR, 21 C. W. N. 125; 18 Cr. L. J. 117 469

— — — Ss. 195 (6), 439—Sanction to prosecute—Revision—Delay in applying to High Court, effect of.

The revisional jurisdiction of the High Court is discretionary and it will not interfere in revision at the instance of applicants who do not shew reasonable diligence in prosecuting their cases. PAT AVADH BEHARI MISRA v. DWARKA PRASAD SINGH, 1 P. L. J. 165; 18 Cr. L. J. 271 639

— — — S. 195, cls. (b), (c)—Sanction, grant of—Case committed to Sessions Court—Statement before Committing Magistrate, sanction by Sessions Judge in respect of, legality of—'In relation to any proceeding in any Court,' meaning of—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 193—Perjury—Contradictory statements, when indictable.

A Sessions Judge has power to grant sanction for perjury in respect of statements made by a witness before a Committing Magistrate, though appeals do not lie to him from the latter's Court within the meaning of clauses (6) and (7) of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code.

Such statements which are brought to the notice of the Sessions Court trying the case are made in relation to the proceedings of the latter Court within the meaning of section 195 (1) (b), Criminal Procedure Code.

Sanction should not be accorded for prosecution on the ground of contradictory statements, unless there is a direct contradiction, especially when they are immediately corrected and explained. M NARAYANA NADAN v. PALANIAPPA NADAN, (1917) M. W. N. 141; 18 Cr. L. J. 143 495

— — — S. 197—Sanction to prosecute—Public servant, member of notified area Committee, whether is—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 323, 504.

All members of notified area Committees are not public servants within the meaning of section 197 of the Criminal Procedure Code. P NATHU KHAN v. MUHAMMAD BAKSH, 48 P. W. R. 1916 Cr.; 18 Cr. L. J. 106 514

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE—contd.

— — — Ss. 202, 203—Complaint, delay in passing orders on—Magistrate, duty of.

Orders should be passed expeditiously by Magistrates on complaints presented to them. It is, in the highest degree, improper to delay orders for months. A SALIMULLAH v. BIRJHAN SINGH, 18 Cr. L. J. 271 639

— — — S. 203 639

— — — Ss. 221 (7), 537—Charge, omission to set forth previous conviction in—Irregularity, whether curable—Form to be used.

Magistrates should be careful to comply with the provisions of section 221 (7), Criminal Procedure Code. An omission to do so is an irregularity curable by section 537, if it has not actually prejudiced the accused.

Where it is intended to prove a previous conviction against an accused for the purpose of affecting the punishment which a Court is competent to award, Criminal Form 79 should invariably be used. L B NGA HUA v. EMPEROR, 8 L. B. R. 461; 18 Cr. L. J. 79 63

— — — S. 233—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 457, 411—Joint trial—Conviction of some accused under ss. 457 and of others under 411, legality of.

In one and the same trial there cannot be convictions against some accused under section 457 and against others under section 411 of the Penal Code. P MUHAMMAD v. EMPEROR, 49 P. W. R. 1916 Cr.; 18 Cr. L. J. 112 320

— — — S. 247, whether applies, when complainant is absent from Court to which his case is transferred.

Section 247 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not apply where the complainant is present in Court with his witnesses on the date fixed for trial, but being unaware that his case has been transferred to another Court fails to appear in that Court when the case is called on for hearing later on in the day. C ETIM HAJI v. HAMID, 24 C. L. J. 444; 18 Cr. L. J. 104 312

— — — Ss. 247, 438—Death of complainant in course of trial—Application by son to continue the case—Acquittal, legality of—High Court—Revision—Practice—Case affecting public tranquillity.

The complainant having died in the course of the trial, his son applied for permission to continue the proceedings. The Magistrate declined to do so and acquitted the accused, holding that under section 247, Criminal Procedure Code, he had no option but to acquit. On a reference by the District Magistrate, who stated that the matter was one which affected the tranquillity of the district:

Held, (1) that section 247, Criminal Procedure Code, applies primarily to the case of a complainant who is alive but does not appear, and not to the case of a complainant dying before trial, and that the order of acquittal was wrong in law;

(2) that, though it is the settled practice of the High Court not to interfere in revision with acquittals, the order of acquittal in this case which involved the peace of the district should be set aside, especially as the Magistrate had not exercised his discretion but acted on an erroneous view of the law. RAT JITAN DUSADH v. DOMOO SAHOO, 1 P. L. J. 264; 20 C. W. N. 862; 18 Cr. L. J. 151 519

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE—contd.

— Ss. 248, 345—Withdrawal of complaint, petition of—Compromise—Warrant case—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 342—Wrongful confinement.

The Police submitted a charge-sheet against the accused under section 342, Indian Penal Code. On the day fixed for the hearing of the case the complainant filed a petition in the following terms:

"This case.....by the intervention of arbitrators has been compromised. Hence the petitioner does not want to proceed with the case and to get his witnesses examined, so this petition is filed and it is prayed that the case may be struck off without hearing." The Magistrate examined the complainant and found that there had been no compromise:

Held, (1) that it was the duty of the Magistrate to examine the complainant in order to satisfy himself that the petition was really one of compromise;

(2) that the petition was one of withdrawal under section 248, and not one of compromise under section 345, Criminal Procedure Code, and, therefore, the trial did not come to an end on its presentation.

PAT BAYAN ALI v. EMPEROR, 20 C. W. N. 1209; 1 P. L. W. 21; 18 CR. L. J. 107 315

— S. 256, applicability of, to inquiries into cases triable by Sessions Court—Accused, right of, to cross-examine prosecution witnesses after framing of charge.

Section 256 of the Criminal Procedure Code provides, in the trial of warrant cases, for the re-call of witnesses for the prosecution for cross-examination, after the charge has been framed. The section does not apply to enquiries into cases triable by the Sessions Court. In such cases the evidence of each witness will ordinarily be concluded as each witness is examined and the accused has no right to have his cross-examination conducted after the charge has been framed. O BALDEO PRASADA v. EMPEROR, 19 O. C. 239; 18 CR. L. J. 105 313

— Ss. 269, 526—"Trial...shall be by Jury in any district", meaning of—High Court, power of, to transfer a Sessions case from a Jury district to a non-Jury district.

In section 269, Criminal Procedure Code, the words "trial...shall be by Jury in any district" mean that the trial shall be by Jury in any district when so ordered by a Notification and not that the trial shall be by Jury of offences 'committed' in any district.

There being no legal prohibition against the trial being otherwise than by Jury if held in any other district not affected by a Notification under section 269, the High Court has power under section 526 to transfer a Sessions case from a Jury district to a non-Jury district. S EMPEROR v. JYNO, 10 S. L. R. 154; 18 CR. L. J. 51 35

— S. 341—Deaf and dumb accused, trial of—Procedure—Conviction.

The law in England as well as in India with regard to the trial of a deaf and dumb person is that though great caution and diligence are necessary in the trial of such a person, yet if it be shown that such person had sufficient intelligence to understand the character of his criminal act he is liable to punishment. B EMPEROR v. A DEAF & DUMB ACCUSED, 18 BOM. L. R. 553; 40 B. 698; 18 CR. L. J. 143 495

— S. 345

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE—contd.

— S. 350—Magistrates, Bench of, case tried by—Decision after hearing part of evidence, legality of.

Section 350, Criminal Procedure Code, does not apply to cases tried by Benches of Magistrates.

There is no provision of law which provides for a change in the constitution of Benches of Magistrates, and, therefore, only those Magistrates who have heard the whole of the evidence in a case can decide the case. L B ITALIA v. EMPEROR, 9 BUR. L. T. 203; 8 L. B. R. 463; 18 CR. L. J. 96 160

— Ss. 413, 435, 438, construction of—Appeal, right of, when appealable and non-appealable sentences passed in one judgment—Remedy where conviction set aside on appeal—Reference to High Court.

Section 413 of the Criminal Procedure Code declares in quite unambiguous terms that in those cases in which a Court passes only a light sentence the convicted person shall have no right of appeal. The words used in the section cannot bear the construction that no appeal lies at the instance of a convicted person, against a judgment in which no other sentence than one not exceeding one month has been passed.

Consequently, where at a joint trial some accused persons are sentenced to appealable sentences and some to non-appealable sentences, the former alone can appeal. This strict interpretation might on occasions lead to apparent injustice, e. g., where on appeal by those having right of appeal, the conviction is set aside. Under the existing practice such injustice can be removed by the procedure of a reference for revision to the High Court under section 435 or 438, Criminal Procedure Code. S UNAR GOOL v. EMPEROR, 10 S. L. R. 156; 18 CR. L. J. 72 56

— S. 435 56, 607

— Ss. 435, 439, 145, scope of—Revision—High Court, non-chartered, revisional powers of—Jurisdiction of Magistrate acting under s. 145—Preliminary order—Grounds not recorded, effect of.

Section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, simply sets out the revisional powers of a High Court. It does not purport to qualify, add to, or detract from, any of the provisions of section 435, Criminal Procedure Code, and has to be read along with that section in order to find whether certain proceedings are open to revision by the High Court. The words in section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, "the record of which has been called for by itself", are not used in contradistinction to "which otherwise comes to its knowledge", and these latter words cannot be read so as to have reference to a petition.

The essential requisite to give a Magistrate jurisdiction under section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is that he must be satisfied from information of some sort that a dispute exists likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning land or water, or the boundaries thereof, within his jurisdiction.

There is nothing in section 435 (3), Criminal Procedure Code, to prevent a non-chartered High Court interfering in proceedings which purport to be proceedings under Chapter XII, in a case where the Magistrate has initiated those proceedings without jurisdiction to do so.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE—contd.

The mere mention of an order as being made under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, will not of itself make that order an order under Chapter XII, Criminal Procedure Code.

But it is to be presumed that the work of a Court is done decently and in order, and if a Magistrate has jurisdiction he can enter the ring-fence of Chapter XII, Criminal Procedure Code, and he cannot be followed nor his procedure examined.

Hence, a non-chartered High Court (which cannot avail of the general powers of superintendence conferred by section 15 of the Indian High Courts Act) cannot entertain an application for revision of proceedings purporting to be under Chapter XII, Criminal Procedure Code, unless such High Court can ascertain without calling for the record of the lower Court, e. g., by copies of the proceedings or by the affidavit of the applicant, that the lower Court initiated those proceedings without jurisdiction to do so, that is to say, that the Magistrate in question was not such as could have exercised jurisdiction in the matter or that there was no information upon which the proceedings could be started.

An omission to record grounds in the preliminary order made by a Magistrate under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, does not affect his jurisdiction. O UDAI BHAN PARTAB SINGH v. RAM SANAJH, 3 O. L. J. 546; 19 O. C. 136; 18 Cr. L. J. 100

— S. 438

308

— S. 439

56, 519

— Ss. 439, 476—Order by Civil Court under s. 476—Revision.

Section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not confer jurisdiction on the High Court exercising criminal jurisdiction to revise an order made by a District Court under section 476. L B KO MAUNG GYI v. MA MA, 10 BUR. L. T. 13; 18 Cr. L. J. 121 — Ss. 439—Revision, grounds for—Inferences not warranted by evidence.

Inferences not warranted by the evidence, drawn to the prejudice of the accused, are good grounds for a criminal revision L B NGA SHWE KYAW v. EMPEROR, 18 Cr. L. J. 116

— S. 439 Revision—High Court, non-chartered, revisional powers of

— S. 476

468

— Ss. 476, 177, 195—"Brought to its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding," meaning of—S. 476, scope of—Offence committed in another province—Jurisdiction—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 209, 210.

Per Chamier, C. J.—Section 476 of the Code of Criminal Procedure does not appear to restrict the action of the Court to offences committed within its own jurisdiction or even within the province in which the Court is situated.

Per Sharfuddin, J. Section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, is a self-contained section and the reference made to section 195 of the Code is only for the purpose of avoiding the enumeration of the sections mentioned in section 195. The most important element in section 476 is that the offences referred to in section 195 should either be committed before the prosecuting Court or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding, when that Court may proceed as provided by section 476.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE—contd.

If an offence has been committed, no matter where, and if in the course of a judicial proceeding it is brought to the notice of a Court that such an offence has been committed, that Court has jurisdiction to proceed under section 476.

Petitioner instituted a suit at Bilaspur against a resident of Arrah and obtaining a decree, sought to execute it at Arrah by means of a transfer. The judgment-debtor then instituted a suit at Arrah to have the decree of the Bilaspur Court set aside, on the ground that it had been obtained by fraud. The suit was decreed, and petitioner's appeal to the District Judge, Arrah, was dismissed. The District Judge, finding that the petitioner had brought a false suit and had obtained a decree by fraud and by tampering with the service of summonses, etc., directed his prosecution under sections 209, 210, Indian Penal Code:

Held, that the District Judge had jurisdiction to take action against petitioner under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, as the offences alleged to have been committed by him were brought to the notice of the District Judge in the course of a judicial proceeding. PAT RAJKUMAR SINGH v. EMPEROR, 1 P. L. J. 296; 18 Cr. L. J. 135 — Ss. 476, 537—Enquiry, order directing—Delay—Jurisdiction—Procedure—Irregularity, effect of—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 182, 211.

Accused lodged a complaint against certain Police Officers before a Magistrate who, after examining the accused, recorded that the complaint was false and ordered the latter to show cause why he should not be prosecuted under section 182, Indian Penal Code. The Magistrate was then transferred and his successor sent the case to another Magistrate for enquiry. Subsequently, on 6th December, the complaint was dismissed under section 203, Criminal Procedure Code. On the 4th of February following, the Magistrate, on the application of a Police Officer, ordered the prosecution of the accused under section 211, Indian Penal Code:

Held, (1) that the delay which occurred in making an order under section 476 did not deprive the Magistrate of jurisdiction to proceed under the section;

(2) that if the procedure adopted by the Magistrate in sending the case to another Magistrate for enquiry and report was irregular, the irregularity was cured under section 537, Criminal Procedure Code.

Per Atkinson, J.—If in a criminal proceeding an irregularity takes place and is allowed to pass unheeded and unnoticed, and fresh prosecution follows founded upon the irregularity and conviction follows, then after conviction the accused party cannot raise the intermediate irregularity in an antecedent proceeding as a ground for challenging the validity of the subsequent conviction. PAT BAIJ NATH SINGH v. EMPEROR, 1 P. L. J. 553; 18 Cr. L. J. 52

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE—contd.

— S. 476—Order directing prosecution on result of findings in civil proceeding—Appeal, pendency of, against findings—Stay of criminal proceedings, expediency of.

Proceedings in a Criminal Court initiated as the result of an order by a Court under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, should be stayed pending the disposal of an appeal against the order or decree in respect of which the order was passed under the section.

The Court to which the application for stay of proceedings is presented, should not prejudge the appeal by making any declaration as to the correctness or otherwise of the order appealed against to determine whether the prosecution should be postponed or not, but should leave it to the Court which has cognizance of the appeal, staying proceedings meantime. PAT DEBI MAHTO v. EMPEROR, 20 C. W. N. 1116; 18 Cr. L. J. 125 477 — Ss. 476, 195—Prosecution under s. 476, order for—Jurisdiction—Offence 'brought to notice in the course of a judicial proceeding.'

L. instituted a suit in the Small Cause Court in the District of Darbhanga for recovery of a sum of money against B. and obtained an ex parte decree. He got the decree transferred for execution to the Chapra District. B. brought a suit in the Munsif's Court at Chapra to set aside the decree, on the ground of fraud. The Munsif decreed the suit. B. then applied to the Munsif for sanction to prosecute L. The Munsif refused sanction. On appeal the District Judge at Chapra directed the prosecution of L. under section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code:

Held, that as offences in respect of which sanction was sought under section 195 were brought to the notice of the District Judge at Chapra in the course of a judicial proceeding, he had jurisdiction to direct the prosecution. PAT LAXMI SINGH v. BAI MOHAN LAL, 1 P. L. J. 586; 18 Cr. L. J. 142 494 — Ss. 488, 489—Maintenance—Arrears, execution of order for—Alteration of amount.

In an application for execution of an order for maintenance for wife and son, a Magistrate can under section 489, Criminal Procedure Code, go into the question whether the son has become able to maintain himself subsequently to the order under section 488 and whether the son was in fact able to maintain himself during the period for which arrears of maintenance are applied for.

Where the original order made no specific allotment for the wife separately, it is not competent for a Magistrate to do so in enforcement of an order under section 489. L. B. THUMBUSWAMY PILLAY v. MA LONE, 18 Cr. L. J. 103 311

— S. 489
— S. 491—Directions of the nature of habeas corpus—Application to be made to Judge on Original Side of High Court.

An application under section 491, Criminal Procedure Code, is to be made to the High Court in its Ordinary Original Criminal Jurisdiction. C. CHABU CHANDRA MAJUMDAR, In the matter of, 20 C. W. N. 1233; 18 Cr. L. J. 73 57

— S. 526 516

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE—concl.

— S. 526—High Court, power of, to transfer Sessions case from Jury district to non-Jury district 35

— S. 526—Transfer of criminal case, grounds for—Opinion of Judge on evidence in prior counter-case.

It is not a sufficient ground for the transfer of a criminal case that the Judge, in a former proceeding arising out of a counter-case, expressed certain views upon the evidence as to which of two versions was correct. Judges must be presumed to be upright men, who will approach a case from the point of view of that case alone and not permit their minds to be affected in any way by anything that has gone before that case. PAT ANKIT MONDAL v. EMPEROR, 1 P. L. J. 399; 18 Cr. L. J. 95 159

— S. 527 516

— S. 527, construction and scope of 145

— S. 528—Transfer of case by Magistrates of co-ordinate jurisdiction—Procedure.

Where a Magistrate acts on his own initiative in transferring a case, his order is not vitiated by the fact that another Magistrate of co-ordinate authority had refused it; but if he examines the reasons given by the co-ordinate authority and finds that that authority is wrong, his interference must be deemed to be by way of appeal which he has no jurisdiction to entertain, and the order of transfer must be set aside. M. NARAYANASAMY AIYAR v. KUPPUSAMY AIYAR, 5 L. W. 372; 18 Cr. L. J. 57 41

— S. 537 473

— S. 537—Charge, omission to set forth previous conviction in—Irregularity, whether curable—Form to be used 63

— S. 537—Irregularity—Objection.

Per Atkinson, J.—If in a criminal proceeding an irregularity takes place and is allowed to pass unheeded and unnoticed, and fresh prosecution follows founded upon the irregularity and conviction follows, then after conviction the accused party cannot raise the intermediate irregularity in an antecedent proceeding as a ground for challenging the validity of the subsequent conviction. PAT BALI NATH SINGH v. EMPEROR, 1 P. L. J. 553; 18 Cr. L. J. 52 36

CUSTOM. See MUHAMMADAN LAW.

—, essentials of.

Custom, in order to prevail against the general law, must be proved to be immemorial, reasonable, certain and continued without interruption since its immemorial origin. PAT PUNCHA v. BINDESWARI 960

— ALIENATION—Gift by sonless proprietor of ancestral land to sister's son in presence of collaterals—Gujars of Jhelum Tahsil—Burden of proof.

Among Gujars of the Jhelum Tahsil a childless proprietor cannot make a valid gift of ancestral property in favour of his sister's son in presence of collaterals.

The burden of proving the validity of such a gift is on the donee. P. MUHAMMAD ALAM v. MUHAMMAD HAYAT, 127 P. R. 1916 762

CUSTOM—conclld.

—ALIENATION by male proprietor—Suit by reversioners—Adverse possession—Limitation 412

—KHANADAMADI—Gujars of Gujrat District. Among Gujars of Gujrat District the custom of khanadamadi is very prevalent. P AISHAN v. MUHAMMAD DIN, 24 P. R. 1916 119

—PRE-EMPTION—Co-sharer, refusal of, to purchase, effect of—Waiver 511 —SUCCESSION, collateral—Distribution among sons according to number of their mothers, effect of.

In a case governed by custom, where property is distributed among the sons of a person according to the number of their mothers, the descendants of the sons of one of them cannot succeed collaterally to the property left by the descendants of another of them so long as other descendants, though lower in degree, of the same stock are alive.

The effect of such a custom is to constitute brothers by the same father and mother and their descendants persons of one stock for purposes of inheritance, and as a logical result of the custom, persons who are descended from a different mother, though nearer in degree, are not entitled to preference over descendants of the same mother. O LACHHMAN PRASAD v. DURGA PRASAD, 19 O. C. 165; 3 O. L. J. 727 14 —, collateral—Pichhlag son succeeding stepfather without objection, whether acquires right of collateral succession—Adoption—Alienation.

Where the members of a family make no objection to a man's being succeeded by his pichhlag son, the latter does not thereby acquire the right to succeed collaterally in the family generally.

In matters of adoption and alienation a pichhlag son is in no better position than a stranger. P RAM PARSHAD v. HARNAN, 116 P. L. R. 1916 137

DECKEE, construction of—Decree conditional upon payment of an amount within 30 days of decree becoming final—Payment, validity of, after 30 days but before expiry of time of appeal.

A decree was obtained conditional upon the plaintiff's paying into Court a certain sum of money within "thirty days of the decree becoming final." The plaintiff deposited the money after thirty days but before the expiry of the appeal time:

Held, that the money was paid within 30 days of the decree becoming final. A BHAGELU SAHAI v. RAM AUTRA SHUKUL, 15 A. L. J. 38 144

—, construction of—Order, incorrect—Party, duty of 414

DEKKHAN AGRICULTURISTS' RELIEF ACT (XVII of 1879), S. 15 (b) (1)—Instalments, payment of, default in—Mortgaged property, sale of portion of—Final decree, whether required—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 5 (2).

A holder of a decree for sale upon a mortgage, in default of payment of instalments ordered under section 15 (b) (1) of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act is not required to apply under Order XXXIV, rule 5 (2), of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, to make the decree final before he can apply for sale of the necessary portion of the property under section 65 (b) (2) of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act. B KASHINATH VINAYAK BHAVE v. RAMA DAJI KALE, 18 Bom. L. R. 475; 40 B. 492 255

S. 65 (b) (2) 255

DIVORCE ACT (IV of 1869), S. 37—Decree nisi for divorce—Alimony—Wife living with co-respondent—Discretion of Court.

The grant of alimony to a wife against whom the husband has obtained a decree nisi for divorce on the ground of adultery is a matter of discretion.

Where there was no suggestion that the husband's conduct led to the wife's misconduct, and the wife was living with the co-respondent, the Court refused to exercise its discretion. A MCGOWAN, IV. E. v. J. D. MCGOWAN, 14 A. L. J. 786; 38 A. 688 143

—S. 43—Divorce, decree nisi for, in suit by husband—Costs of appeal, wife's right to get from husband—Custody of children of marriage on decree for divorce.

In a proper case, on the application of a wife who prefers an appeal against a decree nisi for divorce, the Appellate Court may, in its discretion, make an order directing the husband to provide for the costs of the wife's appeal.

On making a decree for dissolution of marriage it should be the duty of the Court to look to the interests of the children of the marriage and carefully to weigh the comparative advantages and disadvantages of giving the custody of all or any of them to the one parent or to the other, but no general rule on the subject can be laid down.

Per Mookerjee, J.—The Court, though not precluded from making an order giving the divorced wife access to the children, is most reluctant to make such an order and never places the indulgence of the parents above the welfare of the children.

The doctrine that the husband who brings a suit for divorce should provide costs to the wife, to enable her to make her defence and to prosecute her appeal when a decree is passed against her, should be very cautiously scrutinised, as such a doctrine is an encroachment upon the ordinary rule that costs follow the event.

In a suit for divorce brought by a husband for the adultery of his wife, the wife did not deny the charge of adultery but pleaded condonation, connivance and collusion on the part of the husband and the Judge, having decided against the defences, made a decree nisi and gave the custody of the children of the marriage, two daughters, aged respectively 10 and 20, to the husband. The wife then preferred an appeal and made an application to the Appellate Court asking that the Court should make an order restraining the husband from sending the two daughters out of the jurisdiction of the Court until the disposal of her appeal and directing him to pay to her Solicitors such sum as might be fixed by the Court for and towards the costs of her appeal:

Held, that under the circumstances of the case it would be wrong to interfere with the discretion which the law vests in the father who is the proper and legitimate guardian of the children, and that the facts of the case were not of such a nature as to justify an order that the husband should make provision for his wife's costs of the appeal. C CROIX, B. A. DE STE. A. CROIX, PHILLIP DE STE, 24 C. L. J. 226; 44 C. 35 216

EJECTMENT, suit for—Plaintiff to prove his title—Burden of proof.

In a suit for ejectment a plaintiff must succeed on the strength of his own title and cannot rely upon the weakness of the defendant's title. PAT GHASITA SINGH v. BHAGMANI KOER 924 —, suit for, by tenant against trespasser—Landlord supporting trespasser, effect of.

A tenant is entitled to eject a trespasser from property in possession of the former, and the mere fact that the latter is supported in his defence by the landlord does not give him any right to retain the property as against the tenant. PAT KARTIC REWANI v. THE CENTRAL KARKEND COAL CO., LTD., 1 P. L. J. 430 1004

EMERGENCY LEGISLATION CONTINUANCE ACT (I of 1915), whether ultra vires—Ordinances III and V of 1914—Governor-General-in-Council, power of, to pass Act embodying provisions of Ordinances—Ordinance III of 1914, s. 11, effect of—Jurisdiction of Courts to question orders of internment passed under Emergency Legislation Continuance Act—Indian Councils Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 67), ss. 22, 23.

Under section 23 of the Indian Councils Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 67), no Ordinance can have any force of law for more than six months from its promulgation, but the power of the Governor-General-in-Council to pass an Act embodying the provisions of an Ordinance is in no matter controlled or taken away by that section. The Governor-General-in-Council has power to pass an Act like the Emergency Legislation Continuance Act (I of 1915) which embodies the provisions of Ordinances 3 and 5 of 1914:

Held (as to the contention that inasmuch as section 11 of Ordinance No. III of 1914 which is embodied in the Emergency Legislation Continuance Act of 1915 seeks to oust the jurisdiction of the Courts, it offends against section 22 of the Indian Councils Act, 1861), that the Emergency Legislation Continuance Act of 1915 is not ultra vires of the Governor-General-in-Council and the High Court has not power to call in question orders passed thereunder. It is for the Governor-General-in-Council to be satisfied on the materials before them and the Court cannot call for the materials or examine them.

In England the common law rule that when an Act is repealed and the repealing Act is repealed by another which manifests no intention that the first shall continue repealed, the repeal of the second Act revives the first, does not apply to repealing Acts passed since 1850 and the last repeal does not now revive the Act or provisions before repealed unless words be added reviving them. The same principle or rule of law applies to this country. Section 3 of the General Clauses Act (I of 1868) expressly provided that for the purpose of reviving either wholly or partially a Statute, Act or Regulation repealed, it shall be necessary expressly to state such purpose, and the same is the effect of sections 6 and 7 of the General Clauses Act (X of 1897). C. JEWANATHOO, In the matter of, 20 G. W. N. 1827 48

ESTOPPEL—Holding out—Bona fide purchaser for value 231

—, whether can validate invalid transfer.

Where a transfer is contrary to public policy, neither party can make it legal by creating estoppel. PAT PUNCHA v. BINDESWARI 960

—Will and gift, deeds of, executed simultaneously—Statement in Will as to revocability of gift, effect of 69

EVIDENCE—Batwara papers, admissibility of 895

—Batwara papers, admissibility of—Ejectment, suit for.

Batwara papers are not admissible in evidence against persons who were not parties to the batwara proceedings. PAT KUDRA NARAIN SINGH v. RAMESHWAR SINGH 829

—Kabuliyat, when and against whom admissible.

Where there is a kabuliyat but no lease, the executant of the kabuliyat cannot utilise the contents of that document against the owner of the land for his own benefit. But the owner of the land can utilise the contents of the kabuliyat to prove what the executant of the kabuliyat has undertaken to do. A. BIJAI NARAIN SINGH v. PARBHU NARAIN SINGH 395

—Local inspection—Remarks by presiding officer, value of.

Where in a case before a Court the presiding officer makes a local inspection and puts on the record some remarks about his observations, they cannot be considered as evidence in the case. O. HEARSEY v. KARAM SINGH, 3 O. L. J. 59; 19 O. C. 374 115

EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872)—Estoppel—Appeal—Acceptance of benefit under order appealed against 804 —Ss. 13, 35, 67—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 143, possessory order under, recital of claim in—Admissibility in proof of title.

Recitals of the claims of parties contained in possessory orders passed under section 143 of the Criminal Procedure Code, whether inter partes or not, are not admissible in evidence to prove title under section 13 of the Evidence Act or on general principles.

Neither are they admissible under section 63 as an account of the contents of a document, not being oral, nor as entries in a public record under section 35. C. RAM SUNDER GOPE SIKDAR v. HARIBALA DHURI 911 —Ss. 21, 31—Admissions as to non-existing right, value of—Title.

A mere admission cannot create a title which was non-existent, though it would have been binding upon the person making it if the title admitted had really existed. C. HARI MOHAN PAL v. KAILASH CHANDRA DHUR 983 —Ss. 24, 25, 26, 27—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 162—Incriminating statements to Police officers and Headman, admissibility of—Statement of one accused against another.

Incriminating statements made to a Police officer while in custody are inadmissible in evidence.

EVIDENCE ACT—contd.

Sections 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act preclude admission of a statement by one accused against another and also of a confirming statement by another accused in reply to questions put by Police Constables in the Headman's presence.

An inculpatory statement by an accused to a Headman, in consequence of the latter telling him it was better he spoke the truth because if the other side called witnesses, the truth against him would come out, is inadmissible under section 24. L B ZERA v. EMPEROR 314 — Ss. 24, 25, 28—'Person in authority', meaning of—Zemindar, whether is 'person in authority.'

Section 24 of the Evidence Act refers not to a person whom the accused may regard as being in authority but to a person who actually is in authority.

The main test as to when a person is deemed to be a 'person in authority' within the meaning of the section is, whether he stands in such relations to the accused as imply some power of control or interference in regard to his prosecution.

Zemindars qua zemindars are not necessarily 'persons in authority'. The question must be decided in each case upon its particular circumstances; but whenever zemindars are directly concerned in an investigation by the direction of the Police then they clearly are 'persons in authority' within the meaning of section 24 of the Evidence Act.

Co-villagers of an accused person cannot be regarded as 'persons in authority' from the mere fact of their being the principal residents of the village. S LOUNG v. EMPEROR, 10 S. L. R. 140 42

— S. 25 42, 314

— Ss. 26, 27 314

— S. 28 42

— S. 31 983

— S. 32—Account books, entries in, admissibility of.

Entries in an account book are inadmissible in evidence under section 32 of the Evidence Act, if it is not proved that the person who made them is dead.

Semble.—Entries of payments of money made through named persons in an account book kept by a deceased servant in the ordinary course of his business are admissible in evidence to prove the payments under section 32 of the Evidence Act; but persons through whom the payments were made must be called to prove that the payments were in fact made. PAT SEW PRASAD v. RADHA MOHAN SAHAY 877

— S. 32 (2) 424

— S. 32 (5)—Pedigree—Admissibility in evidence—Settlement, genealogical table put in at time of, value of.

Some papers were put in at the time of the settlement of a village. The first of them was a genealogical table. At the end of the papers were the names of some of the persons whose names appeared in the said table. None of them affixed their signatures. It was stated that the village patwari signed on behalf of the majority and that certain other persons signed on behalf of the remainder. The Settlement Officer in charge affixed at the end a statement that the owners of the village had verified the correctness of the statements. This verification took place after the khewat of the village had been prepared, so that the entries in the genealogical table could not be deemed to have been utilised in any way for the preparation of the khewat. It was not clear whether the attached names were placed at the end of the papers to record acceptance of the correctness of all or of only the last of the papers. Nor was this fact made clear by the Settlement Officer's order recording the verification:

EVIDENCE ACT—contd.

Held, that under the above circumstances the genealogical table was not admissible in evidence. O KASHI SINGH v. RAM NARAIN, 3 O. L. J. 560; 19 O. C. 321 138

— S. 35 911

— S. 65 (a)—Secondary evidence—Original document in possession of defendant.

Semble.—Where an original document is in the possession of the defendant who knows from the plaint that he would be required to produce it but does not produce it, and the plaintiff's evidence that he searched for it remains uncontradicted, the latter is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of the document under section 65 (a) of the Evidence Act. A MUHAMMAD KAMIL v. HABIBULLAH 794

— S. 67 911

— S. 91—Evidence of payment of money—Proof.

Obiter dictum.—Where a receipt for earnest-money is not admissible in evidence, payment of the amount can be proved aliunde by virtue of section 91 of the Evidence Act. P CHUTTAN LAL v. MUL CHAND, 18 P. R. 1917 822

— S. 91—Oral evidence to prove payment of earnest-money, admissibility of 132

— S. 92—Landlord and tenant—Covenant in kabuliyat on assurance by landlord that it would not be enforced, whether binding.

Semble.—The enumeration in the first proviso to section 92 of the Evidence Act of the circumstances which may invalidate a document or entitle a person to a decree or order relating thereto is not exhaustive. C NADIR CHAND SANA v. BIRENDRA NATH DUTT, 20 C. W. N. 1067 126

— S. 92—Mortgage-deed, separate arrangement in contravention of terms of, whether can be proved.

In view of section 92 of the Evidence Act, proof of a separate arrangement in direct contravention of the terms of a mortgage-deed is inadmissible. O MUHAMMAD HUSSAIN v. MUHAMMAD ASGHAR, 3 O. L. J. 462; 19 O. C. 328 23

— S. 102 767

— S. 106—Matters within the special knowledge of a party.

In order to lay the burden of proving a particular matter on a party on the ground that he has special knowledge thereof, it must be shown that the knowledge is in the nature of something peculiar. PAT LACHMI NARAIN MARWARI v. CHAITEMAN OF THE RANCHI MUNICIPALITY, 1 P. L. J. 168 269

— S. 110 767

EVIDENCE ACT—concl'd.

— S. 114, ILL. (g)—Defendant, failure of, to produce account-books, effect of.

Where the plaintiff has failed to prove his case, the omission by the defendant to produce his account-books does not give rise to a presumption that, if produced, they would have lent support to the plaintiff's case. PAT BALDHARI SINGH v. BASAR ALI KALAI 967

— S. 115 825

— S. 123—Complaint on oath forming basis of warrant, right of accused to inspection of.

Non-production by a Court of the complaint on oath which forms the foundation of a warrant issued under section 6, is not improper, if the object of the production is to ascertain merely the name of the informer.

Per Fawcett, A. J. C.—The Court should decline to sanction any step which would in practice almost necessarily result in the disclosure of the name of the informer, contrary to the provisions of section 123 of the Evidence Act. S BAGHUMAL WADHUMAL v. EMPEROR, 10 S. L. R. 134; 18 CR. L. J. 70 54

— S. 125 54

— Ss. 157, 159, 32 (2) — Chaukidar's diary, entries of births and deaths in, made by third persons at the request of chaukidar, admissibility of.

A chaukidar who was an illiterate person got other people to make entries in his diary for him relating to the birth and death of a certain person. The persons who made these entries were called at the trial and deposed that they had made the entries at the request of the chaukidar. The chaukidar was dead at the time of the trial.

Held, that the entries were not admissible in evidence under section 32 (2) but were admissible under section 157 and possibly also under section 159 of the Evidence Act. PAT NAINA KOER v. GOBARDHAN SINGH, 2 P. L. J. 42 424

— S. 159 424

EXECUTION—Consent decree—Ambiguity—Court, power of, to look into petition of compromise.

An executing Court can go behind a consent decree and look at the terms of the compromise in accordance with which the decree was passed, in order properly to understand what the decree was. C JOYANUDDIN KHAN v. JAMIRUDDIN SARKAR 916 — Decree, splitting up of—Acceptance of portions of decretal debt from different judgment-debtors.

The acceptance by a decree-holder of sums tendered by different judgment-debtors under the same decree from time to time with an undertaking not to proceed with execution against those judgment-debtors, without, however, releasing them from liability under the decree, does not split up the decree so as to make the decree-holder bound to pursue his remedy against each judgment-debtor only to the extent of his separated liability. C JOGENDRA PRASAD MITRA v. ASUTOSH GOSWAMI, 24 C. L. J. 462 738 — Instalment decree—Default—Option of decree-holder to claim execution of whole amount.

When, under a decree payable by instalments the whole decretal amount becomes due on default in the payment of one instalment, the decree-holder has not the option either to compel immediate payment of the whole amount due under the decree or to recover the money in accordance with the instalments. C JOYANUDDIN KHAN v. JAMIRUDDIN SARKAR 916

EXECUTION—concl'd.

— Sale proclamation—Value of property to be sold, ascertainment of—Court, duty of 872 — Uncertified payment, power of executing Court to recognise.

It is not competent to an execution Court to allow credit for uncertified payments even where the omission on the part of the decree-holder to give credit for them amounts to an act of fraud. C JOGENDRA PRASAD MITRA v. ASUTOSH GOSWAMI, 24 C. L. J. 462 738

— PROCEEDINGS—Connected suits for partition, decrees in—Identity of subject-matter and parties—Execution application, dismissal of, on ground that relief was granted on previous application in connected suit—Subsequent application for division of specific omitted properties—Patent mistake of Court, effect of—Res judicata 354

EXPLOSIVES ACT (IV of 1884), rules under—Clove-crackers, possession of, without license, whether legal—“Toy fire-works.”

Clove-crackers or lavangi-crackers are “toy fire-works” within the meaning of rule 3 issued under the Explosives Act and are, therefore, exempt from rule 35 imposing the necessity of a license for possessing them. B EMPEROR v. RACHAPA GURAPPA HATTARVAT, 18 BOM. L. R. 556 491

GANJAM AND VIZAGAPATAM AGENCY RULES, RR. 10 (4), 18, 20—Review of order passed ex parte—Jurisdiction of Governor's Agent—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151—Order passed without notice—Remedy of party aggrieved.

Every litigant is entitled to be heard before an order is made to be his prejudice, and the proper remedy of a party, against whom an order has been made without hearing him is to apply to the same authority for a re-hearing.

Apart from the provisions of section 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure, a Court has an inherent power to rectify any inadvertent mistakes made by it and when a party can have a mistake corrected by the Court which made the mistakes, he should adopt that course rather than resort to the Appellate Court.

Where the Agent to the Governor, Vizagapatam, set aside, after hearing the parties, an ex parte order previously made by himself without notice to the parties and without hearing them, and passed a final order correcting the mistake:

Held, that though the Agency Rules did not in express terms invest the Agent with the power to review his own order, the Agent had inherent power to rectify a mistake committed by him without hearing the parties and the High Court would not, on technical grounds, interfere with a decision that was correct on the merits. M RAGHUNADA DOSS v. MAHARAJA OF JEYPORE, 31 M. L. J. 319; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 208; 4 L. W. 240 385

— RR. 18, 20 385

GAYA MUNICIPAL RULES, R. 1, whether ultra vires 854

GENERAL CLAUSES ACT (X OF 1897, S. 6—'Right' or 'privilege' 292

GIFT—Will—Deeds executed simultaneously—Statement in Will as to revocability of gift, effect of 69

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT (5 & 6 GEO. V, C. 61), S. 65 575

— S. 106 607

— S. 107 129, 607

— S. 107—High Court, power of interference of—Judicial and administrative acts.

Obiter dictum.—The jurisdiction of a High Court to interfere under section 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915, extends not only to judicial but also to administrative acts of the lower Courts. PAT RAGHUNATH SINGH v. HAZARI SAHU, 1 P. L. W. 111; 2 P. L. J. 130 872

— S. 107—"Superintendence," meaning of.

Per Atkinson, J.—The 'general superintendence' vested in the High Court under section 107 of the Government of India Act applies only to cases where a subordinate officer, be he a Judge or otherwise, acts without jurisdiction or in excess of jurisdiction. When a duly constituted officer acting within jurisdiction makes a charge and proceeds to hold an enquiry, the High Court will not interfere under the Statute unless he has grossly abused his powers. PAT JANAK KISORE, In the matter of, 1 P. L. J. 576 484

GOVERNOR-GENERAL-IN-COUNCIL, power of, to pass Act embodying provisions of Ordinances—Ordinance III of 1914, s. 11, effect of—Jurisdiction of Courts to question orders of internment passed under Emergency Legislation Continuance Act 48

GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT (VIII OF 1890)—Father not having care or custody of son, remedy of—Suit, maintainability of—District Court, jurisdiction of.

A father who has never had the care or custody of his infant child can file a regular suit for the custody of his son, but cannot successfully call upon a Court by an application under the Guardians and Wards Act for an order upon the person in whose custody the infant is to hand him over to the father.

The dictum of the Privy Council in Mrs. Annie Besant v. Narayaniah, 24 Ind. Cas. 290; 16 Bom. L. R. 625; 18 O. W. N. 1089; 27 M. L. J. 30; (1914) M. W. N. 585; 16 M. L. T. 165; 20 O. L. J. 253; 12 A. L. J. 1155; 1 L. W. 520; 88 M. 807, to the effect that a suit inter partes is not the proper proceeding is not intended to be of such general application as virtually to overrule the decision in Sharifa v. Mune Khan, 25 B. 574; 3 Bom. L. R. 167.

The jurisdiction of the District Court in the matter of minors is defined by the Guardians and Wards Act and it has no inherent power to make orders with reference to minors which are not expressly conferred upon it by that Act. B. ACHRATLAL JEKISENDAS v. CHIMANTAL PARBHUDAS, 18 Bom. L. R. 582; 40 B. 600 215

— Ss. 7, 34—Guardian, conditional appointment of, when takes effect—Interim acts of natural guardian, validity of

Where a guardian is appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act unconditionally the order takes effect at once, although under section 34 of the Guardians and Wards Act he may be required to furnish security subsequently; but where the order is conditional upon the furnishing of security, it does not take effect until the security has been furnished.

GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT—concl'd.

There is nothing in section 34 of the Guardians and Wards Act taking away the general power possessed by the Court of imposing conditions upon persons who are appointed guardians, and any rule which makes the appointment of a guardian to take effect only on furnishing security is not ultra vires.

Where a guardian is appointed conditionally on his furnishing security, all bona fide acts done by the natural guardian of the minor before the security is actually furnished by the Court's nominee are valid.

WM. SUBBA NAIK v. RAMA AIYAR, 5 L. W. 261 892

— Ss. 27, 32—Minor—Guardian, appointment of—Trust—Mutawalli, minor entitled to be appointed—Court, power of.

A guardian of the property of a minor interested in a trust can be appointed in respect of his interest under the trust, in order that the interest may be protected and the benefits thereof secured for the minor.

Where under the terms of a trust deed the mutawalli-ship devolves upon a minor in respect of whom a guardianship application is made, the District Judge is entitled to pass orders for the performance of the duties of the mutawalli pending either the coming of age of the minor or the institution of a regular suit by some person or persons interested in the endowment to contest the arrangement made by him. A. KHATUN BEGAM v. EJAZ AHMAD, 15 A. L. J. 132 885

— S. 30—Mortgage by certificated guardian without Court's sanction—Minor's right to avoid—Burden of proof—Interest on mortgage of minor's property.

A mortgage of a minor's property executed by his certificated guardian without sanction by the District Judge can be avoided by the minor only on restoration of the benefit actually received by him under the transaction. But it is for the mortgagee to show to what extent the money raised by the mortgage was applied for the benefit of the minor's estate.

Where in a mortgage-bond executed by a certificated guardian of a minor the rate of interest was Rs. 7-8-0 with annual rests, which rate was not sanctioned by the Court nor placed before it:

Held, that the mortgagee should not get more than 12 per cent simple interest. C. MANSARAM DAS v. AH-MAD HOSAIN, 21 C. W. N. 63 880

— S. 32 885

— S. 34 892

HIGH COURTS ACT, 1861, (24 & 25 VIC., C. 104), Ss. 8, 9, 11, 15 699

HIGHWAYS, public—Dedication to class, legality of—Right of user by any member of public—Procession, obstruction to—Cause of action—Burden of proof—Pleadings—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. I, r. 8—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42.

Public highways cannot be dedicated to a class or to a limited section of the public and such dedication is no dedication at all.

HIGHWAYS—concl'd.

All other rights over other persons' property are private, whether they belong to a class or to an individual and whether they arise by grant, license, easement, customary right or any other origin.

It is settled law in India that every member or class of the public is entitled to use a public highway for conducting a religious or ceremonial procession without interference by any other member or class.

Even if there is no evidence of user for the particular purpose by the persons claiming the right, the right so to use them at any time is legally vested in them.

Where the ownership of a road is unknown, dedication of it to the public will be presumed from proof of its user by the public.

Semble.—Mere obstruction to a procession without proof of loss of property or personal injury may give rise to a cause of action.

But the obstruction must be specifically alleged in the plaint, and where it is found against, the suit is liable to be dismissed. A plaintiff cannot be allowed to prosecute his claim on the ground of a denial of his right by the defendant, which was not averred in the plaint. M. SUBBAYA NADAN v. AIVAVOO REDDI, (1917) M. W. N. 70 977

HINDU LAW, applicability of—'Hindu', who is.

In order that Hindu Law should apply to a person it is not necessary that he should have been born a Hindu.

The word 'Hindu' in section 13 of the Burma Laws Act bears the same meaning as it does in section 331 of the Succession Act and section 2 of the Probate and Administration Act and does not necessarily mean an orthodox Hindu or one who is a member of one of the four castes.

Hindu Law is applicable to a Hindu until he definitely renounces or abandons his religion.

Per Ormond, J.—Where an enactment speaks only of the three communities, viz, Hindu, Muhammadan and Buddhist, it is intended to embrace all communities which have a religion which is an offshoot of any one of those three religions. Thus the term "Hindu" includes all who are called Hindus in common parlance.

Per Twomey, J.—It is not within the province of Civil Courts to determine questions of orthodoxy.

In order to determine whether a certain person is a Hindu, it is immaterial whether he is recognised as a Hindu by the orthodox caste Hindus, the only question being whether he himself adheres to some form of Brahminical worship and belief.

Caste regulations do not constitute Hinduism though they flourish among Hindus. L. B. MAUNG CHIT MAUNG v. MA YAIT 780

—Caste regulations, force of.

Caste regulations do not constitute Hinduism though they flourish among Hindus. L. B. MAUNG CHIT MAUNG v. MA YAIT 780

—Muhammadan Law—Kutchi Memons, law applicable to 72

—ADOPTION, validity of—Implied prohibition 40

HINDU LAW—cont'd.

—ALIENATION—Widow, relinquishment by—Reversioners—Acceleration of estate, what amounts to—Alienation by widow—Consent of nearest reversioner, effect of.

In order to accelerate the vesting of an estate in the nearest reversioner there must be complete surrender of the widow's estate.

The rule that a transfer made by a Hindu widow with the consent of the nearest reversioner will take effect as against the more remote reversioner is applicable only to cases of transfers for consideration, and should not be extended to a case where a transfer has been made by way of gift. A. KHAWANI SINGH v. CHET RAM, 14 A. L. J. 972; 89 A. 1 86

—by widow—Reversioners, remote, right of, to question—Lapse of time—Legal necessity, proof of—Recitals in documents—Adequacy of proof—Torts of widow, expenses for, whether can be charged on estate—Maintenance and kist, debt incurred for payment of, when legal—Burden of proof.

The fact that the next reversioner is time-barred from claiming a widow's estate is no ground for allowing a remoter reversioner to do so, when the reversion has fallen in.

Mere recitals in a sale-deed as to the existence of legal necessity for an alienation are not of themselves any evidence of necessity; there must be evidence abundant.

In the case of alienations by a Hindu widow made a long time ago, Courts should not insist on as strict proof of legal necessity as in the case of recent transactions. In such cases, though the burden of proof which lies on the purchaser is not shifted on to the reversioner, the Courts should approach the evidence with a much more indulgent mind than when the alienation took place a few years before suit. But where evidence as to the purposes for which the debts were incurred which led to the alienation is actually before the Court, it must be satisfied that such purposes amount to legal necessity before the alienation is upheld.

The private expenses of the widow are not a legal necessity and expenses incurred by her in litigation that arose out of her own tortious acts cannot legally be charged on her husband's estate.

Prima facie the conversion of a charge payable from the income to a charge on the corpus is an improper act on the part of the widow.

Maintenance charges and kist should be paid, where possible, from the current income of the estate, and, in the absence of good reason why they should not be so paid, a debt borrowed for this purpose is not a proper charge on the estate in the widow's hands. M. BHUVARAGHA IYENGAR v. NATESA IYER, 5 L. W. 127; (1917) M. W. N. 40 768

—CUSTOM, essentials of—Temple, ancient—Intention of founder—Presumption—Transfer of right to receive offerings made to temple, validity of—Public policy.

Where the origin of a foundation is lost in antiquity, then unless a custom to the contrary is established, it must be presumed that the original founder intended, in making his delegation of the powers of worship to certain persons, that these powers should remain in their hands for the good of the temple and the convenience of the public, and that it is against public policy that persons to whom those powers of worship have been delegated should of their own free will make a delegation of those powers to a third party.

HINDU LAW—contd.

In the case of such a foundation a custom permitting alienation is not established by six undisputed transfers.

A transfer of the right to receive offerings made to a temple is, therefore, void as against public policy. PAT PUNCHA v. BINDESWARI 960 —JOINT FAMILY—Alienec from co-parcener, whether entitled to joint possession—His position and rights.

The alienee from a co-parcener in a joint Hindu family is not entitled to possession of the alienor's share as a tenant-in-common. His only right is to obtain by partition the share to which his alienor was entitled. M KOTA BALABHADRA PATRO v. KHETRA DOSS, 4 L. W. 99; 31 M. L. J. 275; (1917) M. W. N. 149 168 —Ancestral trade—Debts—Liability of co-parceners.

In the case of an ancestral business of a Hindu family all the members of the family, including the minors, are liable for debts incurred in the course of the business and such liability is not confined to their shares in the assets of the business but extends to their shares in the family property. M MUTHAYA PILLAI v. TINNEVELLY SOUTH INDIA BANK, LTD, 5 L. W. 341 230

—Mitakshara—Charge by one member, whether survives him.

One member of a Mitakshara joint family cannot deal with his share in the property of the joint family so as to create a charge which will survive him. On his death the charge created by him is extinguished and every member of the joint family, whether born before or after the creation of the charge, is entitled to plead that no charge subsists upon the joint family estate. PAT JOWALA PRASAD v. PRATAP UDAI NATH SARI DEO, 1 P. L. J. 497 184

—Co-parcener, one, sale by, how far binding on other co-parceners—Legal necessity—Purchaser, rights of.

A sale of joint property by a co-parcener, though made without legal necessity, is valid to the extent of the vendor's share.

If a vendee wishes to stand by a sale which is valid only partially, he must be content with the vendor's share, but if he wishes to repudiate the transaction altogether, his remedy is only against the vendor in a suit for the return of the price paid, on the ground that the consideration for the payment failed. N BHOJRAJ v. NATHURAM, 12 N. L. R. 161 498 —estate—Mitakshara—Partition—Intention of one member to separate, whether sufficient.

Under the Mitakshara Law a definite and unambiguous indication by one member of a joint undivided family of his intention to separate himself and to enjoy his share in severalty will amount to partition, if the intention is unequivocal and clearly expressed; and it must depend upon the facts of each case whether partition is effected thereby.

HINDU LAW—contd.

The intention to separate may be evinced either by explicit declaration or by conduct, and if it is an inference derivable from conduct, it will be for the Court to determine whether it was unequivocal and explicit.

A separation from the joint family involving the severance of the joint status so far as the separating member is concerned, with all the legal consequences resulting therefrom, is quite distinct from the de facto division into specific shares of the property held until then jointly. One is a matter of individual decision, the desire on the part of any one member to sever himself from the joint family and to enjoy his hitherto undefined or unspecified share separately from the others without being subject to the obligations which arise from the joint status; whilst the other is the natural result from his decision, the division and separation of his share which may be arrived at either by private agreement among the parties, or, on failure of that, by the intervention of the Court. Once the decision has been unequivocally expressed and clearly intimated to his co-sharers, his right to obtain and possess the share to which he admittedly has a title is unimpeachable; neither can the co-sharers question it nor can the Court examine his conscience to find out whether his reasons for separation are well founded or sufficient; the Court has simply to give effect to his right to have his share allocated separately from the others.

It is a mistake to suppose that severance of status can take place only by agreement. The agreement only recognises existing rights in each individual member which he is entitled to assert at any time he likes.

Appellant's husband served a registered notice on the manager of the Mitakshara joint family of which he was a member, saying in explicit terms that his desire was to get his share partitioned and asking the manager to partition the joint estate without delay. A few days after he instituted the suit for partition but died during the pendency of the suit:

Held, that nothing could be more unequivocal or more clearly expressed than the conduct of the appellant's husband in indicating his intention to separate himself and enjoy his share in severalty by the said notice coupled with the suit; that these acts amounted to a separation with all its legal consequences; and that on the death of the appellant's husband during the pendency of the suit the appellant inherited his share and was entitled to continue the suit. P C GIRJA RAI v. SADASHIV DHUNDIRAJ, 20 M. L. T. 78; 20 C. W. N. 1085; 14 A. L. J. 822; 12 N. L. R. 113; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 65; 18 Bom. L. R. 621; 4 L. W. 114; 24 C. L. J. 207; 31 M. L. J. 485; 43 C. 1031 321 —JOINT FAMILY, liability of, for debts—Mortgage decree—Manager, whether represents other members—One member not party to suit—Redemption—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 1.

The interests of all members of a joint Hindu family are liable for payment of money borrowed for the purpose of paying Government revenue.

HINDU LAW—contd.

Where all members of a joint Hindu family are effectively represented in a mortgage suit in which the family property is sold, one of them cannot afterwards maintain a suit for redemption on the ground that he was no party to the suit. PAT RANJIT PRASAD TEWARI v. RAMJATAN PANDEY, 1 P. L. W. 197 833

— JOINT FAMILY—Minor—Guardian ad litem, father, whether proper 389

— Partition, what constitutes.

A division of rights between the members of a joint Hindu family is sufficient to constitute a partition without actual physical division of the property itself. O RAMADHIN v. BISHESHAH DAYAL, 3 O. L. J. 603 111

— , separated members of, suit between—Applicability of section 66, Civil Procedure Code. 111

— PARTITION—Mitakshara—Mother's share—Stridhan, mother in possession of, effect of—"Estoppel against estoppel setteth the matter at large," meaning of—Arbitration and award.

On a partition between her sons and step-sons, a mother is, according to the Mitakshara, entitled to a share equal to that of her son.

The maxim 'estoppel against estoppel setteth the matter at large' explained.

Plaintiff, acting as guardian of her infant son, agreed with defendant her step-son to partition the family property and an arbitrator was appointed to effect the partition. The plaintiff applied to the arbitrator to allot her a maintenance allowance, which he did in the award. Plaintiff then applied on behalf of her son and of herself to have the award filed in Court. On defendant's objection, however, the award was modified, and plaintiff's maintenance was disallowed as against the defendant. Plaintiff thereupon filed a suit for a partition of her one-third share:

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a one-third share in the family property:

(2) that the effect of setting aside of the award in regard to her maintenance was to restore the status quo ante and to justify the plaintiff in claiming her share in the family property.

Obiter dictum.—There may be cases where the possession of separate property by a mother might have the effect of reducing pro tanto the share which she may be entitled to on partition. O SARUP CHAND v. PANI, 19 O. C. 240 198

— SUCCESSION—Reversioners, nature of, rights of—Adverse possession—Possession adverse to daughter, whether adverse to reversioners 733 — WIDOW—Mortgage by widow—Legal necessity—Sale in execution of mortgage decree, whether passes husband's estate.

Where a widow is forced to mortgage not only her life-interest but also the estate itself for a legal necessity, the enforcement of that mortgage must be considered to be of equal legal necessity with the actual mortgage itself, and the sale of the property in execution of a decree based on the mortgage would pass not only the life-interest of the widow but also the estate of the husband. PAT JAGERNATH PRASAD SHAH DEO v. KURARA KURAR, 1 P. L. W. 77 403

HINDU LAW—contd.

— WIDOW—Surrender of estate to reversioners—Acceleration, when valid—Alienation and acceleration, distinction between—Legal necessity—Adoption—Adopted son, rights of, to question alienations before adoption—Maxim 'a man cannot take advantage of his own fraud,' applicability of.

There are only two ways in which a Hindu widow in the enjoyment of the normal widow's estate can convey a greater interest than that which she herself has, the one is by acceleration, the other by alienation for legal necessity.

The notions conveyed by the said two terms are not only irreconcilable, but virtually antagonistic. In strictness no acceleration can be an alienation and no alienation can be an acceleration.

The true doctrine of acceleration, which has been incorporated with the general body of Hindu Law by the decision of the Privy Council in Behari Lal v. Madho Lal Ahir Gayawal, 19 I. A. 30; 19 C. 23G; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 88; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 603, is no more than the English doctrine of merger subjected to the peculiar conditions and requirements of the law of the joint Hindu family. It amounts in effect to this, that a Hindu widow enjoying the normal Hindu widow's life-estate may, if she please, surrender it in favour of the next reversioner, and, if she does so, it amounts in law precisely to the same thing as though the widow had at that moment died a natural death. Its essential condition is that the interposed life-estate should be entirely withdrawn and not merely a fractional part of it.

For the purposes of an alienation, if the widow is to convey more than her life-interest, it must be for purposes of legal necessity.

The consent of the reversioners to a Hindu widow's alienation is no more than a factor in the proof of legal necessity. It may always be used in support of the alienee's contention that there was legal necessity, but per se it will not be sufficient to do away with all other proof.

The maxim that 'a man shall not take advantage of his own fraud' is quite distinct from the doctrine of estoppel. Two things have to be looked at in applying the maxim, (1) whether the person against whom this maxim is sought to be used has ever committed any fraud at all; (2) whether assuming that he has committed constructive fraud, that has given him any advantage in the particular issue he is contesting. The maxim applies to a great number of cases in which there need be no estoppel at all.

An adoption will not divest estates vested before it was made. The adopted son can, however, question an alienation as void and not binding on him as and from the date of his adoption, as an alienation requires for its validation legal necessity.

One B, a Hindu widow, having mortgaged her husband's estate in 1893 to 1st defendant, the plaintiffs as next reversioners sued in 1893 for cancellation of the mortgage. The matter was referred to arbitrators, who in December 1894 drew up an award whereby (1) plaintiffs were to redeem the mortgage on payment of Rs. 1,700 to 1st defendant and the latter was to reconvey the properties to them; (2) out of the properties so reconveyed, the plaintiffs were to give to the widow a house and 18 bighas of land for her maintenance. Nothing, however, was done upon the award for many years, nor did the parties get it made a rule of Court. The 1st defendant, mortgagee, sub-mortgaged the property for Rs 1,000 to one D and under that mortgage he attorned to the latter. In 1906 the widow sued to redeem the mortgage, ignoring the award. That suit was dismissed on the ground that by the award there was no right of redemption in the widow. About this time, plaintiffs obtained a conveyance of the properties from 1st defendant which they got compulsorily registered. Under its terms they redeemed the sub-mortgage to D, but the 1st defendant refused to deliver the properties to the plaintiffs. In 1909, the widow adopted the 2nd defendant, the son of 1st defendant, and the properties were delivered to him by the latter. Plaintiffs instituted the present suit for possession, alleging that the effect of the award was an acceleration of their rights and that the subsequent adoption of 2nd defendant could not defeat the estate already vested in them. They also alleged that the adoption was a fraudulent act of defendants acting in concert to defeat plaintiffs and that 2nd defendant could not be permitted to take advantage of his own fraud:

HINDU LAW—contd.

Held, (1) that the award of 1893 was in no sense an acceleration as the entire interest of the widow did not pass to the plaintiffs, but there was provision for the immediate restitution to her of a substantial portion of the property, which violated the fundamental basis of the theoretical doctrine of acceleration;

(2) that the transaction could only be regarded as an alienation by the widow, to validate which the plaintiffs were bound to show legal necessity;

(3) that the 2nd defendant, as adopted son of the last male owner, was entitled to question the alienation as being void against him as from the date of his adoption;

(4) that as the adoption was legal per se, the resort to it as a means of asserting one's rights did not amount to fraud and the Court could not consider the meanness about the line of conduct pursued by the 1st defendant to get his son adopted by the widow. B MOTI RAJJI v. LALDAS JIBHAI, 18 Bom. L. R. 954; 41 B. 93 945

— WIDOW—Widow's estate—Acquisition of occupancy rights during lifetime of widow—Eviction by reversioners, validity of.

Occupancy rights acquired during the time when an estate was in the hands of a Hindu widow cannot be questioned by the reversioners after her death. PAT HARMANOGI NARAIN SINGH v. GANOUR SINGH 260 — Widow's estate, nature of—Reversionary heirs, position of—Suit to restrain waste—Waste not proved—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42—Declaration of reversioner's right—Form of decree—Decree awarding declaration while dismissing substantial claim, utility of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VII, r. 7—Further relief.

A Hindu widow's right with respect to the estate of her deceased husband is of the nature of a right of property; her position is that of owner; her powers in that character are, however, limited but so long as she is alive, no one has any vested interest in the succession.

HINDU LAW—contd.

A reversionary heir, although only having a contingent interest, is recognised by the Courts as having a right to demand that the estate be kept free from waste and free from danger during its enjoyment by the widow or other owner for life; but such heir thus appealing to the Court does so in a representative capacity, so that the corpus of the estate may pass unimpaired to those entitled to the reversion.

A Court should not entertain a suit for a mere declaration that plaintiff is the reversioner of a Hindu widow, as such a declaration would be premature and be subject to being rendered valueless by the development of events.

In a suit by a reversioner for an injunction to restrain waste and for appointment of a receiver, it is not competent to the Court, after dismissing the claim for these reliefs, to make a declaration that plaintiff is the nearest reversioner to defendant, even to prevent future litigation between the parties. It is not legitimate to give a plaintiff, under cover of a request for 'further relief,' after all the substantial heads of a claim have failed, greater right to obtain a declaration than he would have had if such a declaration had been asked directly and unaccompanied by other and unfounded claims. P C JANAKI AMMAL v. NARAYANASAMI AITAR, 20 M. L. T. 168; 31 M. L. J. 225; 14 A. L. J. 997; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 188; 20 C. W. N. 1323; 39 M. 634; 13 Bom. L. R. 856; 24 C. L. J. 309; 4 L. W. 530 161

HOME RULE, or self-government for India on Colonial lines, agitation for, whether lawful—Methods of advocacy—Legitimate discussion and propaganda, rules governing 525

INDIAN COUNCILS ACT, 1861 (24 & 25 Vic. C. 67), Ss. 22, 23 48

INSOLVENCY—Infant, whether can be adjudged insolvent.

The law does not contemplate that an infant should be adjudged an insolvent, under any circumstances even in respect of judgment-debts or necessities. C SITAL PRASAD, In re, 20 C. W. N. 1065; 43 C. 1157 663

INSOLVENCY PROCEEDINGS—Creditor setting up debtor's joint family—Debtor denying creditor's assertion—Order based merely on debtor's statement, bad—Practice.

Where a debtor applied to be declared an insolvent and one of the creditors objected, asserting that the debtor and his sons formed a joint Hindu family owning considerable property not notified in the schedule:

Held, that an order of adjudication should not be passed in favour of the debtor merely on his statement as to the non-existence of the joint family, without giving an opportunity to the creditor of proving his assertion. O PRAG v. RAM LAL, 3 O. L. J. 507 199

INTERNATIONAL LAW, Private—Foreign judgment —Judgment in personam, enforcement of, re title to or possession of foreign land Domicile of parties within jurisdiction of foreign Courts, effect of—Judgment declaring status of parties, recognition of, by forum rei sitae—Judgment of French Indian Court removing trustees and appointing new trustees, enforceability of, in British Indian Court where trust property is situate—Will, construction of—Adoption, validity of—Implied prohibition.

Per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J. Phillips, J. dissenting).—The Courts of a foreign country have no jurisdiction to adjudicate upon the title or the right to the possession of any immoveable property not situate in such country or generally to give redress for any injury to any immoveable not situate therein. In the case of immoveables the judgment pronounced of the forum rei sitae is absolutely conclusive. It makes no difference that the parties affected by the judgment are domiciled in foreign territory and its Court has, therefore, jurisdiction over them in personam. The judgment of the foreign court will, however, be recognized by the forum situs only to the extent of carrying out any obligations on the parties arising out of contracts or of trusts.

A judgment of a French Indian Court removing trustees appointed by the Will of a testator and substituting others in their stead cannot be enforced by an action in a British Court for possession from the discharged trustees of some immoveable properties covered by the Will and situated within the jurisdiction of the latter court, especially when Letters of Administration have been granted to the defendants by the law in force in British India. The British Courts will not remove defendants from the trusteeship solely by virtue of the judgment of the French Court unless the plaintiffs have them removed and get themselves appointed by means of a suit in the Court having jurisdiction over the trust property in British India.

Per Phillips, J.—The principle on which a suit can be brought on a foreign judgment is that the rights of the parties have been already investigated and determined by a competent tribunal. In an action on a foreign judgment not impeached for fraud, the original cause of action cannot be re-investigated, if the judgment was pronounced by a competent tribunal having jurisdiction. This principle applies alike to a judgment in personam, to a judgment in rem, and to a judgment or sentence of divorce or any other judgment having reference to status.

A judgment, therefore, of a French Indian Court, removing trustees appointed by the Will of a testator for the administration of charities in respect of properties, the bulk of which is situate within its jurisdiction, and appointing others in their stead is a judgment virtually regulating the administration of a trust and conferring a status on the persons appointed as trustees. Such persons can sue for possession from the discharged trustees of trust property situate in British India in a Court having jurisdiction over it solely by virtue of the judgment of the French Court. The suit cannot be treated as one for the removal of trustees who are already removed by a competent Court but a suit based on a foreign judgment which has recognised plaintiffs' title to administer the trust and to recover trust properties.

INTERNATIONAL LAW—concl.

The prohibition to adopt a son may be express or implied. Where a testator by his Will provided for the contingency of his having a son in these words, viz, "if by divine favour I have a child of the male sex", they mean only a natural son and do not even impliedly confer an authority to adopt.

One S., a resident of Pondicherry, left a Will inter alia bequeathing large properties for charities, the bulk of which was situate in Pondicherry and the rest in Madras. Defendants Nos. 1 to 3 and two others, who were executors under the Will, having obtained Probate in the Pondicherry Court, obtained Letters of Administration in the Madras High Court in respect of the property situate in Madras. After they had administered the estate, defendants Nos. 1 to 3 were removed from their office by a decree of the Pondicherry Court which appointed plaintiffs in their stead. The fourth defendant was the widow of the testator who adopted the 5th defendant and the 6th defendant was the natural mother of the 5th, all of whom were alleged to be in possession of the Madras properties. Plaintiffs instituted the present suit on the original side of the High Court for possession of the trust properties situate in Madras from defendants. Mr. Justice Wallis decreed the suit, holding that the judgment of the Pondicherry Court was binding on him. On appeal, Held, per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J., (Phillips, J., dissenting), that the suit was not maintainable by reason per se of the judgment of Pondicherry Court, whose authority could not extend to immoveables outside its jurisdiction. M SHYALI SUBRAYA CHETTY v. CALVE SUBRAYA CHETTIAR 404

INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES—Madras Estates Land Act explicit—Principles of general law, if applicable

The Madras Estates Land Act is a comprehensive Tenancy Code and wherever it is explicit, a discussion of the general law is irrelevant. M MUTHU REDDI v. MUTHU VENKATAPATHI REDDI, 4 L. W. 168; 31 M. L. J. 354; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 180 1

—Press Act (I of 1910) 525

JURISDICTION—Magistrate, sweeping prohibitory order of Closing burial place—Omission to record provision of law—Ultra vires.

A District Magistrate acts without jurisdiction in issuing a sweeping public prohibitory order without referring to any provision of law as authorising such an order. B MUKUNDRAI ATMARAM DESAI, In re, 18 BOM. L. R. 554; 18 CR. L. J. 137 489 —Small Cause Court—Suit by executor for possession of moveable property belonging to the deceased.

A suit by an executor or administrator for possession of moveable property belonging to the estate of the deceased is cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. L B MA PU v. MA SU, 9 BUR. L. T. 101 75

—Small Cause suit heard as regular suit—Appeal—Revision 92

JURISDICTION OF CIVIL COURTS—Suit for recovery of service inam lands 918

JURISDICTION OF CIVIL OR REVENUE COURT—

• Mortgage by co-sharer—Mortgagor tenant of mortgagee—Sale of mortgaged property to third person—Consideration, portion of, left with vendee to pay off arrears of rent—Rent, suit for arrears of, by mortgagee—Proper parties 65

Suit for declaration of invalidity of lease.

A suit for a declaration that a certain lease is invalid does not lie in a Civil Court. A POORAN SINGH v. HAIDRI 358

Suit by landlord against mukhtar—Rent of shops Bazar dues 84

KABULIYAT executed at Permanent Settlement, construction of—Undertaking to continue sardars and paiks in Pergunnah, meaning of—Right to determine employment of paik on service tenure—Resumption of land 223

KHOTI LANDS—Kolaba District—Transfer without permission of khot—Forfeiture—Transjeree, liability of.

An alienation by a khoti tenant of his khoti lands without the permission of his khot in the Kolaba District works as a forfeiture and the khot is entitled upon such transfer to enter upon the land to the prejudice of the transferee. B HARI GANU BHAGADE v. GANGADHAR VITHAL GULAVNI, 18 Bom. L. R. 446 299

KUTCHI MEMONS, law applicable to—Hindu Law—Muhammadan Law.

Kutchi Memons are governed by the Hindu Law in matters relating to succession and kindred questions and by the Muhammadan Law in matters of guardianship. M SIDDICK v. MAHAMED HUSSAIN, (1916) 2 M. W. N. 341; 4 L. W. 521 728

LAND ACQUISITION ACT (I OF 1894), S. 3 (b)—‘Person interested,’ who is.

A person who has entered into a valid agreement for the purchase of land is a “person interested” within the meaning of section 3 (b) of the Land Acquisition Act. P CHUTTAN LAL v. MUL HANDB, 18 P. R. 19.7 822 —Ss. 11, 12—Acquisition of land by Government—Compensation, right to—Adverse possession, claimant by.

Where the question was whether compensation for land compulsorily acquired by Government should be awarded to the collateral heir of the last male owner, or to a person who had been in possession of the land for more than twelve years prior to the acquisition proceedings without payment of rent:

Held, that the latter was the person entitled to receive the compensation. PAT RAJBANS SANYAL v. MAHABIR PRASAD, 20 C. W. N. 828; 1 P. L. J. 258 464

—S. 12 464

—Ss. 49 (1), 54—House, godowns used as servants’ quarters whether form part of—Award—Appeal.

Godowns attached to a house which are used as servants’ residence, form part and parcel of the house within the meaning of section 49 (1) of the Land Acquisition Act.

An appeal lies against an order passed under that section. C DALCHAND SINGHI v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 43 C. 665 11

—S. 54 11

LANDLORD AND-TENANT—Abandonment of holding—Waiver of abandonment, suit for rent, whether amounts to 942

—Amalgamation of tenancies, whether changes their incidents—Enhancement of rent—Pleadings 862 —Covenant in kabuliyat on assurance by landlord that it would not be enforced, whether binding.

Where a tenant executes a kabuliyat containing a stipulation, which the landlord has told him will not be enforced, the tenant cannot be held to have assented to it and the kabuliyat is not the real agreement between parties. C NADIR HANU SAHA v. BIRENDRA NATH DUTT, 20 C. W. N. 1067 126

—Ejectment—Assignee from tenant, resistance by, to landlord’s entry—Right to resist, proof of, by defendant—Burden of proof.

Where in a suit in ejectment the defendant acknowledges the landlord’s title but pleads that the defendant is the assignee from the tenant and is not bound to quit, the onus is on him to show that he had a right to resist the landlord’s entry. The mere fact that the plaintiff has failed to prove a special case set up by him, though it may be a point in defendant’s favour, does not relieve the Court from finding affirmatively on the evidence whether the defendant has a right to resist the landlord’s entry. PAT KARU SINGH v. BIBI NASIBAN 357

Ejectment—Forfeiture—Denial of landlord’s title, what amounts to 935 —Evidence of title—Batwara papers, admissibility of.

Batwara papers are admissible in evidence to prove a landlord’s title against the tenants who were parties to the Batwara proceedings. PAT AKLU ABIR v. RAM LAKSHAN SAHU 895

—Ghattuthumulu, levy of, finding as to, whether res judicata in subsequent suit between same parties 857

—Holding declared kabil lagan—Rent assessed—Suit by landlord for damages for use and occupation previous to assessment of rent, nature of—Small Cause Court, jurisdiction of 909 —Joint tenancy—Rent, suit for—Parties, necessary—Tenant, liability of, to pay whole rent.

Ordinarily a rent suit is not properly constituted unless it is brought against all the recorded tenants. There is no presumption in Bihar that in every joint tenancy there is also a several promise by which each joint tenant agrees to be bound for the whole rent.

Plaintiff brought a suit for arrears of rent against three joint tenants of an occupancy holding, two of whom filed a compromise petition admitting the rate claimed, and a decree was accordingly passed. The third defendant got the decree set aside as against himself, on the ground that he had not been properly served. In a subsequent suit for arrears of rent against the same persons, he was again not served.

• Held, (1) that the admission of the rate of rent claimed by the two defendants did not amount to a promise to pay the whole of the rent themselves; () that as the third defendant had not been properly served the suit must be dismissed. PAT JAGESWAR RAI v. KESHO PERSAD SINGH, 1 P. L. J. 190 262

LANDLORD AND TENANT—contd.

— Lease by trespasser—Good faith—Rights of parties.

A person taking a settlement of land from a trespasser in de facto possession is not entitled to remain in possession as a tenant as against the rightful owner, unless it is found not only that he acted bona fide in taking the settlement but also that the person from whom the settlement was taken was acting bona fide in making the settlement with him. C HIRANMOY KUMAR SAHA v. BANKA BEHARI GHOSE 852 — Non-occupancy raiyat's interest, whether heritable—Custom.

In the absence of custom a non-occupancy raiyat's interest is heritable. PAT KALRU GARHI v. JANGLI CHOUDHRI, 1 P. L. J. 273 438 — Non-payment of rent after expiry of term, effect of.

Mere non-payment of rent by the tenant after the expiry of the stipulated term will not make his possession adverse as from that date. The presumption is that the tenant continues to retain physical possession as he retained it before. A BIJAI NARAIN SINGH v. PARBHU NARAIN SINGH 395

— Occupancy tenancy—Co-sharer landlord, rent decree obtained by—Purchase of holding in execution—Mortgagee in possession, ouster of—Suit by mortgagee—Non-transferable holding, plea of, validity of—Estoppel.

It is not open to a fractional co-sharer, who purchases a holding in execution of a rent decree which only amounts to a money decree, to raise the question of non-transferability of the holding, as a defence to an action by a mortgagee whom he has ousted from possession, especially when the mortgagee has long been in possession and no objection has been taken by any of the landlords. PAT RADHA KISHUNJI THAKUR v. LALJI SAHA 821 — 'Rent-decree', decree in suit for rent against some only of several joint tenants, whether is—Auction-purchaser, position of.

Where all the persons entitled to a holding are not made parties to a suit for recovery of rent, the decree obtained in such a suit is not a 'rent-decree' and the auction-purchaser in execution of such a decree would at the most be entitled only to the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtors. PAT MUHAMMAD MAHBOOB v. BHAGOO MAHTO, 1 P. L. W. 48 913

— Suit for rent by co-sharer landlord, or in the alternative for refund of excess collected by other sharers, maintainability of—Necessity of distinct averments in plaint—Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), Sch. II, Art. 31.

A suit is maintainable by one of several joint landlords for recovery of the balance of rent due from a tenant and in the alternative, for recovery of sums which may have been collected by his co-sharers in excess of their legitimate share.

The ground for this alternative claim should be specifically set forth in the plaint and should not be made to rest on the general, superfluous prayer asking for such reliefs as to the Court may seem fit, as such general prayer does not cover a relief arising from a different cause of action.

LANDLORD AND TENANT—concl.

A suit by one of several joint landlords for recovery of sums which may have been collected by his co-sharers from the tenant in excess of their legitimate share is not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. C UZIR v. HARI CHARAN PAL 671

— Tenant holding over without landlord's assent, right of—Ejectment—Notice to quit, necessity of 201

LEGAL PRACTITIONER—Counsel engaged for one party whether should be allowed to appear for opposite party—Practice.

It is not desirable, except under very exceptional circumstances, that a Counsel, who has been engaged to conduct a case from start to finish for one party, should be allowed to appear for the opposite party. O ALI MUHAMMAD, In re, 19 O. C. 237 142

LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT (XVIII OF 1879), S. 4, proviso, s. 27, construction of, whether contains a legislative prohibition of audience to Vakils.

The proviso to section 4 of the Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879) cannot be construed as a variation by the Indian Legislature, under clause 44 of the Letters Patent, of the rule giving to Vakils the rights of audience on the Original Side, or as, by implication, preventing a Vakild from appearing on the Original Side. The words in the proviso 'under this section' govern the whole section.

Nor can such a prohibition be inferred from the absence in section 27 of any reference to the fees payable to Vakils appearing on the Original Side.

Act XVIII of 1879, which was passed after the privilege of audience on the Original Side had been enjoyed by the Vakils for 16 years, cannot be construed as taking it away, unless it says so in plain terms or by necessary implication.

History of the legislation on the subject traced and reviewed. M NAMBARUMAL CHETTY v. NARASIMHACHARI, 31 M. L. J. 698; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 529 699 — Ss. 13, 14—Receiving mukhtarnama without enquiry and from unauthorised person—Gross negligence—Misconduct.

A legal practitioner is bound to take instructions directly from clients, or from their agents duly empowered to act in their behalf.

A mukhtear who receives his mukhtarnama from an unauthorised person without making adequate enquiry as to the person who is giving him the same and who acts upon the same, is guilty of gross negligence which amounts to misconduct. PAT In the matter of EMPEROR v. LEAKUT HUSAIN, 18 Cr. L. J. 140 492

— S. 14 492

— S. 14, proceedings under, nature of—Transfer of proceedings—Jurisdiction of High Court—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1903), s. 24—Government of India Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V. C. 61), s. 107—'Superintendence,' meaning of.

The enquiry contemplated under section 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act is of an administrative nature and is not a civil proceeding, the intention of the Act being to provide a procedure or remedy of a disciplinary character for practitioners practising in subordinate Courts without giving the Courts the power to inflict a penalty for abuse of discipline but only to recommend to the High Court the course to be taken. It is neither civil nor criminal, but purely designed for the purpose of discipline.

LEGAL PRACTITIONER ACT—concl'd.

Proceedings under section 14 of the Act cannot be transferred under section 24, Civil Procedure Code, read with section 141 of the Code or by virtue of the powers of superintendence vested in the High Courts under section 107 of the Government of India Act.

Neither section 24 nor section 141, Civil Procedure Code, applies to the Legal Practitioners Act, because the proceedings under the latter Act are not civil proceedings in a Court of civil jurisdiction to which alone the Civil Procedure Code is applicable.

Section 141, Civil Procedure Code, is controlled in its operation and effect by the concluding words of the section, which limit its application to proceedings in any Court exercising civil jurisdiction. The procedure under the Legal Practitioners Act is self-contained.

Per Mullick, J.—The terms of section 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act make it incumbent that the inquiry under the section should be made by the presiding officer of the Court. It cannot be delegated or transferred to another officer who is not the presiding officer of the Court in which the malpractices complained of were committed.

Without expressing any opinion as to the applicability of section 107 of the Government of India Act, it is sufficient to say that the High Court should not interfere with the progress of an enquiry in which nothing final can be done by the presiding officer.

Per Atkinson, J.—The 'general superintendent' vested in the High Court under section 107 of the Government of India Act applies only to cases where a subordinate officer, be he a Judge or otherwise, acts without jurisdiction or in excess of jurisdiction. When a duly constituted officer acting within jurisdiction makes a charge and proceeds to hold an enquiry, the High Court will not interfere under the Statute unless he has grossly abused his powers. PAT JANAK KISHORE, In the matter of, 1 P. L. J. 576; 18 Cr. L. J. 132 484

— S. 27, construction of, whether contains a legislative prohibition of audience to Vakils 699

LETTERS PATENT (MAD.), 1863, Ss. 9, 10, 37, 41 699

LIMITATION, commencement of—Plaint, amendment of 914

— Pauper-plaintiff paying Court-fee pending enquiry.

Where a plaintiff applies in good faith for leave to sue as a pauper but, on his application being opposed, pays in the necessary Court-fee pending an enquiry into his pauperism, limitation runs against him only up to the date of filing the application and not up to the date of paying in the Court-fee. O WALI MUHAMMAD v. DAULAT-UN-NISSA, 3 O. L. J. 617 921

— Plaintiff insufficiently stamped—Court-fee, deficiency in, made up after expiry of period of limitation 507

— Principal and surety—Claim against principal debtor barred—Surety, whether liable 184

LIMITATION ACT (IX OF 1871), ARTS. 142, 145 733

LIMITATION ACT (XV OF 1877), S. 7—Minor—Cause of action accruing during minority—Death within three years of attaining majority—Legal representative, right of, to sue 221

— SCH. II, ART. 144 733

LIMITATION ACT (IX OF 1908), S. 2 (7) 828

— Ss. 5, 2 (7)—Appeal, delay in presenting—'Sufficient cause'—Appellant, duty of—"Good faith," meaning of.

In order to be entitled to the benefit of section 5 of the Limitation Act, an appellant must act in good faith, i.e., with due care and attention.

Where an appellant relied upon an unauthorised publication known as the "Legal Diary" and being misled as to the duration of the vacation of the Chief Court, presented his appeal beyond the period of limitation:

Held, that he had not acted with due care and attention and that the cause shown was not sufficient to entitle him to an extension of time under section 5 of the Limitation Act. P JAIDIAL MAL v. AMAR NATH 828

— S. 5—Appeal, delay in presenting—Sufficient cause—Discretion—High Court, interference by—Pleader, bona fide mistake of.

A Judge has a discretion in admitting an appeal under section 5 of the Limitation Act, but the discretion must be judicially exercised and must be based on materials judicially cognizable.

High Courts are loth to interfere with the exercise of a discretion given by law to a lower Court, but if the discretion has been exercised without appreciation and consideration of all the facts which are material for the purpose of enabling the Judge to exercise a judicial discretion and without the application of the right principle to those facts, interference is called for.

A bona fide mistake of a Pleader, in order to afford sufficient cause for admitting an appeal after time, should be one made in spite of due care and attention having been exercised. L B MA MAI GATE v. MAUNG TUN WIN 815 — Ss. 5, 12—Appeal, delay in presenting—Sufficient cause—Stamp not procurable—Copies, time spent in obtaining, exclusion of.

Appellant applied for copies of the judgment appealed against on 12th June, and on the same day filed some folios and stamps. On the 13th he was informed that some more folios would be required which were supplied on the 15th. Copies were delivered on the 18th. On the last day of limitation stamps were not procurable and the next day being a holiday the appeal was presented on the next following day on which the Court was open:

Held, (1) that the appellant was entitled to the exclusion of the whole of the time from 2th to 18th June from the computation of the period of limitation under section 12 of the Limitation Act, and

(2) that the delay caused by appellant's inability to get stamps on the last day of limitation should be excused under section 5 of the Limitation Act. PAT KESHO PRASAD SINGH v. HARBANS RAUT, 1 P. L. J. 163 211

LIMITATION ACT—1908—contd.

— S. 5—Letters Patent Appeal—Delay in filing—Sufficient cause—Limitation.

Plaintiff sued defendants for resumption of a rent-free grant in the Court of the Settlement Officer. The suit was decreed and the defendants appealed to the District Judge, who set aside the decree of the Settlement Officer and dismissed the suit. On an appeal by the plaintiff the High Court held that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal and directed that the memorandum of appeal to that Court be returned to the defendants for presentation to the proper Court. The Commissioner, before whom the appeal was next preferred, held that appeal lay to the District Judge. Defendants then applied to the High Court for review of its judgment, but their application was rejected. They then preferred a Letters Patent Appeal against the original order of the High Court, which was considerably beyond time:

Held, that there was sufficient cause for the delay in presenting the appeal, and that the appellants were entitled to the benefit of section 5 of the Limitation Act. A MAHABAT RAI v. BHARADDWAJ DAMODAR DAS, 15 A. L. J. -00 818

— S. 5—Sufficient cause for delay in presenting appeal—Negligence—Appeal.

An appellant, who wilfully leaves the preparation and presentation of his appeal to the last day of the period of limitation prescribed therefor, is guilty of negligence, and is not entitled to an extension of time, if some unexpected or unforeseen contingency prevents him from filing the appeal within time. N KEDARNATH v. ZUMBERLAL, 12 N. L. R. 171 503

— S. 6, Sch. I, Art. 164—Application to set aside ex parte decree—Minority, whether extends limitation General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 6.

Section 6 of the Limitation Act of 1908, which replaces section 7 of the Act of 1877, confines the operation of the plea of minority to suits and only one kind of applications, namely, those for execution of decrees. Therefore, an application to set aside an ex parte decree does not come within the exception created by section 6 of that Act.

An ex parte decree was passed against the defendants, some of whom were minors, on 20th August 1908. On 1st May 1914, some of the defendants applied to set aside the ex parte decree:

Held, that the application was governed by the provisions of the Limitation Act of 1908 and not by those of the Act of 1877; that section 6 of the Limitation Act of 1908 did not apply to the application and the period of limitation prescribed by Article 164 of the Act for such applications could not, therefore, be extended on the ground of minority.

It is doubtful whether an application to set aside an ex parte decree can be deemed to be a 'right' or 'privilege' within the purview of section 6 of the General Clauses Act. If it is a right, it is acquired, not under the Limitation Act, which merely regulates the period within which the remedy must be sought, but under the Civil Procedure Code. P MANOHAR LAL v. SADIQA BEGAM, 101 P. R. 1916 292

LIMITATION ACT—1908—contd.

— S. 6—Minor—Cause of action arising during minority—Death within three years of attaining majority—Personal representative, right of, to sue.

Where a minor acquired a cause of action to sue for possession of property and died after majority but before the expiry of three years from the date of the cessation of his disability of minority, his personal representative can, although twelve years have expired since the cause of action accrued, institute a suit on the same cause of action at any time within the three years' period which had already commenced in the lifetime of the deceased. B ARJUN RAMJI MHANKAI v. RAMABAI RAOJI VITHOBA, 18 Bom. L. R. 579; 40 B. 564 221

— S. 12—Time spent in obtaining copies, exclusion of 211— S. 19—Acknowledgment—Execution—Application for adjournment of sale.

Where a judgment-debtor stated in an application for adjournment of an execution sale that, in case of his failure to pay up the decretal money on the date to be fixed for sale in the month following, he would not take any objection to the validity of the sale:

Held, that the application contained an acknowledgment within the meaning of section 19 of the Limitation Act. C JOGENDRA PRASAD MITRA v. ASUTOSH GOSWAMI, 24 C. L. J. 462 738

— S. 20—Appropriation of rents due by mortgagee towards interest due by mortgagor, whether saves limitation 756— S. 26—Easement, acquisition of—Water-mill, right to work—"As of right," meaning of.

In order that the enjoyment of a right should ripen into an easement, it should be peaceable, open and as of right.

If the servient owner can, whether the dominant owner likes it or not, put a stop to the enjoyment, there is really no easement, because the very idea of right, which necessarily underlies an easement, is negated.

User as of right means a user claimed against the will of the person over whose property it is sought to be exercised.

Plaintiffs had worked a water-mill on the land of the defendants for over fifty years, paying Re. 1 annually to the latter for the use of the mill:

Held, that the fact of the payment proved that the plaintiffs' user was at the will and pleasure of the defendants and was not as of right, and, therefore, could not ripen into an easement. P SUNDAR v. NAG, 4 P. R. 1917 788

— S. 28 277

SCH. I, ARTS. 57, 85—Accounts, suit on—Proof—Evidence, value of balance as—Suit on advances in cash and grain—Limitation.

Article 85 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act does not apply to a case where the plaintiff alone has been the banker, making advances and receiving part-payments from time to time, there being no mutual account or reciprocal demands, and the balance being always in his favour.

LIMITATION ACT—1908—contd.

A suit to recover advances made both in kind and in cash is not governed by Article 75, Schedule I, of the Limitation Act.

There is no general rule that a defendant in a suit on accounts cannot go behind a balance struck by him. In such a suit the plaintiff must prove what is due to him on the accounts. The striking of a balance is merely a piece of evidence the value of which must depend on the circumstances of each case. P. BUDH RAM v. RALLI RAM, 103 P. W. R. 1916 300

SCH. I, ART. 62—Money paid to one for use of another, suit for—Limitation.

Money paid to one party with the implied intention that it should finally reach the hands of the party to whom it actually belongs, is money, within the meaning of Article 62 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act, paid to that party for the use of the actual person in whom the right to receive it vests and, therefore, a suit to recover such money must be brought within three years of the date of its payment. PAT HARIHAR MISSIR v. SYED MOHAMMAD, 20 C. W. N. 983; 1 P. L. J. 374 30

SCH. I, ART. 85, applicability of—Suit on advances in cash and grain 300

SCH. I, ARTS. 85, 89—Principal and agent—Accounts, suit on—Consignment for sale on commission—Advances to consignee—Settlement, periodical, of accounts—Action brought after stoppage of dealings—Open, mutual and current account—Agency, termination of.

A suit for accounts by the plaintiff, who used to send goods to the defendants for sale on commission, receiving advances therefor from time to time and acknowledging sums due by him at periodical settlements of accounts, after the dealings had stopped, is not a suit on an 'open, mutual and current account' within the meaning of Article 85 to Schedule I of the Limitation Act.

The question when an agency terminates must depend on the facts of each particular case.

Quære:—Whether after all dealings between a principal and agent have been closed, the agency continues till the latter accounts for money alleged to be due to the former.

The plaintiff agreed to supply agricultural produce to the defendant, who was to sell the same and pay over the proceeds to the plaintiff after deducting advances made to the plaintiff on the articles supplied. The dealings commenced in 1901 and stopped in 1906. There were periodical settlements of accounts, the plaintiff executing a promissory note at each settlement for the balance due. Plaintiff sued in 1912 for accounts between 1901 to 1906 and for recovery of the amount found due to him:

Held, (1) that this was not a case of open, mutual and current account within the meaning of Article 85 of the Limitation Act and the suit was consequently barred.

(2) that even on the basis of an agency the agency terminated in 1906 and the suit was barred under Article 89. M. KAPPUSAMY AIYAR v. VEERAPPA CHETTIAR, 5 L. W. 375 875

SCH. I, ART. 89 305, 875

LIMITATION ACT—1908—contd.

SCH. I, ARTS. 93, 120, 126—Document impugned as forgery, whether should be set aside by suit—Unnecessary prayer for barred claim, joinder of, with other substantial reliefs not barred, effect of—Hindu widow—Suit to declare alienation void and a Will relied on by widow a forgery—Latter claim barred under Article 93—Dismissal of suit, legality of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. II, rr. 1, 2 11

Plaintiff, as next reversioner to a Hindu widow, sued for a declaration that an alienation made by her was void beyond her lifetime. In a previous suit by the widow against the plaintiff for partition, she had produced a Will under which she claimed as heiress of her husband. The plaintiff challenged it as a forgery, but a partition was ordered without any adjudication on the genuineness of the Will. The plaintiff in his present suit also claimed a formal declaration of the forgery of the Will. This portion of the claim was admittedly barred under Article 93 of the Limitation Act. The Trial Court dismissed the suit as barred:

Held, (1) that there was no obligation on plaintiff to set aside the Will;

(2) that the relief claimed in respect of the Will was unnecessary and did not affect plaintiff's rights to the other substantial reliefs into which the Court was bound to enquire. M. VENKAMMA v. NARASIMHAM, (1916) 2 M. W. N. 325; 4 L. W. 441 642

SCH. I, ART. 95—Simple money, claim for—Usufructuary mortgagee, suit by—Fraud of mortgagor. A usufructuary mortgage was executed in 1907, but possession was not delivered to the mortgagee. In 1912 it was ascertained that the mortgagor had no power to mortgage the property and had fraudulently concealed the fact from the mortgagee. In 1914 the mortgagee sued for recovery of money due to him with interest thereon by way of damages:

Held, that the suit was governed, by Article 95, Schedule I, of the Limitation Act and was not barred by time. O. LACHMAN PRASAD v. RAMPHAL, 3 O. L. J. 593 351

SCH. I, ART. 95 Suit to set aside decree obtained by fraud—Limitation

A suit to set aside a compromise decree alleged to have been obtained by fraud is governed by Article 95 of the Limitation Act Schedule I and must be brought within three years from the date of the knowledge of such fraudulent decree. PAT MOHAMAD JAN v. COMMISSIONER OF PATNA 797

SCH. I, ART. 97 505

SCH. I, ART. 110 83

SCH. I, ARTS. 116, 120, 132—Mortgage to secure loan of paddy, suit for enforcement of.

A suit to enforce a mortgage executed to secure a loan of paddy repayable with interest as paddy is not a suit to enforce payment of money charged on immoveable property to which Article 132 of the Limitation Act applies. The suit is governed either by Article 116 or 120. C. RASH BIHARI DAS v. KUNJABIHARI PATRA, 24 C. L. J. 448 805

SCH. I, ARTS. 116, 110—Rent, suit for—Kanom, expiry of—Accrual of rent after expiry—Limitation.

LIMITATION ACT—1908—contd.

A suit for rent on the expiry of a kanom is governed by Article 116 and not by Article 110 of the Limitation Act. A kanom tenure involving the taking of an account for the whole period of the kanomdar's occupation is not subject to the legal incidents of a lease in this respect. M AMMOTTI v. SANKARAN ADIODI, (1916 2 M. W. N. 117 83

— SCH. I, ART. 120 642, 895

— SCH. I, ARTS. 120, 132—Moveable property—Mortgage decree, if moveable property—Mortgage of mortgage decree, suit on—Limitation—Mortgaged property, purchase of portion of, by mortgagee—Mortgage, extinguishment—Intention.

A decree for sale obtained on the basis of a mortgage by the mortgagee is moveable property and a suit to enforce a hypothecation of such a decree is governed by Article 120 of the Limitation Act.

Where, however, the decree has been converted into immoveable property, the mortgagee of such decree is entitled not only to the benefit of the new security but also to the benefit of the larger period of limitation under Article 132 of the Limitation Act.

Where a person in the position of a mortgagee purchases a portion of the mortgaged property the mortgage does not thereby become pro tanto extinguished, unless it is stipulated that the mortgage is to be extinguished or unless there are circumstances from which an intention to extinguish the mortgage in whole or part may be inferred. A JAMNADEI v. LALA RAM, 14 A. L. J. 1025 4

— SCH. I, ART. 126 642

— SCH. I, ART. 132 4, 756, 805

— SCH. I, ART. 138—Auction-purchaser, rights of—Suit for possession—Limitation.

A purchaser under a sale held under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act is entitled to be put in possession of the property purchased by him under section 11 of the Bengal Rent Recovery Act. If he fails to obtain possession under that Act, his remedy to obtain possession by a civil suit is not barred, if the suit is brought within twelve years of the sale as required by Article 128 of the Limitation Act. PAT MOHAMMAD LATIF KHAN v. BAJO KOIRI 955

— SCH. I, ART. 142—Possession, physical and constructive, nature of—Boundary pillars, erection of, whether amounts to possession—Trespasser, possession of, nature of—Land covered by water at certain intervals, effect of—Dispossession, what amounts to.

If a person enters upon the land of another and holds possession for a time, and then, without having acquired title under the Statute of Limitation, abandons possession, the rightful owner, on the abandonment, is in the same position in all respects as he was before the intrusion took place.

The Limitation Act applies not to want of actual possession by the plaintiff, but to cases where he has been out of, and another in, possession for the prescribed time. There must be both absence of possession by the person who has the right, and actual possession by another, whether adverse or not, to be protected, to bring the case within the Statute.

LIMITATION ACT—1908—contd.

A mere erection of boundary pillars on the extreme edge of a disputed area is not an act of physical possession

The rightful owner sued a trespasser for possession of a tract of land, which lay on a river-side, was exposed to the risk of temporary flooding, was covered with jungle, and was unhealthy and malarious. It could only be utilized for the purpose of grazing animals or for collection of forest produce. It contained heights as well as hollows, and when rain fell it settled in the hollows. When the river rose high portions of the land remained under water. During the rainy season people abandoned it and it could not be utilized; but it was not established that the land had ever during the period of the trespasser's possession been actually submerged under water or was permitted to remain derelict. The trespasser simply waited for the water to subside before he resumed his acts of ownership:

Held, that under the above circumstances the rightful owner could not be presumed to have been in constructive possession of the tract of land every rainy season when some portions of it were covered with water. O HEARSEY v. KARAM SINGH, 3 O. L. J. 595; 19 O. C. 374 715

— SCH. I, ART. 144—Alienation by Hindu widow—Suit by reversioner—Intervention of daughter's estate—Possession, adverse to daughter, whether adverse to reversioner—Hindu Law—Reversioner, nature of rights of.

Reversioners, under Hindu Law, are not persons claiming from or through a female heir so as to make possession adverse to her adverse to them. Adverse possession against reversioners begins only from the time when they become entitled to possession.

Adverse possession against the ultimate reversioner does not begin till he is entitled to possession.

J, a Hindu widow, sold properties of her husband. She died on 21st April 1865. Her daughter S, who succeeded her, died on 27th June 1901. Her reversioners instituted a suit on 7th December 1912 to recover the properties alienated by her. It was contended by the alienees that as the 12 years' period of limitation under Act IX of 1871 within which S could have sued for possession expired before the coming into force of Act XV of 1877, which enlarged the scope of Article 142 of the former Act, the present suit by the reversioners was barred:

Held, that as adverse possession commenced against the plaintiffs only on the death of S, the suit was not barred. M NEELAKANTA RAO v. NARAYANA-SWAMI AYYAR, 20 M. L. T. 526; 31 M. L. J. 847 733 — SCH. I, ART. 144, applicability of.

Quære.—Whether Article 144 of the Limitation Act applies to a suit for recovery of possession of part of an estate on declaration of title by a purchaser at the revenue sale from a person who has been in possession as a trespasser. C JITENDRA KUMAR PAL CHOWDHURY v. MOHENDRA CHANDRA SARMA, 24 C. L. J. 62

• LIMITATION ACT—1908—contd.

— SCH. I, ART. 144—Custom—Alienation by male proprietor—Suit by reversioners—Adverse possession—Limitation.

A collateral governed by the Customary Law of the Punjab does not derive his right to sue from or through his father, but from or through the common ancestor who owned the land. Therefore, in cases governed by Article 144, Schedule I, of the Limitation Act, limitation does not begin to run against a collateral till the right to sue accrues to him.

One D. S. sold certain ancestral land to defendant on 10th August 1886. He died on 23rd February 1892, and plaintiff sued in 1914 to recover the land as his collateral. It was found that on the death of D. S. plaintiff's father was his nearest collateral entitled to sue. He died about five years before the institution of the suit:

Held, that limitation began to run as against the plaintiff on the death of his father and the suit was, therefore, within time. P. ARUR SINGH v. SOLAKHAN SINGH, 174 P. W. R. 1916 412

— SCH. I, ART. 164 292

— SCH. I, ART. 166 827

— SCH. I, ARTS. 181, 182 Mortgage, suit for foreclosure of—Consent decree, whether preliminary decree—Final decree, application for—Limitation.

A consent decree in a suit for foreclosure, which provides that unless payment is made before a certain date the mortgagor's right to redeem would be barred, is a preliminary decree to be followed under the provisions of the law by a final decree for foreclosure. Therefore, an application to obtain the final decree is governed by Article 181 and not by Article 182 of the Limitation Act. C. SASHI BRUSHAN DAS v. PRATUR CHANDRA ROY 802

— SCH. I, ART. 182—Decree—Appeal—Execution—Limitation, commencement of.

Where an appeal is preferred against an entire decree, the limitation to execute it runs from the date of the final decree of the Appellate Court.

A mortgagee obtained a decree nisi on foot of his mortgage on 9th July 1902 against the mortgagor and some other persons interested in the mortgaged property. The mortgagor acquiesced in the decree, but the other defendants appealed against the entire decree and the dispute was finally settled by a decree of the Privy Council dated 17th January 1912. The mortgagee applied on 3rd May 1914 to have a final decree made in his favour, and accordingly the decree was made final on 31st March 1915:

Held, that inasmuch as an appeal was preferred against the entire decree, limitation began to run under Article 182 of the Limitation Act only from the date of the final decree, and the application was, therefore, within time. PAT JAGAT MOHINI DAS v. MOHAMAD IBRAHIM HUSSAIN, 1 P. L. W. 309 883

— SCH. I, ART. 182—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 17, sub-r. (1)—Execution, application for, rejected as not in accordance with law, whether saves limitation.

An application for execution of a decree rejected

LIMITATION ACT—concld.

by a Court under Order XXI, rule 17, sub-rule (1), as not being an application in accordance with law, will not operate to save limitation under Article 182 of the Limitation Act. C. JOYANUDDIN KHAN v. JAMIRUDDIN SARKAR 916

— SCH. I, ART. 182—Execution of decree, application for—Last intervening application by hostile claimant—Prior applicant, whether representative of petitioner.

An application for execution of a decree which is presented more than three years after a prior application by a person not entitled to execute the decree and claiming hostilely to the petitioner, is barred under Article 182 of the Limitation Act. The prior applicant cannot be treated as the representative of the petitioner to the prejudice of the judgment-debtor.

A mortgagee decree-holder having died in 1908, his widow, on 24th November 1910, made an application for execution of the decree, which was opposed by the alleged adopted son of the decree-holder. In 1912, the latter filed a suit to declare his adoption and it was upheld on 21st July 1913. He made the present application for execution more than three years after the application by the widow:

Held, that the application by the widow having been hostile to the petitioner, she could not be treated as the representative of the petitioner to the prejudice of the judgment-debtor and that the present application was, therefore, barred. M. SAMINATHA ASARI v. GOPALAKRISHNA AIYENGAR, 4 L. W. 291 750

— SCH. I, ART. 182—Execution—Leave to bid, application for, whether step-in-aid of execution.

Where a decree-holder applied for leave to bid at the sale, and on the very day the application was granted consented to its adjournment and on the day of sale, refrained from bidding although there were no bidders present:

Held, that under these circumstances, the application could not be treated as an application to the proper Court to take a step-in-aid of execution.

Quere.—Whether, under any conceivable circumstance, an application by a decree-holder for leave to bid may be deemed an application to the proper Court to take a step-in-aid of execution. C. JOGENDRA PRASAD MITRA v. ASUTOSH GOSWAMI, 24 C. L. J. 452 738

LUNACY ACT (IV OF 1912), S. 56, order under—Land Acquisition Judge's power to disregard order—Jurisdiction.

An order of the District Judge in his lunacy jurisdiction that a certain sum of money, which was in deposit with the Land Acquisition Judge to the credit of a lunatic, should be paid out to his natural guardian who was maintaining the lunatic and his family, is in accordance with section 56 of Act V of 1912, and the Land Acquisition Judge has no jurisdiction to refuse to pay out the particular sum as directed by the order. C. SATYENDRA NATH DEY v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 20 C. W. N. 975 110

MADRAS CITY CIVIL COURT ACT (VII MAD. OF. 1892), S. 12 436

MADRAS CIVIL RULES OF PRACTICE, R. 134 348

— RR. 179, '31—Application under r. 179 for payment of moneys standing to credit of different suits—Objection by decree-holder in latter suit—Order upholding objection, nature of Remedy of party aggrieved—Appeal—Revision 348

MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT (I OF 1908), S. 3 (2) 306

— S. 6, CL. '6', scope of—Suit for rent—Land situated in zamindari—Ryoti land—Presumption—Ijara lease—Jurisdiction of Civil Court

Prima facie land situate within the ambit of a zamindari must be deemed to be ryoti land unless the zamindar shows it is private land.

A claim for rent in respect of land in an 'estate' is cognizable by the Revenue and not by the Civil Courts, unless the plaint sets forth particulars taking it out of the cognizance of the former.

A claim is not exempted from the jurisdiction of the Revenue Courts simply because it arises out of an ijara lease.

Clause 6 of section 6 of the Madras Estates Land Act applies only to the case of a middleman taking an ijara and not where a ryot himself claims an ijara of his holding. M. GOPSETTI NARAYANA-WAMI NAIDU GARU v. GANGISSETTI BANGARAYYA, (1916) 2 M. W. N. 240; 4 L. W. 31 394

— S. 6, CL. 6, EXPL. 1

— S. 8, CL. 1, S. 6, CL. 6, EXPL.—Occupancy ryot, subsequent acquisition of melvaram by—Rule of merger, whether applies—Appeal, second—Notice, insufficiency or invalidity of, if can be pleaded for first time in second appeal—Interpretation of Statutes—Estates Land Act explicit—Principles of general law, if applicable.

Section 8, clause (1), of the Madras Estates Land Act I of 1908, simply enunciates the general law of merger, and the same is subject to qualifications to be found in other portions of the Act.

Section 8, clause (2), is an application of the general rule in clause (1) to the particular case where one amongst several co-landholders subsequently acquires the occupancy-right.

But where one out of several mirasidars or ryots becomes entitled to the rights of a landholder in respect of the same land, it is the converse of section 8, clause (2), and is specifically provided for by the explanation to clause 6 of section 6.

Where one of two persons, jointly entitled to the occupancy-right in a certain estate, becomes entitled by purchase to the zamindari or melvaram right also:

Held, (1) that he does not thereby lose his occupancy right:

(2) that the restriction that such acquisition should be by inheritance or devise applies only to clause 6 of section 6 and not to the explanation to clause (6).

The Madras Estates Land Act is a comprehensive Tenancy Code and wherever it is explicit, a discussion of the general law is irrelevant.

In an ejectment suit where the defendants did not plead any want of notice in the first Court and there was no issue regarding it:

MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT—concl'd.

Held, that the plea of insufficiency or invalidity of notice could not be allowed to be raised for the first time in second appeal. M. MUTHU REDDI v. MUTHU VENKATAPATHI REDDI, 4 L. W. 168; 3. M. L. J. 354; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 180 1

— Ss. 74, 75 (6), 75 (7)—Appraisement of produce—Apportionment of varam, jurisdiction as to—Disagreement with assessors—Award, when final.

The officer deputed to make an appraisement under Madras Act I of 1908 has jurisdiction to decide the rate of 'varam' in cases of dispute.

Where the assessors accept the appraisement of the officer, but differ as to the rate of the 'varam', the award is not final under section 75 (7) and the officer can record his opinion on the rate after hearing objections. M. VEERAPPA CHETTIAR v. MOOTHU KARUPPAN 379 — Ss. 75, 205—Appraisement proceedings—Co-sharer tenant under co-sharer landlord—Other co-sharers, whether necessary parties.

Where one co-sharer owns a third share of a village and pays rent to another co-sharer:

Held, that to a proceeding by the latter for appraisement of crops under section 75 of the Madras Estates Land Act there is no necessity to join all the share-holders as parties. M. BAVAJI PATNAIK v. GOVINDA PATNAIK 382

— S. 131—Tender to Divisional Officer, whether sufficient.

The deposit required by section 131 of the Madras Estates Land Act may be tendered to the Divisional Officer, who is bound to receive it. The amount need not be paid into the sub-treasury. M. POTHA VENKATASAWMI v. TRUSTEE, VIZIANAGARAM ESTATE 378

— S. 189 906

— S. 205 382

MADRAS HEREDITARY VILLAGE OFFICES ACT (III OF 1895), Ss. 13, 2—Service inam lands, suit for recovery of—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.

A claim for the recovery of lands which are the emoluments of a service inam, must be laid before the Collector when the defendants contest the plaintiff's right to the office and allege an independent right in themselves.

In all cases where it is necessary for the plaintiff to allege, for the maintenance of his suit, that the land claimed is an emolument of a service inam, the jurisdiction is with the Collector under section 13 of Madras Act III of 1895. Where, however, the claim is to dispossess a trespasser and no question of title is involved, or where the land is claimed as the plaintiff's private property, the jurisdiction of Civil Courts is not ousted. M. DEVINENI PATAYYA v. KANDUKURI KOTIAH, (1917) M. W. N. 7; 5 L. W. 191 918

— S. 21 928

MAGISTRATE, sweeping prohibitory order of—Closing burial place—Omission to record provision of law—Ultra vires 489

MADRAS HIGH COURT ORIGINAL SIDE RULES,

1912, R. 511—High Courts Act, 1911, 21 & 25 Vic. O. 1914, ss. 2, 3, 11, 15—Letters Patent, (Civil), 1963, ss. 1, 2, 3, 7, 11—Vakils, Attorneys, right of audience of, on Original Side Rule 511, whether ultra vires of Letters Patent Legal Practitioners Act (X III of 1871), s. 4, proviso, s. 27, construction of, whether contains a legislative prohibition of audience to Vakils.

Rule 513 of the Original Side Rules of the Madras High Court, 902, which gives the right of audience to Vakils and withhold it from the attorneys on the Original Side of the High Court is not ultra vires of the Letters Patent of 1866, and is binding on practitioners.

The proviso to section 4 of the Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1871) cannot be construed as a variation by the Indian Legislature, under clause 4 of the Letters Patent of the rule giving to Vakils the rights of audience on the Original Side, or as, by implication, preventing a Vakil from appearing on the Original Side. The words in the proviso 'under this section' govern the whole section.

Nor can such a prohibition be inferred from the absence in section 27 of any reference to the fees payable to Vakils appearing on the Original Side.

Act XVIII of 1871, which was passed after the privilege of audience on the Original Side had been enjoyed by the Vakils for 14 years, cannot be construed as taking it away, unless it says so in plain terms or by necessary implication.

History of the legislation on the subject traced and reviewed. M. NAMBERUMAL CHETTY v. ARASIMHACHARI, 31 M. L. J. 694; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 529. 699

MALABAR LAW—Kanom deed—Improvements, value of, stipulation for payment of, by jennni on redemption—Kanom, redemption of, by maliknamdar—Suit for value of improvements paid to kanomdar, maintainability of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 74—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 61.

Under the terms of a kanom deed, the jennni undertook to pay the value of improvements when he redeemed the kanom. A maliknamdar, who redeemed the kanom and who paid the kanomdar the value of repairs effected by him, sued the jennni for the same.

Held, that on the constructions of the kanom deed, the suit was maintainable. M. ARACALATHUR SUBBARTO v. PANIGALATHI KUNH MUAD, (1916) 2 M. W. N. 3. 664 — Maintenance, family arrangement in lieu of, by karnavann, whether can be set aside by succeeding karnavans.

Where the karnavann of a Malabar tarwad, by a family arrangement, grants sondils (suits) to the junior members of the tarwad in lieu of maintenance, the arrangement is binding on the succeeding karnavans and cannot be set aside unless for good cause.

A suit for recovery of possession of such land cannot be maintained by a succeeding karnavann, unless the latter seeks to set aside the arrangement and offers to make some other suitable arrangement for the junior members who are in possession of the land. M. RAMASWAMPATTAR v. GOPALAN, 32 M. L. J. 97. 659

MALABAR LAW—concl.

— Private tarwad temple—Alienation by karnavann of temple properties—Suit by successor-in-office of alienor to cancel alienation—Compromise, binding nature of, on members Good faith—Necessity—Trusts Act (II of 1882), ss. 42, 43—Onus of proof Mortgage, modification of, by kaichit—Kaichit, whether requires registration—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 59—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 62, 63.

A document merely effecting a modification of a pre-existing mortgage whereby the mortgagee gives up some of the benefits and reciting that the latter document is in full force, is not a new mortgage and does not require registration. The case is one of remission under section 3 and not of novation under section 62 of the Contract Act.

The junior members of a Malabar tarwad to which a private temple belongs can bring a suit to protect the Devaswam against alienation by a karnavann trustee.

A compromise of a suit by the karnavann of a tarwad to set aside an alienation by his predecessor of the properties of a private Devaswam attached to the tarwad is not binding on the Devaswam, unless the compromise was entered into in good faith and for necessity and after due enquiries by the alienee. The decision as to good faith and necessity must be reached on a comprehensive survey of all the circumstances. It cannot be assumed that, because one party withdraws a large proportion of his original claim, the result is advantageous to the other, unless the prospects of the contest regarding the balance are considered and found unfavourable. The good faith and necessity for a compromise can, however, be upheld, though proof may be wanting that its terms represent those which would have been secured, had the matter been litigated fully.

The burden of proof regarding the propriety of the compromise is on the alienee.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J. Though the Indian Trusts Act does not apply to any public or private religious endowments, the principles embodied in section 43 apply to a trustee or trustees acting on behalf of a private religious trust. The powers of a trustee embodied in that section are enunciated primarily to protect him when acting bona fide against suits for damages by the cestui que trust for loss caused by the exercise of such powers. But the question whether property alienated to a third party by the trustee through an alleged breach of trust can be pursued successfully by the cestui que trust depends on very similar considerations, viz, whether the third party acted bona fide without notice of the breach and whether he was an alienee for valuable consideration.

The analogy between the case of a Hindu widow representing her husband's estate and the case of a trustee of a religious institution is rather remote.

It is necessary for Courts in India to scrutinise alienations by compromise and awards out of Court made in reference to properties relating to religious and charitable trusts with very great care before they are accepted as valid against the trust. M. RAVI VARMA R. MA v. RAMASUBRAMANIA IATTAR, (1916) 2 M. W. N. 312; 31 M. L. J. 733; 4 L. W. 576. 692

MALICIOUS PROSECUTION, suit for—Illegal distraint of cattle—Damage to reputation—Cattle Trespass Act (I of 1871), s. 20.

Per Curiam.—A suit for damages for malicious prosecution is not confined to criminal proceedings alone nor would such an action lie for all criminal prosecutions. The cases for which such a suit lies are those in which there is either (a) damage to a man's reputation or (b) danger to his liberty or (c) damage to his property.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—A suit for damages for malicious prosecution under section 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act may lie in some cases, for though in such an accusation there may not be either danger to the liberty or damage to the property of the accused, still there may be "damage to the reputation" of the person accused, considering his position in life and the motive and status in life of the accuser.

Per Napier, J.—A charge of illegal distraint of cattle does not come within the mischief of the principle of damage to the reputation of the accused and no suit for damages lies. The damage to a man's reputation must be something serious, as if the matter whereof he is accused be scandalous.

M SRIRAMULU NAIDU v. KOLANDAIVELU MUDALI, 10 M. L. T. 308; 31 M. L. J. 479; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 242; 4 L. W. 332 374

MASTER AND SERVANT—Incompetence, dismissal of servant for, before stipulated term of service—Wrongful dismissal, action for—Damages.

Where a person is employed who has not the requisite competency for the office, his dismissal before the stipulated term of service is not wrongful and no action lies for damages therefor.

There is no material difference between a servant who will not and a servant who cannot perform the duty for which he is hired. M R. MASWAMI AIYAR v. MADRAS TIMES PRINTING AND PUBLISHING CO., LTD. 655

MAXIMS—"Allegus contrarius non audiendus" 447

—"A man cannot take advantage of his own fraud," applicability of 945

—"Estoppel against estoppel setteth the matter at large 198

—"Ignorantia juris haud excusat.

The word jus used in the maxim "ignorantia juris haud excusat" denotes general law and not a private right. P Musammatt AISHAN v. MUHAMMAD DIN 119

MINES, minerals, right to—Grant—Severance of tenement—Ownership of sub-soil, vesting of, in grantor—Presumption—Sanad or deed of grant, loss of—Evidence of grantee's user of surface—Lost grant, presumption on basis of—Entry, grantor's right of, to work mines—Wrongful user of right, remedy for—Injunction—"Moghuli," meaning of.

In the absence of an express grant of the sub-soil, permanent tenure-holders, even if their estate be hereditary, do not enjoy the mineral rights and the same are not vested in them.

Where, prior to the date of a grant of land, both the ownership and the right of property in the surface as well as the sub-soil were vested in the grantor, as one entire tenement, the presumption is that, at the time of the grant, there was a severance of the surface rights from the property in the sub-soil. The surface rights with their incidents became vested in the grantee and the mines and minerals in the grantor as owner of the sub-soil as if there had been a reservation of them in his favour. The grantor's rights are the same as those of a fee simple freehold owner of land in England who makes a grant with an express reservation of the mines to himself together with the incidents that follow therefrom.

MINES—conold.

By reason of the said presumption and of the severance of the tenement and the reservation that must be deemed to arise in favour of the grantor, the latter has the right by implication to enter on the land for all reasonable and necessary purposes to enable him to work the mines and exercise his mineral rights.

The principles of the law governing freeholds and not copyholds should be applied to the case. It is only under the copyhold law where there is no reservation or custom proved that a deadlock occurs and neither landowner nor tenant can work the mines. Under the law applicable to free hold land, there can be no deadlock, for if the mines be excepted, the grantor has an implied right to work them as incidental to such exception; if there be no exception, then that right is with the grantee as the owner of the surface and sub-soil.

If, in working the mines and extracting the minerals, the grantor or his assignees cause damage to the owners of the surface, there is ample power in the Court to injunct them and prevent them from so doing.

The presumption of a grant in favour of a person in the nature of a lost grant, which means presuming a lawful origin to support long and continuous user and enjoyment of the property, can be made only on the basis of the actual user exercised and enjoyed by such person.

Where the original sanad or grant is lost or not produced, and the evidence establishes only user by the grantee as permanent tenure-holder of the surface rights of a mouza by cultivation of land, building of houses or excavation of tanks, no presumption can be made in his favour of a lost grant to exercise mineral rights in the mouza.

The term 'moghuli' appearing in a rent receipt is a word of doubtful meaning and at best imports no more than that the rent assessed represented a proportion of the Government revenue. PAT NAWAGARH COAL CO., LTD. v. BEHARI LAL, 20 C. W. N. 1135; 1 P. L. J. 275 450

MINOR, guardian ad litem of, confession of judgment by—Gross negligence—Minor, suit by, on attaining majority, to set aside decree.

Gross negligence on the part of the guardian ad litem of a minor in defending a suit gives the latter a cause of action to set aside the decree. P

MOHAN LAL v. NEKI, 117 P. L. R. 1916 195

—"Settlement by de facto guardian, validity of—Partnership—Relationship between heirs of deceased partner and surviving partners Right of deceased's heirs to claim profits—Settlement, if and when can be re-opened—Estoppel—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 241—Trusts Act (II of 1882), s. 88, ill. (f), construction of.

MINOR—contd.

In cases of urgent and imperative necessity, or where a transaction from its nature must necessarily be beneficial to a minor, a de facto guardian can alienate the property of the minor, whether moveable or immovable.

A settlement of accounts arrived at by the de facto guardian of a Muhammadan minor, as representing the amount due to him for his deceased father's share in a partnership, is binding on the minor if it is fair and is made bona fide and in the best interests of the minor and as the result of independent advice.

The minor is only entitled to either the stipulated or a fair rate of interest on the amount found to be due to him at the settlement.

A settlement once arrived at is final and in the absence of fraud or substantial errors the accounts cannot be re-opened or profits claimed on the ground that they were unduly large and the amount payable under the settlement or the interest thereon bore no proportion to it, especially where the settlement was long acted upon.

Plaintiff's father and the defendants, all belonging to the class of Kutchi Memon Muhammadans, were trading as partners till October 1907, when plaintiff's father died. In November, accounts were taken of the amount due to plaintiff, then a minor one year old, and a settlement arrived at that Rs 16,000 was due to him. This amount was left in the hands of defendants who were to pay interest at $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. The mother and maternal grandfather of plaintiff and two other respectable gentlemen were parties to the settlement, which was registered. The interest amounting to Rs. 100 a month was regularly paid by defendants to the plaintiff's maternal uncle, who now brought this suit as his next friend, for accounts and for a share of profits, since plaintiff's father's death. Mr. Justice Bakewell, on the Original Side, held that the settlement was void, as the plaintiff was properly represented, his mother not being his legal guardian, and decreed the suit, without even giving credit to sums regularly paid after the death of plaintiff's father. In appeal:

Held, reversing the decree of Mr. Justice Bakewell, that plaintiff was not entitled to maintain this suit and ask for an account.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—A minor who is entitled to claim the assets of his deceased father in a partnership is not entitled to claim as of right a share in the profits of the concern. There is nothing in the Indian Contract Act to that effect. There is no fiduciary relation between the surviving partners and the legal representatives of the deceased partner. The amount due to the deceased is a loan and nothing more.

It is always a very difficult process to find out to what exactly the profits earned in the trade are due, whether to the capital left by the deceased, or to the capital brought in by the other partners or to other things. Therefore, there are innumerable difficulties in the way of an account being taken. Discretion must be left in the Court in such matters to act on behalf of the minor.

Illustration (f) to section 88 of the Indian Trusts Act goes further than the operative portion of the section itself, and, if it is to be regarded as laying down that in every case where after the death of a partner the money is left outstanding in that partnership the legal representative of the deceased partner is entitled to a share of the profits, it is not sound law. M. Siddick v. Mahomed Hussain, (1916) 2 M. W. N. 34; + L. W. 521 728

MINOR—concl.

MORTGAGE by certificated guardian without Court's sanction—Minor's right to avoid—Burden of proof—Interest on mortgage of minor's property 380

Charge, deed of, construction of—Redemption

A mortgagor borrowed a certain sum of money by way of further advance from his mortgagee and gave a bond for the loan in the following terms:

"The above debt will be a charge against the property above mortgaged. If I fail to pay the whole or a part of the above debt, I will have to pay it at the time of redeeming the above mortgage." In a suit for redemption by the mortgagor:

Held, that the deed constituted a mortgage of or at least a charge on the property and that the plaintiff could not redeem it without payment of the amount secured by the deed. P. Hukam Chand v. Kadar Bux, 100 P. W. R. 1916 166 consolidation of—Redemption, postponement of—Clog on equity of redemption.

Where a subsequent mortgage-deed does not create any charge on the property previously mortgaged but merely postpones the redemption of the previous mortgage till the redemption of the subsequent mortgage, such covenant as to postponement of redemption does not amount to a contract of consolidation so as to render one transaction irredeemable without the redemption of the other, and may amount to an unreasonable clog on the equity of redemption. O. Rajendra Narain v. Deputy Commissioner, Bahraich, 3 O. L. J. 643 438 by co-sharer—Mortgagor tenant of mortgagee—Sale of mortgaged property to third person—Consideration, portion of, left with vendee to pay off arrears of rent—Rent, suit for arrears of, by mortgagee—Proper parties—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts.

A co-sharer in a village mortgaged his share with possession, and remained in cultivation of certain portions of the mortgaged land as tenant. Subsequently he sold his share, leaving a portion of the purchase-money with the vendee to pay up the arrears of rent due by him to the mortgagee and the lambardar. The vendee paid the whole money left with him to the lambardar alone. The mortgagee sued the lambardar, together with the vendor and the vendee, in the Civil Court, for his share of the money thus paid to the lambardar:

Held, that the mortgagee had no remedy of any kind against the vendee, but only as against the lambardar, and this too in a Rent Court. O. Beni Madho v. Asghar Hussain, 3 O. L. J. 515 65

Decree for foreclosure—Computation of time for payment—Appellate decree, effect of 779

MORTGAGE—contd.

—Foreclosure, decree nisi for, against mortgagor
 —Mortgagor, death of, before decree absolute—Heirs, one of several brought on record, effect of—Execution —Rule—Interest of other heirs, whether could be sold.

A Hindu widow, who was in possession of a certain share of her husband's property upon partition made among her sons and who lived jointly with one of the latter, mortgaged her share to pay off her husband's debt. The mortgagee obtained a decree nisi on the mortgage against the widow, but the latter died before the decree could be made absolute. The son, who had lived jointly with the widow, was alone brought on the record as her representative, and the property was brought to sale in execution of the decree and was purchased by plaintiffs, who sued all the heirs of the widow for possession.

Held, that the order absolute having been obtained against one out of several heirs of the widow, there was not in existence any decree under which the interests of the other heirs could be sold. A KUNDAY SINGH v. SURJA KUAR, 14 A. L. J. 989 103

—, modification of, by kaichit—Kaichit, whether requires registration 612

—Moveable property—Mortgage decree if moveable property—Mortgage of mortgage-decree, suit on—Limitation—Mortgaged property, purchase or portion of, by mortgagee—Mortgage, extinction—Intention.

A decree for sale obtained on the basis of a mortgage by the mortgagee is moveable property and a suit to enforce a hypothecation of such a decree is governed by Article 120 of the Limitation Act.

Where, however, the decree has been converted into immovable property, the mortgagee of such decree is entitled not only to the benefit of the new security but also to the benefit of the larger period of limitation under Article 132 of the Limitation Act.

Where a person in the position of a mortgagee purchases a portion of the mortgaged property the mortgage does not thereby become pro tanto extinguished, unless it is stipulated that the mortgage is to be extinguished or unless there are circumstances from which an intention to extinguish the mortgage in whole or part may be inferred. A JANNADEI v. LALA RAM, 4 A. L. J. 125 4

—Moveable property—Mortgage, how effected.

A mortgage of moveables can be as validly effected by parole as by a writing and the immediate effect of such a mortgage is to pass the property in the chattels mortgaged from the mortgagor to the mortgagee. It is altogether unnecessary that actual possession of the chattels should be given. B TEHLIL RAM GU DHARIDAS v. LONGIN D'AMELLO, 18 Bom. L. R. 587 231

—Prior and puisne encumbrancers, decrees obtained by—Sale in execution of both decrees—Purchased by first mortgagee with symbolic possession—Actual possession on by purchaser at second mortgagee's sale—Conflict of titles—Right of first mortgagee purchaser—Suit for recovery of mortgage amount—Nature of claim—Position of parties—Equities—Relief—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 74, 75—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXI, rr. 11, 12.

MORTGAGE—contd.

It is necessary, in a suit to enforce a mortgage security, that all necessary parties, including puisne and prior encumbrancers, should be impleaded.

Where, however, the rule is departed from and both prior and puisne mortgagees institute suits on their respective mortgages without impleading each other and obtain decrees, and in execution of such decrees the property is purchased by different persons in a suit to establish the priority of claim as between such purchasers in which the decree-holders and judgment-debtors are also impleaded, it is the duty of the Court to look to the real position of the parties and in awarding relief, work out the equities between them.

On 16th October 1903, M mortgaged a house to plaintiff's predecessor. In 1917, M effected a second mortgage of the same house to K. On 19th August 1910, the plaintiff sued on his mortgage without impleading M and obtained a decree after contest, in which the mortgagor was allowed the usual six months' time to redeem. The decree was made absolute in due course and the house was brought to sale and purchased by plaintiff on 30th July 1912. On 20th June 1911, K filed a suit on his mortgage without impleading the plaintiff. A consent decree was passed on 13th August 1911, in which the mortgagor was allowed only fifteen days to redeem. The house was sold again on 2th February 1912 and was purchased by B. Plaintiff was given formal possession and B got actual possession. Plaintiff brought the present suit against B and K for recovery of the amount due on his mortgage of 1903 and for possession of the house on default of payment.

Held, (1) that the suit was neither one for sale on plaintiff's mortgage nor a suit to foreclose that mortgage, but was based on plaintiff's failure to obtain actual possession of the property which he had purchased at the sale in execution of his decree;

(2) that B was entitled to nothing more than an opportunity of paying off the prior mortgage, and that on his declining to do so, he should surrender possession;

(3) that, as the right of sale possessed by each of the mortgagees had been exercised by them and exhausted, there was no need to put up the property again to sale or bring a second suit for sale and that what remained to be determined was the respective rights and liabilities of the rival auction-purchasers;

(4) that limitation for the suit commenced to run from the date of plaintiff's purchase.

Per Lindsay, J. The title of either party is immediately traceable to his purchase in execution and reference to their rights under the mortgages is only necessary for the purpose of ascertaining the equities existing between them. Each has an imperfect title acquired by purchase and the point for determination is which has the stronger equity in his favour. The plaintiff's omission to implead the puisne mortgagee rendered her title defective only to the extent that her title as owner is qualified by a right of redemption which was vested in the second mortgagee and which passed to the purchaser under the decree obtained on the second mortgage. The purchaser has no superior title merely.

MORTGAGE—contd.

on the ground that he purchased first and his title could only become absolute by a discharge of the prior encumbrance. A B. BU LAL v. JALAKIA, 14 A. L. J. 1146 343

— Prior and puisne encumbrances—Decree for sale in first mortgagee's suit and purchase by decree-holder—Puisne mortgage, non-joinder of, in suit—Renewal of puisne usufructuary mortgage after first mortgagee's decree, effect of—Merg—Suit for possession by auction-purchaser, maintainability of

A first mortgagee purchased the mortgaged properties in execution of the decree passed in the suit on his mortgage, to which a second usufructuary mortgage was not made a party. The latter got a renewal of his mortgage after the said decree. The first mortgagee decree-holder brought a suit for possession under Order XXI, rule 103, Civil Procedure Code, against the owner and the second usufructuary mortgage.

Held, that, in the absence of proof of any intention on the part of the usufructuary mortgagee to give up his security under the first deed, he must be presumed to have intended to keep it alive and he was entitled to rely on it against the plaintiff's decree and the sale thereunder.

Held, also, that, the defendant being in the position of a puisne mortgagee with possession and the plaintiff in that of a first mortgagee who had purchased the property in execution of the decree on his mortgage to which the puisne mortgagee was not a party, the plaintiff's suit for possession must fail.

The question whether previous incumbrances paid off or renewed are to be treated as still kept alive or as extinguished against mesne incumbrancers is one of intention of the parties to the transaction, and where there is no clear evidence of that intention from express declarations or attendant circumstances parties must be presumed to have intended what is for their benefit: the mere fact that the incumbrance has been paid off or renewed does not decide the question.

Where a subsequent incumbrancer alleges that a prior incumbrance has been extinguished by payment or renewal, it must be clearly established by cogent evidence, whether direct or inferential that the person making the payment or taking the renewed deed, deliberately and with the knowledge that it was to his benefit to keep the prior incumbrance alive, elected to extinguish it for all purposes; otherwise the presumption that a man intends what is to his benefit should be allowed to prevail.

The principle under which protection is granted to persons renewing prior incumbrances against intervening incumbrancers applies also to cases of intervening decrees under which property has been sold.

In a usufructuary mortgage possession is an essential part of the security and what is kept alive is not merely the security but the rights of the mortgagee on the property under the deed. M. PRAYAG DOSS JEE VARU v. BAYUR CHENGAMA NAIDU, 20 M. L. T. 295; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 288; 4 L. W. 477 456

MORTGAGE contd.

— prior to Transfer of Property Act—Redemption, clause in restraint of—Stipulation for absolute title on default of payment on specified date—Clog—Adverse possession, title by, whether can be set up in bar of right to enforce mortgage—Appropriation of rents due by mortgagee towards interest due by mortgagor, whether saves limitation—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) s. 60—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 20, Sch. I, Art. 132.

In the case of mortgages executed prior to the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, no agreement of the parties can operate inso facto to clog or restrain the equity of redemption, nor can an agreement affect the character of the mortgagee's possession so as to convert it from that of a mortgagor into that of a person prescribing for a full title.

The effect of the Transfer of Property Act is to preserve the equity of redemption unfettered, section 60 providing that only an independent act of the parties or an order of Court can operate to extinguish it.

Where the right to enforce a mortgage has become barred under Article 132 of the Limitation Act, it is not open to the mortgagee to set up his possession under an invalid stipulation in restraint of redemption in a suit for possession by the mortgagor and compel the mortgagor to redeem, and thus discharge a barred debt.

Per Ayling, J.—A payment under section 20 of the Limitation Act, in order to save limitation, must be a conscious act.

The mere appropriation of rents due by a mortgagee to the mortgagor towards the interest due by the latter will not save limitation, especially when the interest is payable not periodically but on a single date.

First plaintiff's father effected a kanom usufructuary mortgage with possession to defendants' ancestor on 14th November 87 for 30 years for Rs. 100. On 12th August 1875, he executed a simple mortgage on the same lands for Rs. 400. This latter mortgage contained a stipulation that if the principal and interest were not discharged by 1st August 1876, the mortgagees were to have jezman or absolute rights. In a suit for redemption of the first kanom mortgage, defendants pleaded the forfeiture clause in the second mortgage and their own adverse enjoyment in bar of plaintiffs' suit.

Held, (1) that the stipulation in the second mortgage was invalid as a clog on the equity of redemption.

(2) that the effect of the said stipulation was not to alter the character of defendants' possession from 12th August 1876 and to render it adverse to the title of the mortgagor, but that it still continued as the possession of the mortgagees.

(3) that plaintiffs were not bound to redeem the second mortgage after plaintiffs' rights thereunder had become extinguished under Article 132 of the Limitation Act.

(4) that, in the absence of a payment for interest in respect of the second mortgage, the appropriation by the defendants of rents due by them towards

MORTGAGE—contd.

interest did not operate to save the bar of limitation. M. ATHAN KUTTI v. MATAVIL ILLOTH SATURJANAN, (1917) M. W. N. 9; 5 L. W. 461; 32 M. L. J. 317

756

—redeemable—Suit for declaration that certain conditions were not enforceable, maintainability of 374

—Right to receive dues at funerals, mortgage of, validity of—Maha Brahmins, right of—Existing right—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 6.

A mortgage by a Maha Brahmin of his rights to receive the dues and offerings at funerals of Hindus on particular days is not null and void.

Obiter dictum.—No Maha Brahmin can bring a suit to compel any person carrying out a funeral to employ him and in the absence of a special agreement a Maha Brahmin cannot bring a suit against another Maha Brahmin for fees received.

The right to receive the dues at funerals is an existing right. A. SUKH LAL v. BISHAMBHAR, 5 A. L. J. 41 661 —, simple—Suit by simple mortgagee, nature of—Adverse possession, title by, effect of, as against mortgagor and mortgagee—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 28 Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 58.

The enforcement of a title by adverse possession as against a person who has executed a simple mortgage of the property will not extinguish the right of the mortgagee to sue for his debt and realise his security within the time allowed by law.

Per Sanderson, C. J.—The term 'adverse possession' implies that the person, against whom adverse possession is exercised, is a person who is entitled to demand possession at the moment the adverse possession begins.

Adverse possession affects the interest, and the interest only, which the person who was entitled to immediate possession had at that time, or, in other words, only the interest which the person having the right to immediate possession has in the property, when the adverse possession begins.

Where after a simple mortgage the mortgaged property is taken possession of by a third person, the latter takes possession only of what belonged to the mortgagor, viz., his equity of redemption, and, therefore, holds it subject to the liability of its being sold for the satisfaction of the mortgage debt.

Per Mookerjee, J.—A simple mortgagee is not entitled under the Transfer of Property Act to take possession of the mortgaged premises, he holds the property as security for the loan while the mortgagor continues in possession thereof.

A suit by a simple mortgagee for the sale of the mortgaged property is in no sense a suit for possession of an interest in immoveable property.

The proper scope of a mortgage suit is to cut off the equity of redemption and to bar the rights of the mortgagor and of those claiming under him; the only proper parties to such a suit are the mortgagor and the mortgagee and those who have acquired interest therein subsequent to the mortgage.

MORTGAGE—concl'd.

The question whether a third party has by adverse possession for the statutory period acquired a title paramount to both the mortgagor and the mortgagee should not be litigated in a mortgage suit, and any person claiming such a title in a mortgage suit should be discharged from the suit.

The dispossession of the mortgagor, subsequent to the execution of a simple mortgage, though it may operate by lapse of time under section 28 of the Limitation Act to extinguish the equity of redemption in favour of the adverse possessor, does not affect the interest of the mortgagee, as he is not entitled to possession of the mortgaged property either under the Statute or under the contract.

Section 28 of the Limitation Act, which prescribes a rule for the extinguishment of right to property, is expressly limited to suits for possession. In respect of debts, the provisions of the Limitation Act merely bar the remedy but do not extinguish the right. Therefore, when a mortgagor in possession is dispossessed and does not institute a suit against the trespasser within twelve years of the dispossession, his equity of redemption, and prima facie nothing more, becomes vested in the adverse possessor. The dispossession of the mortgagor in a simple mortgage does not extinguish the title of the mortgagee by lapse of time under section 28 of the Limitation Act.

Adverse possession operates against the mortgagee only when the mortgagee is entitled to possession and time runs against him from the date when he is entitled to enter upon the land. C. PRIYA SAKHI DEBI v. BIRESHWAR SAMANTA, 21 C. W. N. 177 277 —, suit for foreclosure of—Consent decree, whether preliminary decree—Final decree, application for—Limitation 802

—, suit on, against mortgagor and co-mortgagee—Mortgage-money paid to co-mortgagee who had authority to receive it—Decree, whether can be passed against co-mortgagee.

Where in a suit by a co-mortgagee against the mortgagor and the other co-mortgagee, a pro forma defendant, it was found that the mortgagor had paid up the full amount due on the mortgage to the pro forma defendant, who was entitled to receive the money on behalf of both the co-mortgagees, and the Court passed a simple money-decree in favour of the plaintiff against the pro forma defendant.

Held, that the suit must be dismissed and that the decree could not stand. O. CHANDI DAYAL v. GANESH PRASAD, 3 O. L. J. 628 449

MORTGAGE-DEED, interpretation of—Interest, covenant to pay, on default of payment of instalment.

Where under the terms of a mortgage-deed the mortgage-money was payable by certain specified instalments and the mortgagee was empowered to recover the entire money due to him with a certain rate of interest thereon if three instalments remained unpaid on the dates fixed therefor:

Held, that both the time and the amount formed the essence of the contract, and that if the payments of three instalments, consecutive or otherwise, were deficient in amount or were made beyond time, such payments would be ineffective to prevent the mortgagee from enforcing the covenant, unless it was shown that he had waived the defaults. O MANOHAR LAL v. SAKINA BEGAM, 3 O. L. J. 623 442

MORTGAGE—contd.

— DEED, separate arrangement in contravention of terms of, whether can be proved—Lease executed by mortgagor, possession of mortgagee under, effect of—Interest.

In view of section 92 of the Evidence Act, proof of a separate arrangement in direct contravention of the terms of a mortgage-deed is inadmissible.

Where a mortgage-deed expressly states that no interest is to be charged for the mortgage-money and the mortgagee is put in possession of the mortgaged property under a lease executed simultaneously with the mortgage-deed, evidence cannot be admitted to show that the mortgagee was put in possession of the property to provide for interest on the principal amount. O MUHAMMAD HUSAIN v. MUHAMMAD ASGHAR, 3 O. L. J. 462; 19 O. C. 328 23

— REDEMPTION—Appeal—Lower Court's decree, failure to comply with, whether bars appeal—Mortgagee, failure of, to keep accounts of additions and repairs, effect of—Compensation.

Failure to deposit the redemption money in compliance with the decree of the lower Court does not necessarily bar the hearing of an appeal from that decree.

It is the duty of a mortgagee to keep accounts of expenditure on additions to and repairs of the mortgaged property, and if he fails to do so, all presumptions will be made in favour of the mortgagor, but such failure does not ipso facto defeat a claim for compensation which is proved in other ways. P THAKUR DAS v. RADHA KISHAN, 99 P. R. 1916 125 — Compromise—Time fixed by consent, whether can be extended by Court.

In a suit for redemption, where the parties have by compromise fixed a time for redemption, the Court has no power to extend the time without consent of parties. L B MAUNG SAN LIN v. MAUNG SHWE THEIN 672 — Interest, covenant as to payment of, construction of.

A mortgage-deed provided that the mortgagee would remain in possession of the mortgaged property and would receive the profits thereof in lieu of interest, the mortgagor, being entitled to redeem the property on payment of the principal sum. In case of a deficiency of profits the mortgagor covenanted to make it up from his own pocket.

Held, that there being no covenant on the part of the mortgagor that the deficiency in the profits should be added to the principal or that it should be paid at the time of redemption, he was entitled to redeem the mortgaged property on payment of the principal sum only. A ALI AHMAD v. KALKA PRASAD, 14 A. L. J. 986 95

— Payment of mortgage-debt, whether extinguishes sub-mortgage—Notice.

A sub-mortgage is extinguished by the payment of the mortgage-debt by the mortgagor to the mortgagee, if the former has no notice or knowledge of the sub-mortgage, and acts in good faith. M POOSARLA CHINNASWAMY v. KATTAMOORI VENKATA RAMAKRISHNAYYA, 4 L. W. 502; (1917) M. W. N. 111 778

MORTGAGE—contd.

— REDEMPTION—Suit based on specific mortgage—Mortgage specified not proved—Plaintiff, whether can get decree on prior mortgages—Cause of action—Multifariousness—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. I, r. 3—Misjoinder.

The plaintiff brought a suit for redemption against two persons on the basis of a particular mortgage. The specific mortgage set up in the plaint was not proved.

Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for redemption in that suit on the basis of prior mortgages in favour of the two defendants separately. PAT GOVIND KANDU v. WAJID ALI 976

— Suit by prior mortgagee—Execution—Sale—Puisne mortgagee's right to redeem—Irregularities in execution proceedings, effect of.

Plaintiff-mortgagee obtained a decree on foot of his mortgage, and in execution thereof purchased the property in dispute, and obtained delivery of possession. Subsequently defendant, puisne mortgagee, obtained a decree against the same property, and in execution purchased it himself, and got registration of his name in the Collectorate register. Plaintiff sued for declaration of title and confirmation of possession, or in the alternative for recovery of possession. Defendant set up a right to redeem plaintiff's mortgage, and also alleged that he was not bound by the sale in execution of the latter's decree, as his name did not appear in the execution proceedings.

Held, (1) that defendant's right to redeem continued up to the confirmation of sale in plaintiff's favour;

(2) that the omission of defendant's name from proceedings in execution of plaintiff's decree did not render the sale a nullity and that the defendant was, therefore, bound by it. PAT MUHAMMAD RAFI v. MUHAMMAD ASKARI, 1 P. L. J. 261 433

— Tagavi claims, non-payment of—Sale of mortgaged property—Benami purchase—Mortgagee, liability of—Purchaser, not bona fide—Equity enforceable—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 76—Trusts Act (II of 1882), s. 90—Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom. Act V of 1879), ss. 56, 153.

The defendant No. 1 was a san-mortgagee of certain lands mortgaged to him by the plaintiff's father. In 1901 the plaintiff's mother for the benefit of those interested in the property took an advance by way of tagavi and gave a charge upon one of the survey numbers, viz., 311, as collateral security for payment of the loan. In 1903 the plaintiff's mother on behalf of herself and the plaintiff, her minor daughter, executed a mortgage-deed with possession in favour of the mortgagee and put him in possession of all the property previously charged under the san-mortgage including the survey No. 311. The survey No. 311 was sold in 1906 to satisfy the claim of Government in respect of the tagavi advance and was purchased by the defendant No. 2 benami for the defendant No. 1. Subsequently it was purchased by the defendant No. 3, who had a notice of everything that had occurred in connection with the property. The plaintiff sued to redeem the property in 1912, being entitled to the benefit of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act;

MORTGAGE—conold.

Held, (1) that the tagavi advance granted to the mortgagor by the Government was of a "public nature" within the meaning of section 76 of the Transfer of Property Act and that inasmuch as the sale took place owing to the default of the mortgagee, section 90 of the Trusts Act applied and that the defendant No. 1 could not obtain immunity from his breach of trust by reason of the extinction of his position as mortgagee;

(2) that section 56 of the Land Revenue Code did not apply, inasmuch as there was no forfeiture under section 153 of that Code;

(3) that the defendant No. 3 could not resist the suit; inasmuch as he was bound by the equities enforceable against the vendor by reason of his not being bona fide purchaser without notice. B CHITTA BHULA v. BAI JAMNI, 18 BOM. L. R. 438; 40 BOM. 433 295

MUHAMMADAN LAW—Ahmadi, whether Muham- madans.

Members of the Ahmadiya sect of Qadian are Muhammadans P KHALIL AHMAD v. ISRAFIL 2 P. L. J. 109; 1 P. L. W. 284 392

Dower, whether can be claimed in suit for share of inheritance.

The claim of a widow for dower is, under the Muhammadan Law, a debt chargeable against the general estate of the deceased husband.

It is a clear principle of the Muhammadan Law, applicable alike to Shias and Sunnis, that the estate of a deceased Muhammadan is, before its distribution among the persons entitled as heirs, liable for the debts which were owing by the deceased at the time of his death. Therefore, the widow of a deceased Muhammadan is competent to put forward her claim for dower in a suit brought by one of the heirs of the deceased for a share in the estate, to which she is a party. O BAQAR MIRZA v. MEHDI HASAN, 19 O. C. 246 203

Hindu Law.—Kutchi Memons, law applicable to 728

Legitimacy—Acknowledgment of parentage—Treatment.

It is open to a Muhammadan to legitimatise an illegitimate child by acknowledgment of his paternity, but to establish such legitimization it is necessary to prove an intention evidenced by a formal and deliberate act.

Where in a case it was found on the facts that a Muhammadan had seduced a maid-servant, who had grown up in his household and was considerably loved by him, had begotten children from her, and had then repaired the wrong by marrying her; that he had given food and shelter to those children; and that in a Will subsequently executed by him he had referred to them simply as his daughters and provided for their maintenance, marriages and support:

Held, that from the above circumstances it could not be inferred that he had intended to legitimatise those children. O ZAHIDA BIBI v. WALI MUHAMMAD, 3 O. L. J. 654 926

Marriage—Muta—Nikah, before expiry of period of muta, validity of.

MUHAMMADAN LAW—contd.

A marriage by nikah with a muta wife during the subsistence of the period of muta, but after the surrender of the unexpired period, is valid. O BAQAR MIRZA v. MEHDI HASAN, 19 O. C. 246 203

Mosque, right to hold separate congregation in.

Every mosque is open to any Muhammadan, to whatever sect he may belong, who chooses to pray in it. But members of any and every sect of Muhammadans are not entitled to pray in every mosque as a separate congregation behind an imam chosen by themselves.

Per Roe, J.—Semble.—Where people deliberately come late to prayers they cannot be allowed to have a second service of their own. PAT KHALIL AHMAD v. ISRAFIL, 2 P. L. J. 108; 1 P. L. W. 284 302

Mujawar, eligibility of women for office of—Right to emoluments—Burden of proof—Custom.

Under Muhammadan Law, a woman can hold a religious office unless there are duties of a religious nature which she cannot perform in person or by deputy.

The onus is on those who seek to exclude women of proving that they are disqualified.

Where the duties of an office are not very distinctly defined, the safest course to follow is to be guided by the custom of the institution.

The rights of women to hold the office of mujawar should be upheld where there is a usage in the institution of getting the duties performed by proxy or deputy, and, in such a case, there is no legal obstacle to their sharing in the endowments of the office and getting their duties performed by proxy. M IMAM BEE v. MOLLA KHASIM SAHIB, 5 L. W. 226 889

SUCCESSION—Shia School—Widow's right of succession to landed property of her deceased husband—"Landed property," meaning of.

A childless Shia widow is not entitled to any share in the landed property of her deceased husband.

A right to receive a fixed annual sum of money in the nature of a rent charge is not 'landed property' within the meaning of the above rule, so as to exclude the widow from participation therein.

A grant of muafi land is a grant of the full proprietary interest in the land free of the revenue, and what the grantee takes under the grant is 'landed property' within the meaning of the above rule. O BAQAR MIRZA v. MEHDI HASAN, 19 O. C. 246 203

WAFQ—Dedication, partial, to religious and charitable objects—Charge on property—Annuity, claim of, under waqf instrument—Interest, right to.

The question whether a waqf is valid or not must depend on the circumstances existing at the date of the execution of the deed. The true test is whether, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, the dominating purpose and intention of the grantor was to provide for charitable and religious objects.

Where, under the terms of a waqf, a portion of the property was to go for religious and charitable objects, the main object of the settlor being to benefit his daughter and her successors:

• MUHAMMADAN LAW—concl'd.

Held, that the waqf was not valid as such, but the religious and charitable trusts constituted by it would be a valid charge on the property.

A person claiming an annuity under the terms of a document in the nature of a waqf is not entitled to interest. C KARIMUNNESSA v. EKIWA 904 — WILL, acceptance of terms of, effect of—Estoppel.

If a person entitled to succeed as an heir to a deceased Muhammadan who has left a Will, accepts the provisions of the Will and derives benefits thereunder, he is estopped from subsequently repudiating it and claiming the benefits of the Muhammadan Law of succession. O WALI MUHAMMAD v. DAULAT-UN-NISSA, 3 O. L. J. 647 921

— — — — —, interpretation of—Sunni sect—Bequest, subject to condition, effect of.

Among Sunni Muhammadans if a testator devises property subject to a condition, the devise must be treated as unconditional and as conferring a complete title upon the legatee. O BAKHTAWAR KHAN v. FAROOQ AHMAD, 3 O. L. J. 639; 19 O. C. 319 423 — — — — — Partition decree—Provision for payment of debts.

Under Muhammadan Law, the estate of a deceased person must be applied to the payment of his debts and funeral expenses before the heirs can make partition of it.

Where a Muhammadan has by his Will bequeathed certain properties for payment of mahar and dower debts and his heirs have filed a suit for partition, it is open to the Court, at the time of passing the final decree, to ascertain the debts due by the deceased and to provide for their payment out of the estate before partition is actually effected. M MAHAMAD MEERAN BIBI v. MAHAMAD ROWTHER, (1917) M. W. N. 98 879

MUNICIPALITY, powers of—Owner of land covered by drain, rights of—Injunction—Declaration 96

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS ACT (XXVI OF 1881), Ss. 22, 66—Hundi, payable sixty-one days after date—Presentation for acceptance, whether necessary—Presentation for payment, when to be made—Maturity.

In the case of a hundi payable sixty-one days after date, the payee or endorsee is not bound to present it for acceptance at once.

Every bill of exchange, which is not expressed to be payable on demand, at sight, or on presentment, is at maturity on the third day after the day on which it is expressed to be payable, and must be presented for payment at maturity.

Therefore, a hundi drawn on 7th May and payable sixty-one days after date, would be correctly presented for payment on July 10th. A GANGA PRASAD v. HIRA LAL, 14 A. L. J. 1166 656

— — — — — S. 32 644

— — — — — Ss. 32, 43—Bill of exchange—Consignment of goods—War, declaration of, effect of—Acceptance—Royal Proclamation (12th December 1914), whether retrospective.

A German resident in Hamburg drew a bill of exchange upon the defendants on the 24th June 1914 in favour of the plaintiffs for a certain amount payable at thirty days' sight to the order of the plaintiffs—value received—which the drawees were to place to the account of the drawer as advised. The bill purported to be drawn upon the defendants against 50 bales of goods bearing a certain mark per s. s. Lichtenfels, a German steamer. It was presented with the shipping documents and accepted on the 20th July 1914 payable at the office of the plaintiffs in Bombay. The s. s. Lichtenfels reached Bombay just before the outbreak of the war and in order to evade capture left Bombay and took shelter in a neutral port. The bill was presented for payment on the due date with the shipping documents for the 50 bales attached but was dishonoured by non-payment. The plaintiffs brought this suit, alleging that the British Government had made arrangements by which consignees of cargo per s. s. Lichtenfels could obtain delivery and they averred their readiness and willingness to hand over the documents against payment of the amount due under the bill:

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS ACT—concl'd.

Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed, inasmuch as if the acceptance was unqualified the defendants were bound to pay on the due date, and if the acceptance was qualified they were bound to pay "at or after maturity" when the money was demanded after the Proclamation dated the 12th December 1914, whereunder consignees were permitted to take delivery of goods from enemy ships in neutral ports.

The Proclamation of the 12th December 1914 is not retrospectively operative for the purpose of validating a contract rendered invalid by the war but operates to permit performance, before it is too late, of the condition alleged. B MOTISHAW & Co. v. MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LTD., 18 Bom. L. R. 521 258

— — — — — S. 43 258, 644

— — — — — S. 66 656

ODDH LAWS ACT (XVIII OF 1876), S. 5—Reasonable dower, matters to be considered in determining.

In considering a claim of dower under section 5 of the Oudh Laws Act, the first matter to be regarded is whether the sum actually agreed upon is excessive with reference to the means of the husband. If it is not found to be so, there is no occasion to discuss the status of the wife for the purpose of reducing the amount.

In considering whether the amount agreed upon is excessive with reference to the means of the husband in cases where the claim is made by a widow, regard must be had to the value of the husband's estate at the time of his death. The principal matters to be considered in deciding whether a certain sum is excessive or not, are the extent and nature of the claims of the various persons who as heirs are entitled to divide the estate. If it is made to appear that the payment of a certain sum on account of dower would reduce the divisible estate to such an extent as to leave the heirs poorly provided for, such a sum would be considered excessive. O BAQAR MIRZA v. MENDI HASAN, 19 O. C. 246 203

— — — — — S. 9—Co-sharer—Pre-emption suit—Plaintiff one, debarred from instituting suit—Co-plaintiff, position of 188

OUDH LAWS ACT—concl'd.

S. 9—Pre-emption in Oudh—Pre-emptors, rival, rights of, determination of.

The general principles laid down by the Allahabad High Court regarding the law of pre-emption, which prevails in the province of Agra, cannot be applied so as to affect the scope of the Oudh Laws Act which regulates the law of pre-emption in Oudh.

Where rival pre-emptors, having the right to pre-empt, claim the same property in exercise of such right, the right to acquire the property must, under section 9 of the Oudh Laws Act, be decided by lot.

○ RAJ BAHADUR SINGH v. CHANDRAPAL, 19 O. C. 185 170

S. 10—Pre-emption—Mortgage—Foreclosure—Decree for pre-emption obtained by one co-sharer without impleading others equally entitled, effect of—Transfer of pre-empted property by decree-holder during pendency of appeal, effect of—Bona fides—Suit carried on by money supplied by third person, whether liable to dismissal.

A suit for pre-emption is not liable to dismissal merely because it is carried on with money supplied by a third person, it being open to the pre-emptor to sell his interest in the property obtained by pre-emption and pay the money to the vendee.

After a decree for pre-emption has been passed and payment made in pursuance of it, the right to pre-emption fructifies into a title to the property forming the subject of the claim, though that title may be subject to the result of an appeal which may be filed in the case by an unsuccessful party.

On foreclosure of certain property, one of several persons equally entitled to pre-empt the property obtained a decree for pre-emption in a suit to which others who were also equally entitled to pre-empt were not made parties. Subsequently one of these others brought a suit for pre-emption against the person who had obtained the previous decree for pre-emption without impleading the person who had obtained the original decree for foreclosure. His claim for pre-emption was decreed, but the unsuccessful party filed an appeal against it and during the pendency of the appeal the decree-holder transferred the property acquired by pre-emption to a third person, who was joined as a respondent:

Held, that the first decree for pre-emption furnished a cause of action to persons equally entitled along with the decree-holder, inasmuch as the latter obtained the property by pre-emption to the exclusion of others who had an equal right to pre-empt the same.

Held, further, that the omission to implead the person who had obtained the decree for foreclosure, in the subsequent suit for pre-emption, was not a fatal defect. ○ RAM SAHAY v. JAGDAMBA SINGH, 19 O. C. 153; 3 O. L. J. 683 163

OUDH RENT ACT (XXII of 1886), S. 108 462

S. 108 (5)—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Landlord, suit by, against mukhtar—Rent of shops—Bazar dues—Limitation.

A suit by a landlord against his agent (ziladar and mukhtar) for the recovery principally of money collected as rent of shops, and of price of certain grain realised as bazar dues, lies in a Civil and not in a Rent Court, inasmuch as it does not fall within the purview of section 108 (5) of the Oudh Rent Act, and consequently it is not subject to the period of limitation prescribed by the said Act. ○ PIYABI v. JAGANNATH KUAR, 3 O. L. J. 539; 19 O. C. 314 84

OUDH RENT ACT—concl'd.

Ss. 127, 108—Tenant, position of, when ejected by trespasser—Trespasser, suit against, for assessment and recovery of rent.

An ordinary tenant who has been wrongfully ejected from his holding (which was either under his own cultivation or under that of a sub-tenant) by a person other than his own landlord, can treat such person as his sub-tenant and sue him for assessment and recovery of rent under section 127 read with section 108 of the Oudh Rent Act. ○ SHEODAT SINGH v. KALI, 3 O. L. J. 630; 19 O. C. 370 462

PARTITION, suit for, of fraction of joint estate, maintainability of—Co-sharer landlords.

A suit for the partition of a very small portion of a joint estate, in which alone the parties are jointly interested as putnidars is maintainable. ○ RAMADA SUNDARI MANDAL v. SHYAMA KANTA 939

PARTNERSHIP—Partners, rights and liabilities of, inter se.

Persons entering into agreements of partnership cannot be said to buy anything at all from each other. The most that any partner can be said to buy by putting money into a business in consideration of a partnership share in it is the right upon a dispute to a partnership account and division of any of the assets ultimately found due.

T advanced to V a certain amount on the hypothecation of some press machines. Later on D entered into partnership with V. V thereafter again took a fresh advance from T on the hypothecation of the same press. On a suit by T, D, who had no notice of the transactions of V with T, resisted the suit on the ground that T could not proceed against his half share in the press:

Held, that T was entitled to bring all the property in suit to sale under his mortgages. ○ TEHLIRAM GIRDHARIDAS v. LONGIN D'MELLO, 18 Bom. L. R. 587 231

Relationship between heirs of deceased partner and surviving partners—Right of deceased's heirs to claim profits—Settlement, if and when can be re-opened—Estoppel 728

PENAL CODE (Act XLV of 1860), Ss. 100, 148, 325—Right of private defence—Injury caused in self-defence.

Four persons of the accused's party were digging a drain. They were attacked by the complainants. Partisans of the parties ran up and a free fight ensued. One of the accused's party was killed and the arm of one of the complainants' party was fractured. The accused were convicted of offences under sections 148 and 325, Indian Penal Code:

Held, that the accused must be acquitted, as there was no safe ground for holding that they acted otherwise than in self-defence either of themselves or of the deceased. ○ BEGA v. EMPEROR, 105 P. L. R. 1916; 18 Cr. L. J. 139 491

PENAL CODE—contd.

—S. 143—Unlawful assembly—Crowd in threatening attitude—Disturbance of religious function.

Where a large crowd of Hindus appeared in a village and threatened to take away the cows of the Muhammadans which they had collected for sacrifice on the occasion of Bakr-id:

Held, that an offence under section 143, Indian Penal Code, had been committed. PAT EMPEROR v. SUBA SINGH, 18 Cr. L. J. 110 318

—S. 148 491

—S. 182 36

—S. 186—Obstructing Munsif to pass through accused's own property for making local inspection, whether offence.

The accused, who were no parties to a suit in which a public right of way was claimed, did not allow a Munsif, in whose Court the suit was pending, to pass in a boat through a ditch which was their private property, when the Munsif wanted to pass through it for the purpose of making a local inspection in connection with the suit:

Held, that the accused did not commit any offence under section 186, Indian Penal Code. C NISHI KANTA PAL v. EMPEROR, 20 C. W. N. 857; 18 Cr. L. J. 62 46

—S. 193 482

—S. 193—Perjury—Contradictory statements, when indictable 496

—S. 193—Police, false statement to, whether offence.

Obiter dictum.—It is no offence to make a false statement to the Police. L B PO YIN v. EMPEROR, 9 Bur. L. T. 203; 18 Cr. L. J. 98 206

—Ss. 209, 210 487

—S. 211 36

—S. 225B 469

—S. 292—'Obscene' publication—Medical journal, description of sexual disorders in—Offence.

Disease is a thing to be combated, and descriptions of it, with cures suggested, printed in a paper intended to reach sufferers and doctors and not likely to come into the hands of others are not criminal. On the other hand, descriptions of defective sexual enjoyment, with advice for heightening and prolonging such enjoyment in the case of normal persons, should be kept out of public prints, as they amount to incentives to sensuality. P EMPEROR v. THAKAR DATT, 18 Cr. L. J. 126; 7 P. W. R. 1917 Cr. 478

—S. 292—Obscene publication—Obscenity, tests for determining—Intention, whether material.

Where matter contained in a book is obscene, it is no justification of an offence under section 292 of the Indian Penal Code that the matter published was written by an eminent writer.

The term 'obscene' is not defined in the Indian Penal Code, but the test of obscenity is whether the matter charged as being obscene is likely to deprave and corrupt the minds of those who are open to such immoral influences and into whose hands the publication of the sort may fall.

PENAL CODE—contd.

The question of intention of the writer is not germane to the consideration of an offence under section 292 of the Indian Penal Code, which can only be gathered from the character of the matter contained in the book, the publisher of which must be deemed to have intended the natural consequences of his act.

Where a publication is devoted to depicting the illicit passion of a libertine towards the married wife of another and is priced so low as to be within reach of the man in the street, it is an obscene publication, even though the intention of the publisher was to publish the classical composition of a standard author in the true interests of literature. M PUBLIC PROSECUTOR v. MANTRIPRAGADA MARKONDEYULU, 5 L. W. 237 521

—S. 302—Murder—Sentence—Extenuating circumstances—Murder in the heat of passion.

A sentence of death should ordinarily be passed for the crime of murder unless there are extenuating circumstances, and a mere absence of aggravating circumstances is not enough to justify a sentence of transportation for life.

The fact that a murder was committed without premeditation in the heat of passion upon a sudden quarrel is not an extenuating circumstance. L B EMPEROR v. NGA MYAT KAING, 18 Cr. L. J. 113 465

—S. 317—'Having the care of such child', meaning of—Person entrusted with custody of child for abandonment, whether 'has care' of child—Offence.

Any person receiving an infant from its mother, on the distinct understanding that the mother never desired or wished to have the child back again, must in law be regarded as a person having the care of that child until he or she has transferred it to the care and custody of some other person or institution.

The shortness or temporary nature of the custody is immaterial and any exposure or abandonment by the person receiving the child is an offence under section 317, Indian Penal Code.

The mother is also guilty of an offence under sections 317 and 109, Indian Penal Code, if she hands over the child so that it might be abandoned. B EMPEROR v. BLANCHE CONSTANT CRIPPS, 18 Bom. L. R. 934; 18 Cr. L. J. 93; 41 B. 152 306

—S. 325 491

—S. 342—Wrongful confinement 315

—S. 409 145

—S. 411 320

—S. 417—Cheating proceedings for, quashed, as no prima facie case made out—Process, issue of, against accused—Revision by High Court—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 439.

In a proceeding under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, the Pleader of the 1st party having agreed to persuade his client to give an undertaking for the protection of the property in dispute in that proceeding, the opposite party withdrew from the property. The Pleader's client was willing to give the requisite undertaking but the opposite party did not accept it and filed a complaint against the Pleader under section 417, Indian Penal Code. The Magistrate issued process against the Pleader:

PENAL CODE—concl'd.

Held, that no prima facie case of cheating was made out against the Pleader, and the proceedings against him should be quashed. C NRISHINHA KUMAR MUKHERJEE v. KUMUDENDU MUKHERJEE, 20 C. W. N. 1112; 18 Cr. L. J. 50 34

— S. 420

145

— S. 420—Cheating, elements of—Inducement to execute document, whether offence—Charge, framing of—Practice.

In a case of cheating it must be shown exactly how the complainant has, in the first instance, been misled and what loss he has suffered, or what attempt to obtain a benefit to his prejudice has been made by the accused.

A decree-holder in a certain suit in consideration of the judgment-debtor executing two bonds promised to get a postponement of the sale and the judgment-debtor accordingly executed the bonds which, to the knowledge of both were for fictitious amounts. The decree-holder failed to obtain the postponement and retained the bonds in his possession. He was charged by the judgment-debtor with the offence of cheating under section 420, Indian Penal Code:

Held, that the offence of cheating was not made out as the failure to get a postponement of the sale was only a breach of contract for which the decree-holder was liable in damages for any loss proved to have been caused to the judgment-debtor and the retention of the bonds was not an offence by itself.

It is not an offence to induce a person to execute a document, unless it is shown that the inducement was made by some false or fraudulent representation.

A charge of cheating was drawn up as "that you on.....cheated and induced him to execute two documents in favour of.....":

Held, that the frame-work of the charge showed no offence at all.

In a criminal trial there is less difficulty and less liability to error if the Court throughout the trial keeps before it the frame-work of the charge in order to see whether the evidence fits into it. A MEGHRAJ v. EMPEROR, 18 Cr. L. J. 131 483 — Ss. 441, 442—Criminal trespass—Panatchut or outer verandah, whether part of dwelling-house.

The panatchut or outer verandah where shoes are taken off is part of a Burmese dwelling-house and a person who commits criminal trespass on a panatchut under the circumstances set forth in section 441, Indian Penal Code, commits house-trespass, and it is an offence involving breach of the peace within the meaning of section 106, Criminal Procedure Code, where the object is to cause hurt to one of the persons in the house. L B SIT HON v. EMPEROR, 9 BUR. L. T. 204; 8 L. B. R. 463; 18 Cr. L. J. 81 145

— Ss. 457, 411—Joint trial—Conviction of some accused under section 457 and of others under 411, legality of 320

PENALTY—Interest, provision for, penal, whether relievable—Consent decree.

An agreement to pay an enhanced rate of interest, not from the date of default but from that of the original obligation, is in the nature of a penalty and is unenforceable.

A penalty will be relieved against even where it is embodied in a decree passed by consent of parties M KANDULA PEDA LINGA REDDI v. KAKUMANU HANUMAYYA 764

PLAINT, amendment of.

Where plaintiff sued to redeem a mortgage, but it was found that the document sued on was in effect a sale-deed with an option to re-purchase, and the plaintiff sought to be allowed to ask for specific performance of the agreement to re-sell:

Held, that, the facts and the relief sought being in effect the same, the plaintiff should be allowed to amend his plaint. L B MA SHWE U v. MAUNG PO LU, 9 BUR. L. T. 177 91

—, amendment of, grounds for—Limitation, commencement of 914

—, amendment of—Pleadings 665

PLEADINGS—Fraud, allegations of—Proof.

When the plaintiff sets up a charge of fraud against the defendant, the nature and particulars of the fraud should be specifically stated and the fraud so alleged must be established beyond doubt C LALIT MOHUN NUNDY v. HARIDAS MUKHERJEE, 24 C. L. J. 335 707 —, untenable, of one party, whether can be availed of by other party in support of his case.

A party cannot be allowed to extract from the other party's plea something in support of his own case when that plea in itself is a bad plea that cannot be admitted. O MUHAMMAD HUSAIN v. MUHAMMAD ASGHAR, 3 O. L. J. 462; 19 O. C. 323 23

PLEADINGS AND PROOF, variance between—Suit based on specific mortgage—Mortgage not proved—Plaintiff, whether can get decree on prior mortgages 976

POSSESSION, physical and constructive, nature of—Boundary pillars, erection of, whether amounts to possession—Trespasser, possession of, nature of—Land covered by water at certain intervals, effect of—Dispossession, what amounts to 715

— Suit by one riaya against another for possession of village land appurtenant to dwelling-house, maintainability of.

A riaya can maintain a suit for the recovery of possession of village land appurtenant to his dwelling-house against another riaya who has ousted him from it. O RAM SARAN v. SAHEBDIN LAT, 19 O. C. 169 116

POWER-OF-ATTORNEY, name of Pleader omitted from body of, effect of—Objection taken at late stage, effect of 103

PRACTICE—Finding of Judge, form of—Precision and definiteness—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XX, rr. 4, 5.

The findings of a Court should be specifically and precisely stated, whatever reasons therefor may be contained in the judgment. A BALAK v. ALEY HASAN 304

PRE-EMPTION—Building, whether shop or residential—Test 843

— Compensation for pre-emptor remaining out of possession of pre-empted property.

Where a vendee by his act or omission deprives the pre-emptor both of the use of the pre-emption money and the pre-empted property, the pre-emptor is entitled to get reasonable interest for the time he is so deprived. P SARDAR BEGAM v. JHANDA MAL, 170 P. W. R. 1916 382 — Custom—Co-sharer, refusal of, to purchase, effect of—Waiver.

Where the custom is that a co-sharer wishing to sell his property should first offer it to the other co-sharers, such co-sharer, if he informs the other co-sharers of his intention to sell and they decline to purchase on the ground that they have not the means or any other similar ground the vendor, is at liberty, without violating the custom, to sell to an outsider. If, however, a co-sharer intimates that he is ready to buy the property at a price, in such a case it is the duty of the vendor to mention a price, and not to sell to any one else at a lesser price.

Where a Court of Wards, intending to sell the property of a ward, widely published its intention, and the plaintiff did not come forward to exercise his right of pre-emption till more than a year after the completion of the sale:

Held, that the plaintiff must be taken to have waived his right of pre-emption. A NAUNIHAL SINGH v. RAM RATAN, 14 A. L. J. 1138 511

— Decree based on compromise, compliance with 806

— Mortgage—Foreclosure—Decree absolute—Relinquishment by mortgagee in favour of mortgagor, effect of—Cause of action, extinguishment of, by subsequent acts of defendant.

Once a right of pre-emption has accrued it cannot be defeated by a re-sale to the vendor.

A mortgagee obtained a decree absolute for foreclosure, which gave rise to a right of pre-emption in favour of the plaintiff, but before the institution of a suit for pre-emption the mortgagee executed a deed of relinquishment of the property in favour of the ex-mortgagors:

Held, that the relinquishment could not extinguish the right of pre-emption which had already accrued to the plaintiff. O MANNA SINGH v. BIHARI SINGH, 19 O. C. 183; 3 O. L. J. 720 181

— Mortgage—Foreclosure—Decree for pre-emption obtained by one co-sharer without impleading others equally entitled, effect of—Transfer of pre-empted property by decree-holder during pendency of appeal, effect of—Bona fides—Suit carried on by money supplied by third person, whether liable to dismissal 163

— Price of property, decision as to—Market value—Income of property—Court, position of—Presumption—Bad faith.

A Court has a perfect right to decide on the facts whether property has been genuinely sold for a fancy price which has been paid to and enjoyed by the vendor, or whether the sale-price has been fixed fictitiously in order to defeat claims for pre-emption and has not been actually enjoyed by the vendor.

PRE-EMPTION—concl'd.

A Court has a right under the provisions of section 13, Act XVIII of 1876, to decide that the price was not fixed in good faith and to determine the amount to be paid in the suit for pre-emption upon the market value.

But in the absence of actual evidence to show that the price was fixed in bad faith, no legal presumption to that effect can arise from the fact that the price paid by the vendee, as well as even that offered by the pre-emptor, are, in view of the recorded income of the property, such as no reasonable man actuated by business principles would offer. O SHAMBHU DAT v. JAGANNATH, 3 O. L. J. 543 173

— Sale sanctioned by Deputy Commissioner—Procedure 763 — —, suit for, on basis of being co-sharer—Possession—Proof—Re-purchase by vendor, whether defeats third person's right of pre-emption.

Possession may be sufficient title as against a trespasser, but something more than possession recently acquired must be shown as a basis for a claim to pre-empt as a co-sharer.

A person who sells property in respect of which another has a right of pre-emption, cannot defeat that other's claim to pre-empt by re-purchasing the property before the suit for pre-emption is brought. O CHHATARPAL SINGH v. KUSHAR SINGH, 19 O. C. 190 172 — Suit, decree in, under appeal—Government notification taking away right of pre-emption, effect of.

A Government notification taking away the right of pre-emption in respect of certain property would be fatal to the case of a plaintiff in whose favour no decree had been passed at the date of the notification, but it would not affect the rights of a plaintiff in whose favour a decree had been passed before the date of the notification, merely because that decree was under appeal at that date. P NIAZ ALI v. MUHAMMAD RAMZAN, 130 P. R. 1916 227 — suit—Plaintiff, one, debarred from instituting suit—Co-plaintiff, position of.

Where a father and his son, constituting a joint Hindu family, join in bringing a pre-emption suit, and it is found that the father cannot sue in his personal capacity by reason of the prohibition contained in section 55 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act, this fact does not stand in the way of the son's obtaining relief. O LALTA SINGH v. CHHATTAR SINGH, 3 O. L. J. 552; 19 O. C. 206 188

PRESIDENCY SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT (XV of 1882), S. 41 436

— Ss. 46 to 49, 41—City Civil Courts Act (Mad. Act VII of 1892), s. 12—'Suit for trying title,' meaning of—Order in ejectment by Presidency Small Cause Court—Subsequent suit in City Civil Court for declaration of permanent occupancy right—Jurisdiction—Practice.

The order of a competent Court passed with jurisdiction cannot be interfered with except in the manner provided therefor by the Legislature, unless such order is vitiated by fraud.

PRESIDENCY SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT—
concl'd.

In the case of an order passed under Chapter VII of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, the Legislature has provided the remedy by suit under sections 46 to 49 of the Act and except in the manner therein provided, no suit will lie in any Court to supersede such order. If possession has been delivered, section 46 (1) will apply and the resulting suit, which would necessarily be one for trying title must be filed in the High Court under section 49. The expression "suit for trying title" in section 49, clause (1), of the Act includes a suit in which any title, which the party aggrieved by the ejectment order alleges, whether as a full owner or as a holder of a limited right, has to be tried and decided. In both classes of suits, the High Court is the forum prescribed and the City Civil Court is substituted for the High Court by section 12 of the Madras City Civil Courts Act only under section 31 (a) of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act dealing with execution against immoveables, but not under any other section.

Defendant applied for and obtained under section 41 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act an order to eject plaintiff from a piece of land upon which he had constructed a building. Plaintiff set up a right of permanent occupancy. The ejectment order was not carried into effect. Meanwhile the plaintiff filed a suit in the City Civil Court, Madras, to declare his right of permanent occupancy and got the proceedings stayed. The City Civil Judge held that he had no jurisdiction to set aside an order passed by the Presidency Court of Small Causes and returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court:

Held, that the order was right.

Practice cannot confer jurisdiction, however long-continued it may be. M. ABDUL RAHIM SAHIB v. GANGATHARA AIYAR, 4 L. W. 402

— Ss. 47, 48, 49 436

PRESIDENCY TOWNS INSOLVENCY ACT (III of 1909), Ss. 8 (2), 12 (1) (a), 13, 25, 26, 27, 86—
"Person aggrieved by the decision", meaning of—
Benamdar of creditor, whether can prove debt in insolvency—Petitioning creditor's claim, whether can be questioned in insolvency.

It is open to an insolvent to question the right of a person, on whose petition as a creditor the adjudication in insolvency has been made, to claim in the insolvency as a creditor, and the Official Assignee, after the insolvency, is competent to examine the claim of the petitioning creditor and if he finds that in fact there is no debt due to the petitioning creditor, he must strike out his name from the list of creditors.

A benamdar for the real creditor is not competent to rank as a creditor in insolvency proceedings, but the person who really advanced the money should come forward and prove his claim.

Per Mookerjee, J.—Any person who makes an application to a Court for a decision or any person who is brought before the Court to submit to a decision is, if the decision goes against him, thereby a "person aggrieved by that decision" within the meaning of that expression in section 86 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act.

PRESIDENCY TOWNS INSOLVENCY ACT—
concl'd.

The term "creditor" in the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act does not include a benamdar of the creditor. C. KETOKEY CHURAN v. SARAT KUMARI DABEE, 20 C. W. N. 995

— Ss. 12, 13, 25, 26, 27

— S. 56

— S. 86

PRESS ACT (I of 1910), Ss. 3, 4, 17, 19, 20, 22—Deposit of security, order for—Order dispensing with security, cancellation of—High Court, interference by, under Press Act—Jurisdiction—Forfeiture of security—Interference by High Court, grounds for—Scope of ss. 3 and 4—Applicability to old Presses—Government of India Act, 1915, (5 & 6 Geo. 5, Ch. 61), s. 65—Press Act legislation, whether ultra vires in whole or part—Special Bench, jurisdiction of, to pronounce on legality of the Act—Procedure under the Act—Burden of proof—Intention of writer, when essential—'Government established by law', meaning of—'Exciting hatred and contempt', meaning of—Alien character of Government, criticism of, when privileged—Evidence—Articles, not the subject of proceedings, admissibility of, to prove general tone and policy of newspaper—Evidence—Home Rule or Self Government for India on Colonial lines, agitation for, whether lawful—Methods of advocacy—Legitimate discussion and propaganda, principles governing—Interpretation of Statute—Proviso.

Per Curiam.—The High Court has no jurisdiction sitting as a Special Tribunal under the Press Act, to consider any other matter, save whether certain words contained in a newspaper and specified in the order of forfeiture by Government under section 4 are or are not of the nature described in clause (1) of the section. Proceedings under section 3, i. e., the imposition of security or the cancellation of an order dispensing with security are not subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court under sections 17 and 22 of the Act.

The provisions of the Press Act are applicable to all Printing Presses, even those which were in existence before the passing of the Act and for which fresh declaration is necessary under the Act under certain conditions.

The words 'Government established by law in British India' are not restricted to the supremacy of the King and the British connection, but include the composite body of persons that constitute the Government in India.

The language of section 4 (1) of the Press Act is very wide, wider than the corresponding provisions in sections 124A and 153, Indian Penal Code.

Articles which are not the subject of the proceedings before the Court are admissible to show the general policy of the paper.

Per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J., and Ayling, J.—The language of the sub-clauses to section 4 of the Press Act is not so wide as to embrace within its scope writings that may even command approval, or writing attacking a degraded section of the public which lives on the misery and shame of others or unduly praising a class.

PRESS ACT—contd.

Per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J., and Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—The question whether the Press Act or any portion of it is ultra vires of the powers of the Indian Legislature, as contravening the spirit of section 65 (2) of the Government of India Act, is not a matter which can be considered by the High Court sitting as a Special Tribunal under sections 18 and 19 of the Press Act.

Obiter.—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction under section 3 to impose security on a Printing Press after having previously dispensed with it under the proviso to the section, but the High Court has no jurisdiction under section 17 of the Press Act to determine the validity or otherwise of the proceedings of the Magistrate under section 3.

The onus is upon the person whose security has been forfeited to prove that the publications selected by the Government at their own discretion may not have the tendency described in the various sub-clauses to section 4 of the Press Act.

The advocacy of Home Rule for India or Self-Government on Colonial lines and suggestions for the carrying on of a propaganda to achieve the same are not per se obnoxious to the provisions of section 4 of the Press Act, but it is not permissible for a publicist discussing the Government's actions and failures to impute base and dishonourable motives to it.

Per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J.—A proviso to a section is something subordinate to the main clause and the general rule is that what is contained in the proviso is not to be imported by implication into the clause.

The words 'any order' in the proviso to section 3 (1) cannot include the order dispensing with security.

The Press Act imposes no duty upon the Government to issue any warning or to ask for any explanation before taking action under section 4 and the absence of warning cannot be relied on to influence the decision of the High Court on the nature of the alleged offending articles.

Section 4 of the Act is so wide in its scope that even a loyal newspaper whose general policy is above all reproach can be brought within it, if any letters or writings are let in through carelessness which offend any of the sub-clauses of the section. The vesting of such unlimited powers in the Government is a serious encroachment on the freedom which the Press in India enjoyed before the passing of the Act.

Obiter.—There is a fundamental difference between the Legislative powers of the Imperial Parliament which, according to the theory of the English constitution, can enact any laws it chooses and the authority of the Indian Legislature which is purely derivative and subordinate. Any enactment of the latter in excess of its delegated powers or in violation of the limitations imposed by the Imperial Parliament is null and void. The 'unwritten laws' referred to in section 65 (2) of the Government of India Act, 1915, which, under the section cannot be violated by any enactment of the Governor-General in Legislative Council, are, generally speaking, the laws recognising the fundamental right of the subject to enjoyment of personal freedom and property of which he could not be deprived by a Court of Law.

PRESS ACT—contd.

The words, 'whether by inference, suggestion, etc.,' in section 4 are used merely by way of explanation and do not in any way enlarge the meaning of the words, 'which are likely or may have a tendency directly or indirectly.' By 'tendency' is meant the natural effect of the words used on the readers of the newspaper in question, and not the effect which they may produce on the minds of abnormally constituted persons, or persons whose acquaintance with the language is inadequate or those who might content themselves with reading certain passages or expressions apart from the context. All that has to be taken into account is the effect which the words are, by their nature, likely to produce on a normal average reader understanding them in their plain, natural meaning.

In applying section 4 (1), apart from explanation 2, the intention of the Editor or writer need not be considered, if it is not shown that the words, in their plain, ordinary meaning, may not tend to produce the objectionable effects mentioned in clauses (a) to (f).

The intention becomes relevant only under explanation 2. It means that comments on the measures and actions of the Government are exempted from the operation of section 4, provided the person making the comments does not excite or attempt to excite thereby hatred or contempt against the Government. But the protection afforded by this explanation is extended only to comments on Government's measures and actions and not to attacks on the Government itself, which have to be judged by light of section 4 without reference to the explanation.

The words 'hatred and contempt' in section 4 mean something more than mere disapproval or dislike.

The words 'Government established by law in British India' in section 4 denote an established authority entitled and able to administer the public affairs of the country. It is not identical with any particular individuals who may be administering the Government. The law does not prohibit criticisms of the Government as constituted in a particular form provided such criticisms do not bring it into hatred or contempt or excite disaffection against it.

The advocacy of any Home Rule propaganda for India cannot be regarded as illegal per se. It lies entirely with the Sovereign, that is, the King in Parliament to establish any Government he chooses for India or any other part of the British Empire. There can be nothing wrong, therefore, in a subject of the Crown urging the desirability of a change in the machinery of the Government in India. In certain stages of society, reforms in the constitution of the Government are a biological and political necessity. To say that such questions are not open to public discussion, supposing that the law is not violated by the manner and the methods adopted in such discussion, would be opposed to all sound maxims of constitutional law.

Per Ayling, J.—There is nothing in the Press Act which throws the onus on the applicant of proving that the words which are made the ground of forfeiture, do not fall within the scope of section 4.

PRESS ACT—contd.

Whether the words are likely or may have a tendency to produce certain results must be determined primarily by inference from their own nature. The words, themselves, form the main evidence in the case.

The language of section 4 leaves the question of the intention of the writer quite immaterial. The Court has to confine its attention to the natural effect of the words without reference to what the writer meant or wished to be understood. To this, there is an important exception in explanation II of the section. Here the element of intention is present. The words 'attempt to incite' presuppose a sentient being and one animated by a particular intention. Therefore, in the case of comments on the measures of Government, an intention to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection is necessary to bring them within the scope of clause (c) of section 4 (1). The intention is, of course, deducible from the words of the articles themselves.

The words 'Government established by law in British India' should be interpreted in the light of section 3 of the General Clauses Act (X of 1897), which governs the Press Act as regards definition of terms. So interpreted, it includes the Government of India and all Local Governments. The addition of the words 'established by law in British India' seems to be intended to emphasize the fact that it is the Government existing at the time that is sought to be protected from attacks.

The word 'disaffection' in section 4 means, in addition to hatred and contempt, enmity, dislike, hostility and every form of ill-will towards the Government. It should not be restricted to courses of action that lead to rebellion or forcible resistance.

It is open to any one to draw attention to the non-Indian elements in the Government of India, and to argue that these impair the efficiency of that Government, and that it would be to the public advantage, if they were replaced by Indian elements. That is legitimate criticism. But it is not legitimate to go further and to use the existence of the non-Indian elements of Government as a means of exciting hatred, contempt and disaffection against Government—as Strachey, J., puts it, to hold up the Government to hatred and contempt by dwelling adversely on its foreign character and origin. It all depends on the manner in which and the object with which the circumstance is used in argument.

It is not irrelevant to adduce in evidence articles in a newspaper which are not the subject of forfeiture in aid of the proof of the nature or tendency of the alleged offending articles, but it is most unsafe to judge of the intention of the writer in publishing the latter by reference to other articles previously published at long intervals of time, and mostly in other connections.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—A declaration under section 22 of the Press Act is notice to all persons that the Government have declared the forfeiture, but not that the forfeiture has been legally made.

Obiter.—Section 4 of the Press Act is not ultra vires of the powers of the Imperial Legislature, as the subject is not deprived of the right of showing that the forfeiture has not been incurred. Instead of taking the decision of the Court first and then declaring the forfeiture, the process has been reversed; such a procedure cannot be said to affect the allegiance of the subject.

PRESS ACT—contd.

It cannot be said that the intention of the writer is of no consequence in applying the provisions of the Press Act. While the operative portion deals purely with the language employed, divorced from considerations of motive or intention, explanation II furnishes a ground of exemption, if it can be shown that there was no intention to excite or to attempt to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection. It is true that in the vast majority of cases the intention must be gathered from the language employed, but it is possible to show that what prima facie appears objectionable should not be given the meaning attributable to the words employed.

As the angle of vision has changed since previous pronouncements on the sections 124A and 153, Indian Penal Code, and political autonomy under certain conditions is declared legitimate, suggestions to the effect that an indigenous agency would be more suitable in certain departments of the administration and should be more largely employed, should not be regarded as exciting hatred or disaffection. Criticism attributing indifference to the welfare of the people would not always amount to sedition. If the criticism is couched in language which imports corrupt or malicious motives, the writer cannot escape. But if it aims to draw attention to a weak point in the administration in the hope that the criticism may lead to the redress of grievances or the removal of a disability, the writing cannot be condemned.

Any discussion about 'Home Rule' for India is not per se objectionable. Two essentials should be kept in mind in asking for changes in the machinery of Government. The allegiance to the throne and person of the Sovereign should be held as inviolate, and there should be no suggestion that the connection which makes India an integral part of the British Empire should be severed. Within these limits, it is permissible to ask that the details of the administrative machinery should be readjusted to meet the exigencies of the times.

The expression 'Government established by law in British India' means British rule and its representatives as such, the existing political system as distinguished from any particular set of administrators.

Clause (c) of section 4 is aimed at language which would render friendly co-operation between the different races living in India impossible. The language must be such as to lead to the breaking of the peace.

Articles evidencing the general policy of a Paper can be received in evidence and the right of adducing such evidence can be exercised by the Crown and the applicant, but there must be some connection between the subject-matter of the articles tendered and of the articles which are objected to.

[The Judges delivered varying opinions as to the nature of the various articles and how far they offended against section 4 of the Press Act.]

ANNIE BESANT v. GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS, (1916) 2 M. W. N. 385; 5 L. W. 1; 18 Cr. L. J. 157; 39 M. 1085

PRESS ACT--contd.

—Ss. 3, 22—Government of India Act, 1915 (5 and 6 Geo. V, C. 61), ss. 106, 107—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 435—Security, imposition of, after being dispensed with, legality of—Order of Magistrate, whether judicial or administrative—Interference by High Court, powers of—Certiorari, issue of—Nature of writ—Jurisdiction of High Court—Letters Patent—Revision.

Per Curiam.—It is not competent to a High Court to interfere with the order of a Magistrate under section 3 of the Press Act, requiring security from the owner of a Printing Press either in the first instance or in variance of an order dispensing with security, either under sections 106 and 107 of the Government of India Act or under section 435 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J., and Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—The words 'proceedings under the Act' in section 22 of the Press Act do not include orders passed by the Magistrate under section 3. Under the powers vested in it by the special provisions of the Press Act (sections 17 to 22, the High Court can call in question only orders of forfeiture though the general jurisdiction to issue writs of certiorari even in respect of orders passed under section 3 is not taken away by section 22.

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to demand security from the keeper of a Printing Press under section 3 (1) after having dispensed with it in the first instance. The words 'may vary or alter any order', in the proviso to the sub-section, refer only to orders demanding security and not to orders dispensing with security.

The High Court, however, has no jurisdiction to issue a writ of certiorari to the Magistrate or to revise his proceedings under the Charter or under its powers under the Code of Criminal Procedure, as the orders under section 3 (1) of the Press Act are administrative and executive and not judicial.

The power to issue writs of certiorari to inferior Tribunals is not taken away from the High Court by the Press Act.

Per Abdur Rahim, Offg. C. J.—A High Court has jurisdiction to issue writs of certiorari in order to remove the proceedings of Courts or of persons entrusted with judicial functions out of the ordinary course of legal procedure for the purpose of quashing them.

The powers of revision and control are available only over the proceedings of ordinary Courts: while a writ of certiorari is issued not only to Courts but to Tribunals specially constituted and entrusted with duties of a judicial character.

Proceedings will not be removed into the superior Court by a writ unless they are capable of being determined there.

None of the provisions of the Press Act either singly or collectively have necessarily the effect of taking away the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court over the proceedings of the Magistrate if he is acting judicially. But having regard to the scheme of the Press Act and to the functions of the Magistrate under section 3 (1) and the large discretion vested in him, it follows that the proceedings under section 3 (1) are not of a judicial character, but of an Executive Officer entrusted with the performance of administrative functions. If an Executive or Administrative Officer acts in excess of his powers, such acts are not liable to be reviewed by the High Court, whether by means of a writ of certiorari or under its ordinary revisional powers. The only remedy open to an aggrieved person in such cases would be by an action.

PRESS ACT--contd.

Per Ayling, J.—The provision in section 3, requiring the record of special reasons, does not apply to an order cancelling or varying an order.

It is open to a Magistrate, on the right construction of the section, to alter or vary an order dispensing with security.

The term 'proviso' as applied to the second part of section 3 is a misnomer. The sub-section must be treated as a whole and the words 'any order' cover an order dispensing with security. The sub-section is intended to give the Magistrate fullest discretion both as regards requiring security and determining the amount, and this discretion is to be exercised not once for all, but may be revised from time to time.

The words 'no proceedings purporting to be taken under this Act' in section 22 of the Press Act include proceedings under section 3 (1).

The jurisdiction of a High Court to issue certiorari is taken away by the Press Act both in respect of proceedings taken with jurisdiction as well as in respect of proceedings purporting to be taken under the Act. The Press Act is self-contained and complete and, though it is open to any one to argue that it is unnecessary or impolitic, effect must be given to what seems to be its plain meaning, and, by reason of section 22 of the Act, it is not open to the High Court to interfere with the Magistrate's order by virtue of any power which it possesses outside the Act.

It is within the competence of the Legislature to take away from the High Court the power to issue a writ of certiorari. Whether the power is taken away absolutely or only in respect of proceedings with jurisdiction, must depend in each case on the wording of the Statute which takes the power away.

Dubitante. If it were necessary to decide the question, the proceedings of the Magistrate under section 3 (1) may be viewed as an executive act, and on that ground, even if the power of certiorari is not taken away by section 22 of the Press Act, the High Court will not interfere under sections 106 and 107 of the Government of India Act, the more so where the application is presented after long delay, relief under the said sections being discretionary with the Court.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—A High Court has the same powers over persons resident within the local limits of its ordinary original jurisdiction as are exercised by the Court of King's Bench in England.

The freedom of the Press is not a 'licensed calling' but a common law right inherent in the subject, subject to certain limitations, and this right is not affected by the Press Act.

It is not a condition precedent to the issue of a writ of certiorari that the Court issuing should be able to place itself in the position of the Court whose order is complained against. The writ may assume various forms. It is enough that in the exercise of its jurisdiction, it directs the lower Court to re-consider its order or judgment. The fact, therefore, that the High Court cannot place itself in the position of the Magistrate and itself fix the amount of the security is no bar to entertaining the application.

PRESS ACT—concl'd.

The fact that the power to issue the writ is recognized in legislative provisions is not an argument for holding that the power does not exist aliunde.

Unless the power to issue a writ of certiorari is expressly taken away, it inheres in the Court. There is nothing in the Press Act which can be said, expressly or even by implication, to take away this power from the High Court. All that can be said is that the Act does not provide for the order under section 3 being revised.

Even if the right is taken away, the High Court can interfere, if there has been a want of jurisdiction in the inferior Court. The reason of the rule is that the power prima facie exists in the High Court in all matters which are not within the cognizance of the inferior Court; and when this latter Court acts beyond its powers, it usurps jurisdiction which the High Court can control.

Even where jurisdiction to issue the writ has been expressly taken away, if fraud was practised, the writ can issue.

Prima facie an order passed by an officer who acts ordinarily judicially may be presumed to have been passed by him in that capacity. The officer need not be sitting as a Court to attach to himself judicial functions, nor is the fact that he may have to take evidence a test of his acting judicially. But the nature of the functions that a Magistrate has to perform under section 3 of the Press Act, which gives him an unfettered discretion in fixing the amount of the security without stating any reasons or taking evidence, shows that his proceedings thereunder are only ministerial.

The power to dispense with the security only qualifies the rule which imposes the security. The first part of the proviso to section 3 of the Press Act is a conditional avoidance of the antecedent clause to demand the security. It should be regarded as defeasance clause to the first part of the section. The second proviso naturally would govern the power to vary given in the second portion of the section. It is not reasonable to hold that an order which necessitated the record of reasons in its inception could be capriciously set at naught the next moment. A Magistrate has, therefore, no power to demand security after having dispensed with it at the time of the declaration.

A proviso may at times serve to introduce an exception. It is often in the nature of a condition precedent to the enforcement of the operative clause. It is doubtful whether it can ever add to the clause itself. The preponderance of authority is in favour of the view that a proviso annexed to a section should not be read as enlarging the scope of that section. M. ANNIE BESANT v. EMPEROR, (1916) 2 M. W. N. 497. 607

— Ss. 4, 17, 19, 20 . . .

— S. 22

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT—Accounts, agent, whether can demand.

Obiter dictum.—An agent cannot bring a suit for accounts against his principal, but only for the balance due upon an account. The agent alone is liable to render accounts, the principal is not. N. GOPIKISAN v. PADAMBAR, 12 N. L. R. 174. 510

—Accounts settled, re-opening of—Acknowledgment of liability—Release of agent from liability to account—Entries unstamped, admissibility of—Evidence—Settlement by compromise 984

—Accounts, suit on—Consignment for sale on commission—Advances to consignor—Settlement, periodical, of accounts—Action brought after stoppage of dealings—'Open, mutual and current account'—Agency, termination of 875 —Agent, authority of, scope of—Presumption—Waiver.

Where an agent has authority to receive money on behalf of his principal, it may be presumed that he has authority to do every lawful thing which is necessary in connection with that act, e. g., accepting money in payment of a particular instalment or waiving the default made in paying an overdue instalment. O. MANOHAR LAL v. SAKINA BEGAM, 3 O. L. J. 623. 442 —Power-of-attorney in general terms—Agency, whether terminates on collection of debts—Insolvency of agent—Release, execution of, in discharge of amounts owing to principal on eve of insolvency—Release found void—Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909), s. 56—Claim by principal for amounts withheld by agent—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 97, 59.

Where a power-of-attorney executed in favour of a person empowers him to manage all the affairs of the principal generally, the agency does not terminate on the collection of debts and outstandings due to the principal.

S. and R., two Muhammadan ladies, executed a general power-of-attorney in favour of E. on 14th November 1905, constituting him as their agent and authorising him to manage all their affairs and properties to the best advantage. E. collected money under the power on 12th October 1907. On 24th October 1910 he executed a release in favour of his principals of his rights in certain properties in satisfaction of the moneys collected and appropriated by him, avowing his inability to pay. On 27th October 1910 he was adjudicated insolvent. The release having been declared void under section 56 of Act III of 1909, S. and R. put in their claims before the Official Assignee, which the Insolvency Judge disallowed as barred, more than three years having elapsed from the date of collection by E., when, His Lordship held, the agency terminated:

Held, (1) that as the power-of-attorney was general in its terms, the agency did not terminate on the collection of debts by E., but on the execution of the release deed;

(2) that the claim was governed by Article 97 of the Limitation Act and was within three years from the date when the release was declared to have no effect in law, when the consideration for it should be taken to have failed.

525

525, 607

• PRINCIPAL AND AGENT—concl'd.

A statement by an agent that he finds it inconvenient or is unable to pay the debt due to his principal is not a 'refusal to pay' within the meaning of Article 89 of the Limitation Act. M ROKHIA BI v. OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE, MADRAS, (1916) 2 M. W. N. 254; 4 L. W. 364 505

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY—Limitation against surety where claim against principal debtor is barred.

Quere.—Whether the liability of the surety is kept alive by reason of a charge upon his property for the satisfaction of the debt of the principal debtor where the latter's liability has been extinguished by limitation. PAT JOWALA PRASAD v. PRATAP UDAI NATH SAHI DEO, 1 P. L. J. 497 184

PROBATE AND ADMINISTRATION ACT (V OF 1881), S. 83—Probate proceedings—Compromise, effect of—Form of decree—Will, necessity of proof of—Right of objector to withdraw from compromise.

The main issue in a Probate case is whether or not the Will has been proved, and the only effect of a compromise in such a case is to reduce a contentious proceeding into one which is not contentious and a Court is not absolved from the task of either granting Probate or refusing it.

If a compromise has been made in a Probate case and the objector withdraws from the contest, a Court will grant Probate in common form; but the Court cannot dismiss the case altogether and embody the terms of the compromise as if the decree was one capable of execution by him.

Where during a Probate proceeding an objector has agreed to a compromise it is open to him to subsequently resile from it and insist upon the trial of the issue whether the Will was duly executed. PAT Musammatt JANAKBATI THAKURAIN v. GAJANAND THAKUR, 20 C. W. N. 986; 1 P. L. J. 377; 1 P. L. W. 41 12

PROCEDURE—Agreement to abide by oath of opposite party—Resiling from agreement subsequently, effect of.

Where the defendant first offered to abide by the plaintiff's oath and then resiled from it:

Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree merely on that ground. O RAM DAYAL v. RAM NEWAS, 19 O. C. 161 75

Practice—Protracted examination of witnesses and frequent lengthy adjournments in criminal trial, effect of—Adjournments, frequent, practice of granting, condemnation of—Court, inherent power of, to prevent abuse of its process 38

PROFITS, suit for share of—Village permanently settled—Revenue, enhancement of, for purpose of determining amount of cesses—Division of profits, method of.

A taluka was permanently settled by way of reward for the talukdar's loyal services. Subsequently, a person was declared by the Privy Council to be entitled to a share of the profits of a village situated in the taluka. At the time of the recent Settlement the revenue of the village was enhanced, not for the purpose of subjecting the talukdar to any additional liability as to payment of revenue, but for the purpose of determining the amount of cesses:

PROFITS—concl'd.

Held, that in estimating the profits of the village the talukdar was not entitled to treat the new assessment of revenue as a real and substantial thing and to deduct the newly assessed amount of revenue from the gross income of the village before coming to any division of profits with the said person. O SUBHADRA KUAR v. SHAMBHU PRASAD, 3 O. L. J. 634 500

PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT (III OF 1907), S. 6

S. 16—Adjudication—Suit for declaration by decree-holder, maintainability of.

After a judgment-debtor has become an insolvent, the decree-holder has no longer the right to attach his property nor to sue for a declaration in respect of it without the leave of the adjudicating Court. L B RAMAN CHETTY v. MA HMU 803

S. 16—Appeal—Application for adjudication dismissed—Parties, proper—Practice—Insolvency Court, power of, to refuse application for adjudication—Adjudication, order for.

In an appeal by a debtor against an order of an Insolvency Court dismissing his application for adjudication, notice of the appeal should be given to a substantial number of creditors to enable them to represent their interests as respondents.

An Insolvency Court has inherent power to refuse an application for adjudication by a debtor when it is satisfied that it will result in no benefit to anybody and is an abuse of the process of the Court.

Where there are considerable debts and also certain assets which can be administered and a dividend paid to all the creditors, it is contrary to the policy of the Provincial Insolvency Act to refuse adjudication.

The fact that a debtor, who is otherwise within the provisions of the Insolvency Act which renders an adjudication against him possible, is also a dishonest man, is not a reason for refusing an order of adjudication; but where fraudulent conduct is disclosed, such as that the debtor was carrying on a dishonest business to obtain some material benefit for himself through the machinery of the Insolvency Court, the Court must take it into serious account when the time arrives for him to apply for his discharge. A CHIRUNJI LAL v. AJODHIA PRASAD 391

Ss. 16, 46, 6—Creditor's decree against insolvent, execution of—Jurisdiction.

A creditor who has obtained a decree and who has proved his debt in the insolvency proceedings, is at liberty to execute his decree against the property which he alleges to be the property of the insolvent upon his undertaking to hand over to the Receiver all moneys realised in execution for the benefit of the general body of creditors.

An insolvency Court has jurisdiction, and would exercise a wise discretion, in permitting an executing creditor at his own risk and at his own costs to enforce his decree against the property alleged to be the property of the insolvent that has been concealed by some benamidar or other person on behalf of the insolvent. C KAILAS CHANDRA SARKAR v. KANTIRAM DAS BANIA 993

PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT—contd.

— Ss. 16, 41, 42—Insolvent's property abandoned by Receiver, transfer of, validity of—Vendee, rights of. Where a Receiver of the estate of an insolvent abandons a particular item of property as worthless and the insolvent after getting his discharge transfers the same, the transfer is not bad and the vendee is entitled to enforce his rights under the transfer. A SHRONANDAN v. KASHI, 15 A. L. J. 79 878

— S. 22—'Aggrieved person,' meaning of—Order directing Receiver to execute release deed on behalf of insolvent—Jurisdiction.

A 'person aggrieved', within the meaning of section 22 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, means a person against whom a decision has been pronounced, which wrongfully deprives him of something or wrongfully refuses him something or wrongfully affects his title to something. The decision should be such as to affect the right claimed, not merely to impede the person concerned in his assertion of it.

A having been declared an insolvent, his property vested in the Official Receiver. On 24th May 1908, he executed a promissory note and an agreement in favour of B, his father, providing that in case the former was not discharged within a year, he would convey certain property to B. On 6th October 1913, B applied to the Court to give leave to the Receiver to execute a release deed. The Court passed the order as prayed for. In an appeal by C, the 10th creditor, who held a mortgage over this property but with notice of agreement to convey in favour of B made by A:

Held, (1) that the order was passed without jurisdiction, being unauthorized by section 22 or any other provision of the Provincial Insolvency Act, as the application to execute a release deed was made to the Court, and not to the Receiver in whom the insolvent's estate vested and who alone was competent to give him the conveyance he required;

(2) that B was not an "aggrieved person" within the meaning of section 22 of the Act, as the omission or failure of the Receiver to execute the release deed was in no way a binding adjudication on his right and did not affect his remedy by suit;

(3) that the order was not justified even under the Court's general powers of superintendence over the Receiver, as the Receiver was neither asked to explain nor to adduce evidence. M MUJULURI SIVARAMAYYA v. SINGUMAHANTI BHUJANGA RAO, 20 M. L. T. 486; (1917) M. W. N. 75; 5 L. W. 255 773

— Ss. 22, 46—Appeal—Claim against insolvent's estate—Creditors, rights and duties of—Party, who can be—'Person aggrieved,' meaning of—Estate, representation of—Receiver, right of—Receiver not appointed—Procedure, proper.

One creditor out of the general body of creditors has no locus standi in an application in the Insolvency Court made, against the estate of the insolvent represented by the Receiver, by a person claiming adversely to the insolvent's estate and has no right of appeal against a decision in such an application.

PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT—contd.

Unless the Receiver has refused to move and so given a decision by which each of the general body of creditors has been aggrieved, a creditor cannot apply to the Insolvency Court for the attachment of any property as being the property of the insolvent. The proper course is to apply to the Receiver to set him in motion and if the Receiver declines to move, the creditor can apply to the Court under section 22 of the Provincial Insolvency Act against the act or decision of the Receiver.

The Receiver ought to be made a party to any proceedings under section 22 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, and all questions which arise between the insolvent and a person who is either a creditor or a stranger to the insolvency must be decided between such person and the Receiver as representing the estate.

Creditors have a right to prove for their own claims, a right to supply the Receiver with information relating to claims which the insolvent's estate may have against other persons, and a right to bring the Receiver's conduct and decisions before the Court if he declines to act or neglects his duties; but they have no legal interest in the insolvent's estate and no title to represent it. The proper course, if a creditor is desirous of starting the Receiver and securing a decision in his favour, is to attend the Court to watch the proceedings or to obtain the permission of the Court to intervene as an amicus curiae.

No one of the creditors can intervene except through the Receiver. If he is not a proper party to an application, he clearly has no right of appeal except in the event of an order for costs being made against him which ought not to have been made. He is not a 'person aggrieved' within the meaning of section 46 of the Act.

The words 'a person aggrieved' do not mean a man who is disappointed of a benefit which he might have received if some other order had been made. He must be a man who has suffered a legal grievance, a man against whom a decision has been pronounced which has wrongfully deprived him of something, or wrongfully refused him something or wrongfully affected his title to something.

Where no Receiver has been appointed and the Judge is acting as Receiver under the provisions of the Act, the better course in such a case, when a dispute arises, is for the Judge to make an order appointing a particular creditor to represent the interests of the general body of creditors. A JHABBA LAL v. SHIB CHARAN, 15 A. L. J. 1 76

— S. 36, proceedings under—Transfer by insolvent, questions for determination in—Burden of proof—Dower debt, transfer in discharge of, whether made "before and in consideration of marriage"—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 53.

A transfer of his property by an insolvent to his wife, in lieu of dower settled upon her at the marriage, long after the marriage, is not a transfer made "before and in consideration of marriage" within the meaning of section 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act.

—contd.

ordinary debt and a transfer of dower payable to her for consideration. But when such a transfer is fraudulent and the Court holds it void under section 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the following matters are relevant, (1) the nature of the debt, (2) the delay in its discharge, (3) the bona fides of the debtor, (4) the genuineness of the debt and good faith on the part of the parties, (5) the absence of the property transferred. The burden of proving the good faith of the transfer is upon him.

Section 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act is wider in its scope than section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act. The intent to defeat or delay creditors which is required to be proved under section 53 of the latter Act is not necessary in proceedings under section 36 of the former Act. Under section 36 all that is required is that the transfer must be made within two years of the adjudication of the insolvency of the debtor. A MUHAMMAD HABIBULLAH v. MUSH-TAQ HUSAIN, 14 A. L. J. 1183 684

—S. 37—Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 213—'Fraudulent preference,' meaning of—Plea of fraudulent preference, whether can be put forward by debtor to avoid liability.

In order to succeed on a plea of 'fraudulent preference' it must be shown that the substantial or dominant object in making a payment was to give preference to a particular creditor in order to prevent the rateable distribution of the property of the debtor among all his creditors.

It cannot be inferred where a creditor has been pressing for his debt and payment is made to avoid the pressure.

Fraudulent preference cannot be pleaded by a debtor in defence to a suit filed against him in order to avoid his own obligation and not for the benefit of the creditors generally. It can be pleaded, if at all, only in the Insolvency Court. S. MOHANDAS THAKURDAS v. TIKAMDAS HOTCHAND, 10 S. L. R. 123 250

—Ss. 41, 42 878

—S. 42—Assets, absence of, whether ground for annulling or refusing adjudication.

Absence of available assets is no ground either for refusing an order for adjudication of an insolvent or for annulling an adjudication once made. P. SHEAR v. GANGA RAM, 171 P. W. R. 1916 214 —Ss. 43, 46—Insolvent vexatiously refusing to produce books of account, whether can be punished before order of discharge.

A Court is not bound to defer punishment in respect of acts and omissions mentioned in section 43 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, until the insolvent applies for his order of discharge. O. RAM BEHARY LAL v. JAGAN NATH, 19 O. C. 89; 18 G. R. L. J. 270 638

—S. 43(2) 996

—S. 46 638, 993

—Ss. 46, 22—Appeal—Claim against insolvent's estate—Creditors, rights and duties of—Party, who can be—'Person aggrieved,' meaning of—Estate, representation of—Receiver, right of—Receiver, not appointed—Procedure, proper 76

PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT—concl'd.

—Ss. 46 (2), 43 (2)—'Person aggrieved,' meaning of—Appeal—Offence, nature of.

A creditor brought to the notice of the Court allegations against an insolvent said to constitute an offence under section 43, sub-section (2), of the Provincial Insolvency Act. The Court decided that there was no case. On the creditor's appeal:—

Held, that the creditor was not an "aggrieved person" within the meaning of the words as used in section 46 (2) of the Act and was not, therefore, entitled to appeal.

The offences dealt with under section 43, sub-section (2), of the Provincial Insolvency Act are in the nature of disciplinary offences, that is to say, offences committed by the insolvent during the insolvency in the nature of breaches of duty to the Court and not offences against the general criminal law. A. LADU RAM v. MAHABIR PRASAD, 15 A. L. J. 31 996

—S. 47, scope of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 71, applicability of—Insolvent's estate, sale of, by Receiver—Purchaser failing to deposit one-fourth of purchase-money, liability of—Proceeding, meaning of.

Section 47 of the Provincial Insolvency Act does not operate so as to confer upon a District Judge all the powers and to impose upon him all the duties in connection with the sale of an insolvent's property by a Receiver, which are provided by Order XXI of the Code of Civil Procedure in connection with the execution of decrees of Civil Courts.

Where, therefore, the highest bidder at the auction of an insolvent's property sold by the Receiver fails to deposit the one-fourth of the purchase-money and the property is thereafter sold at a loss, the Receiver cannot realize the loss from the bidder under Order XXI, rule 71, of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908.

Per Walsh, J.—The word "proceeding" as used in the Provincial Insolvency Act means a proceeding in Court.

A sale by a Receiver is an act of the Receiver and not a proceeding. There is no proceeding under the Provincial Insolvency Act to enable an Insolvency Court to call upon a stranger to the bankruptcy to show cause why he should not pay a sum which may or may not be due from him. A. CHEDA LAL v. LACHMAN PARSHAD, 15 A. L. J. 253 830

PROVINCIAL SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT (IX of 1887), S. 15, SCH. II, CL. (8)—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 102—Rent, suit for, whether cognizable by Small Cause Court—Appeal, second.

A suit to recover arrears of rent of a holding is not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes and a second appeal in such a suit would not, therefore, be barred under section 102, Civil Procedure Code. PAT. SADANAND TEWARI v. DEB NATH MANJHI 980

—S. 25 129, 906

—S. 25—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 12—Suit for specific performance and damages for breach of contract, cognizance of, by Small Cause Court—Proper course—Plaint, amendment of—Pleadings.

Where a plaintiff asks for two alternative reliefs in the Small Cause Court, one of them not being concl'd.

PROVINCIAL SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT—

cognizable by that Court, but on the face of it a relief which cannot be given in law, the proper course is to direct that the plaint be amended by striking out the clause demanding that relief. PAT BHARAT MAHTO v. NISARALI, 20 C. W. N. 1020 665

— SCH. II, ART. 31 671

— SCH. II, ART. 35 (j) — Jurisdiction—Suit by successful objector as regards property attached and then released but not restored—Costs.

Where a successful objector to the attachment of crops placed in charge of a person sues for damages on the ground that the crops have not been restored to him, the suit does not lie on the small causes, but on the regular side.

Where, on a regular Court returning the plaint for presentation to the Small Cause Court, the plaint is so presented, but the latter Court dismisses the suit on the ground that it is not cognizable by it, it ought not to order the plaintiff to pay costs. O RAMPHAL v. MUTHRA, 3 O. L. J. 578; 19 O. C. 236 169

PUNJAB ALIENATION OF LAND ACT (XIII of 1900), Ss. 3 (2), 5 763

— S. 6—Mortgage to pay off old debt owing to non-agriculturists, whether contravenes provisions of Act—Consideration.

It is not the object of the Alienation of Land Act to prevent a non-agriculturist from recovering money due to him from an agriculturist by any legal means in his power and if such a person can induce an agriculturist to pay off a debt due to him and to take a mortgage of land from his debtor as security for himself, there is nothing in this Act to prohibit such a course. It is immaterial whether the mortgagee pays in cash or gives his bond, nor has he anything to do with the correctness of the account or real amount due beyond what the debtor himself admits and asks the mortgagee to pay for him. P. HAIDAR v. FATEH KHAN, 119 P. L. R. 1916; 114 P. W. R. 1916 193

— S. 21 (2)—Civil Courts, power of, to enquire into action taken by Deputy Commissioner—Jurisdiction.

Section 21 (2) of the Alienation of Land Act debars a Civil Court from taking cognizance of the manner in which a Deputy Commissioner exercises his powers under the Act. P. GANGA RAM v. BAJA RAM, 124 P. R. 1916 763

PUNJAB COURTS ACT (III of 1914), S. 44—Revision—Material irregularity—Failure to determine provision of law applicable.

Failure to determine whether an application is governed by the provisions of the Limitation Act of 1877 or by those of the Act of 1908, amounts to a material irregularity and is a good ground for revision. P. MANOHAR LAL v. SADIQA BEGAM, 101 P. R. 1916 292

PUNJAB PRE-EMPTION ACT (I of 1913), S. 5 (a) —Pre-emption—Building, whether shop or residential—Test.

In order to determine whether a certain building is, for the purposes of pre-emption, a shop or a residential building, chief or most important building in question is devoted to.

PUNJAB PRE-

Where it was found that the storey of a building was used been so used for over fifty years, storey was a balakhana:

Held, that the building was one and was a shop, the upper storey being auxiliary or appended to the lower. P. J. v. JANKI DAS — Ss. 9, 24—Pre-emption—Sale sanctioned by Deputy Commissioner—Punjab Alienation of Land Act (XIII of 1900), ss. 3 (2), 5.

Section 9 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, repeals by implication so much of section 5 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, as conflicts with itself and, therefore, no right of pre-emption exists in respect of any sale sanctioned by the Deputy Commissioner under section 3 (2) of the latter Act.

If a sale is opposed to the provisions of the Alienation of Land Act, a suit for pre-emption in respect of the sale must be dismissed under section 24 of the Pre-emption Act. P. GANGA RAM v. BAJA RAM, 124 P. R. 1916 763

— S. 24—Sale opposed to provisions of Alienation of Land Act—Procedure.

If a sale is opposed to the provisions of the Alienation of Land Act, a suit for pre-emption in respect of the sale must be dismissed under section 24 of the Pre-emption Act. P. GANGA RAM v. BAJA RAM, 124 P. R. 1916 763

PUNJAB TENANCY ACT (XVI of 1887), S. 5 (1) (c)—Settlement "along with the founder" and "by the founder," distinction between—Presumption.

Settlement along with the founder in section 5 (1) (c) of the Punjab Tenancy Act means settlement contemporaneously, or in association with the original founder during the initial stages of foundation and development of the village.

Settlement by the founder might take place after those stages had passed. There is a fair presumption, though it is rebuttable by adequate proof, that where a cultivator is shown to have commenced to reside in and to cultivate shamilat land in a village during the lifetime of a founder thereof, such founder being at the time lambardar or otherwise directly concerned with the management of the shamilat, the cultivator in question was settled in the village "by the founder thereof as a cultivator therein," and so far fulfils the requirements of section 5 (1) (c). P. LAKHI v. AMAR SINGH, 3 P. R. 1916 REV. 1006

— S. 77 (3), as amended by Punjab Act III of 1912, scope of—Revenue Court, question exclusively triable by—Procedure—Civil Courts, duty of.

Where, in a case cognizable by a Civil Court, the question was whether defendants were occupancy tenants of the land in dispute:

Held, that the matter was one which could, under section 77 (3) of the Tenancy Act, be heard and determined only by a Revenue Court, and that the Civil Court trying the suit should have returned the plaint for presentation to the Collector in accordance with the provisions of Act III of 1912. P. MIHAN SINGH v. BHAGWAN KAUR, 111 P. R. 1916 390

PUNJAB TENANCY AMENDMENT ACT (III of 1922)—Revenue Courts, case triable exclusively by—Procedure 390

REGISTRATION—Consideration, receipt of—Presumption—Burden of proof 874

Memorandum of mortgage, when to be registered 117

REGISTRATION ACT (XVI of 1908), S. 17 822

S. 17—Interest in land, option to repurchase, whether is—Lease, agreement to—Registration.

An option to purchase is not an interest in land and a document creating an option to purchase does not require registration under section 17 of the Registration Act. L B MA SHWE U v. MAUNG PO LU, 9 BUR. L. T. 177 91

S. 17 (1) (b), (c)—Agreement to sell and acknowledgment of earnest money, whether require registration—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 91—Oral evidence to prove payment of earnest-money, admissibility of.

An agreement to sell land which begins with the words: "I have absolutely sold the land" and after acknowledging receipt of Rs. 600, earnest-money, proceeds: "I will take the remaining money at the time of the completion of the sale-deed. I shall get the sale-deed completed after going to the spot," is only a promise to sell by means of a regular deed plus an acknowledgment of receipt of earnest-money and does not require registration under section 17 (1) (b) of the Registration Act.

The receipt of the earnest-money, however, does require registration under section 17 (1) (c) of the Registration Act, but this does not affect the present case inasmuch as the portion of the document containing the receipt is separable from the agreement part and oral evidence of payment of the earnest money is admissible under section 91 of the Evidence Act. P SHARAF ALI KHAN v. JAGANDAR SINGH, 98 P. R. 1916 132

S. 17, EXCEP. CL. VI—Consent decree creating mortgage—Registration 764

Ss. 32, 33—Presentation of documents for registration by agent of executant or claimant—Agent, authority of—Registration, certificate of—Presumption.

The certificate of registration raises a strong presumption that a document was duly registered, but when on the face of the endorsement it is apparent that a different man presented it for registration from the person who signed the endorsement, the presumption that it was duly presented is very much weakened.

Although a person who can present a document for registration is present and acquiesces in the presentation yet if he is not the person who presents the document for registration, and it is presented by a person who has no authority to present it, the registration is invalid.

When a document is presented by an agent, it is for the principal to prove that such agent held a power-of-attorney duly authenticated by the Registrar within whose district the principal resides, or that the power-of-attorney was otherwise recognizable under section 33 of the Registration Act. L B A. M. V. CHERRY FIRM v. SUBAYA, 9 BUR. L. T. 197 26

S. 33 26

REGISTRATION ACT—concl'd.

S. 35 (3)—'Assign', whether donee of gift is—Execution, admission of, by donee after donor's death—Registration.

A donee under a gift deed is an 'assign' of the executant within the meaning of section 35 (3) of the Registration Act.

Section 35 of the Act authorises the registration of a deed of gift, after the death of its executant, if the donee appears before the Registering Officer and admits the execution. C AKSHAY CHANDRA v. MANMATHA NATH, 20 C. W. N. 1345 362

S. 47—Documents, registration of, at different times—Priority of title.

As soon as a kabala is registered, it operates from the date of its execution and, therefore, the title created by it will have priority over that created by a later kabala executed in favour of another person in respect of the same property, notwithstanding its prior registration and the delivery of possession to that person. C RAJANI NATH DAS v. OFAJUDDI MULLAH 817

Ss. 49, 17, applicability of s. 49, to suits for refund of earnest-money.

Section 49 of the Registration Act does not apply to a suit for the refund of earnest-money. Therefore, a document which requires registration under section 17 of the Act, but which is unregistered, would be admissible in evidence in such a suit to prove payment of the earnest-money. P CHITTAN LAL v. MUL CHAND, 18 P. R. 1917 822

S. 49—Evidence—Unregistered sale-deed, admissibility of.

An unregistered sale-deed cannot be used in evidence of a contract which in itself affects property. PAT MADHUR SAH v. THAG SAH, 1 P. L. J. 455 994

RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS ACT (XX of 1863), S. 14, scope of—Public trusts—Suit for removal of trustee of temple—Sanction, whether necessary 688

RENT, fixation of, proof as to—Land held without payment of rent—Occupation rent, whether can be charged—Landlord, position of—Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886).

Where entries of a very old date in the revenue papers assert that certain plots of land are held by ordinary tenants and, in some instances, that a certain rate of rent is payable by the tenants, such entries, in the absence of anything to show how they came to be made, are not evidence as to the fixing of rent either by a competent authority or by action of parties, nor do they raise a presumption to that effect.

Where it is found that certain persons were permitted to hold land without payment of rent and without there being any agreement to pay rent or a fixation of its amount, the landlord is not entitled to claim from them a fair occupation rent. O SARABJIT SINGH v. RAMPUR MATHRA ESTATE, 3 O. L. J. 468 27

Maft allowed to jeth raiyat, whether amounts to rent 670

RES JUDICATA. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE. SECTION 11.

REVENUE PAPERS, entries in, construction of—Rent, fixation of, proof as to— Land held without payment of rent— Occupation rent, whether can be charged— Landlord, position of— Oudh Rent Act
(XXII of 1886) 27

REVISION— Small Cause suit heard as regular suit— Appeal— Jurisdiction 92

ROYAL PROCLAMATION (12TH DECEMBER 1914), whether retrospective 258

SAMBALPUR CIVIL COURTS ACT (IV B. C. OF 1906)—Deputy Commissioner and District Judge, positions of 115

SIND COURTS CRIMINAL CIRCULARS, CHAP. V,
R. 22—Procedure—Practice—Protracted examination of witnesses and frequent lengthy adjournments in criminal trial, effect of—Adjournments, frequent, practice of granting, condemnation of—Court, inherent power of, to prevent abuse of its process.

Protracted examinations of witnesses and frequent lengthy adjournments merely for the convenience of Counsel, causing inordinate delay of a criminal trial may practically amount to a denial of justice, and ought not to be permitted. Protracted examinations of witnesses should be stopped by a strict regard to the provisions of the Evidence Act and the rules of procedure and, where necessary, by the exercise of the inherent powers vested in every Magistrate to prevent the abuse of the process, i.e., the proceedings of his Court.

Granting of frequent and lengthy adjournments in disregard of rule 22, Chapter V, of the Sind Courts Criminal Circulars condemned. S. JEHANGIR PEROZ-SHAH v. GANGARAM NAUMAL, 10 S. L. R. 148; 18 Cb.
L. J. 54 38

SMALL CAUSE COURT, jurisdiction of—Suit for damages for use and occupation of land 909

— Suit by executor for possession of moveable property belonging to the deceased—Jurisdiction 75

SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT (I of 1877), S. 9—Possession, physical, whether necessary, for maintainability of suit— Landlord, possession of, nature of.

When a tenant quits land the landlord's possession revives and he retains it till he passes it on to the next tenant, and if during the interval he is dispossessed by a third person he can eject the latter by means of a suit under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act. L. B. SAN HLA BAW v. HLA PAW, 9 BUR.
L. T. 172 20

— S. 12 665

— S. 18 (a)—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 56, para. (2)—Agreement to reconvey land purchased in Court auction after setting aside sale—Omission to apply for cancellation of sale—Specific performance —Contract, performance of, whether rendered impossible—Imperfect title subsequently perfected—Damages, whether adequate relief.

Defendant, a Court auction-purchaser, agreed to convey the land he purchased to plaintiff, who was the judgment-debtor, after applying to Court for cancellation of the sale, on the plaintiff depositing Rs. 100 within a specified date, which the defendant was to credit under Order XXI, rule 89, Civil Procedure Code. Plaintiff duly deposited the amount, but defendant did not get the sale

SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT—contd.

set aside. In a suit for specific performance of the contract:

Held, (1) that the contract did not become impossible of performance by reason of defendant's conduct in not applying for cancellation of the sale;

(2) that the transaction being, in substance, an agreement to resell the property to which the defendant had only an imperfect title pending confirmation of the Court sale, the defendant was compellable to make good the contract out of the interest that he subsequently obtained;

(3) that money compensation was not an adequate relief. M. NATARAJA PADAYACHI v. NAGAMUTHU PADAYACHI 761

— S. 22—Vendor and purchaser—Contract to sell, specific performance of—Delay—Discretion of Court—Purchaser, duty of—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 55.

Defendant agreed to execute a sale-deed of some lands to the plaintiff by 30th April 1908. On 1st May 1908 plaintiff intimated to defendant that the sale price was ready and asked defendant to go to a specified place, execute the sale-deed and receive the money. On May 7th, 1st defendant wrote to plaintiff that he had been waiting for him and would wait till 10th May 1908 to conclude the sale. The plaintiff did nothing after receipt of this notice and the defendant on 13th May 1908 intimated to the plaintiff that the contract was rescinded. On 29th April 1911 plaintiff instituted the present suit for specific performance:

Held, that, having regard to the lapse of time that had occurred, specific performance should be refused.

Even where time is not of the essence of the contract, it is for the purchaser to show that he was ready and willing to perform the contract within a reasonable time after the agreed date. M. MARUDA-NAYAGAM PILLAI v. MUNUSAMY PILLAI 776

— S. 27—Sale by unregistered deed—Subsequent sale to another by registered deed—Suit to register deed and for declaration that subsequent sale is void, nature of—Specific performance.

Plaintiff obtained an unregistered sale-deed of the property in dispute from the first defendant, who subsequently sold the same property to the second defendant under a registered sale-deed. Plaintiff thereupon instituted a suit against both defendants asking (1) that defendant No. 1 should be ordered either to register the unregistered sale-deed or to execute and register a second sale-deed, and (2) for declaration that the transaction between the defendant No. 2 and defendant No. 1 was null and void, and for possession of the property:

Held, that the suit was one for specific performance under section 27 of the Specific Relief Act.
PAT MADHUR SAH v. THAG SAH, 1 P. L. J. 455 994

— Ss. 39, 40, 42—Declaration, suit for, that an endorsement on a document is a forgery, nature of—Endorsement, whether document.

An endorsement on a document is by itself a document and is similar to the several parts of a document indicated in section 40 of the Specific Relief Act.

SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT—conold.

A suit for a declaration that an endorsement on a mortgage-deed is a forgery is really a suit for cancellation of an instrument and is of the nature indicated in section 39 of the Specific Relief Act. Section 42 is not applicable to such a case. A RAM CHANDAR v. GANGA SARAN, 14 A. L. J. 980

— S. 40 89

— S. 42 89, 977

— S. 42—Declaration, suit for—Form of decree
—Decree awarding declaration but dismissing substantial claim, futility of 161

— S. 42—Declaration, suit for—Plaint, allegations in.

Before admitting a plaint for a mere declaratory decree a Court should take particular care to see that the plaint contains the allegation that the plaintiff is in possession of the property. L B MATUNG BA THAUNG v. MA SHIN MIN 15

— S. 42—Declaratory suit—Consequential relief claimable—Suit, whether competent—Mortgage, redeemable—Suit for declaration that certain conditions were not enforceable, maintainability of.

A declaratory suit is not maintainable when the plaintiff is entitled to claim consequential relief.

Where, therefore, a mortgagor, instead of claiming possession of the mortgaged property by redemption, sues for a declaration that certain conditions of the mortgage are not enforceable, his suit must be dismissed. P SAIDU SHAH v. MALAWA RAM, 115 P. L. R. 1916 374

— S. 42—Declaratory suit—Consequential relief—Mahant, suit for removal of, and declaration of plaintiff's right to nominate successor, maintainability of.

A suit lies for removal of a mahant and for a declaration that plaintiff has the right to nominate a new mahant, without asking any further relief. In such a suit the prayer for removal of the defendant from the office does not imply his physical dispossession, all that is sought being a decree which would enable the successor on appointment to enforce his own right to take possession of the property.

TILOK CHAND v. RAM CHAND 374
R. 1916

SPECIFIC

STAMP ACT (II of 1899), Ss. 5, 6

984

SCH. I, ARTS. 1, 55, Ss. 5, 6—Document, construction of—Principal and agent—Accounts settled, re-opening of—Acknowledgment of liability—Release of agent from liability to account—Entries unstamped, admissibility of—Evidence—Settlement by compromise.

Accounts between a principal and agent were settled and the agent signed an entry to the following effect: "Due to me Rs. . . ." It was followed by a statement by the principal to the following effect: (page 70). "The balance of the liability is made up of moneys advanced by my agent from time to time on my behalf. The above does not include interest due on them." On the next page (page 71) it continued: "I have examined the several items of account entered herein in detail and I find them to be correct. I hereby release my agent from all claims to account against him by me . . . in respect of the said receipts and disbursements. I hereby acknowledge the correctness of every one of the items of expenditure".

Held, per Curiam, that the entries constituted something more than a mere endorsement vouching simply for the correctness of the entries, that they contained an acknowledgment of a debt within the meaning of Article 1 of Schedule I of the Stamp Act and should have been stamped with a one-anna stamp.

Per Abdur R to C. J.—The statement at page 71 is a receipt for an account from the agent in the name of section 5 of the Stamp Act. The acknowledgment of the principal agent for the proceeds of the sale is penal.

In one instance the principal provided part of the account.

The STAMP ACT—concl'd.

where the duties chargeable are different. M RAMASWAMI AIYAR v. GNANAMANI NACHIAR, 31 M. L. J. 851; (1917) M. W. N. 121; 5 L. W. 279 984

— — — SCH. I, ART. 5, CL. (c)—Hire-purchase contract —Agreement to hire with option to purchase, stamp duty on.

An agreement to hire machinery with an option on the part of the hirer to purchase is an agreement within the meaning of Article 5, clause (c), of Schedule I to the Stamp Act and is, therefore, liable to a stamp duty of eight annas only. C LINOTYPE AND MACHINERY CO. AND WINDSOR PRESS, In re, 24 C. L. J. 93; 20 C. W. N. 1252; 44 C. 72 175

— — — SCH. I, ART. 55 984

SUIT carried on by money supplied by third person, whether liable to dismissal 163

— — — Obligation to set aside forged document.

There is no obligation on a party, who challenges as a forgery a document purporting to confer rights to set it aside by a suit. He is entitled to treat it as waste paper and it cannot be regarded as binding on any one even before it is set aside. M VENKAMMA v. NARASIMHAM, (1916; 2 M. W. N. 325; 4 L. W. 441 642 — — — Unnecessary prayer for barred claim, joinder of, with other substantial reliefs not barred, effect of.

The joinder of an unnecessary prayer in a claim which is barred by the dismissal of the suit. The claim adjudicated against the claimant. M VENKAMMA v. NARASIMHAM, 4 L. W. 441 642 — — — Law.

Section 44 of the Transfer of Property Act does not override the Hindu Law in a case governed by that law. M KOTA BALABHADRA PATRAO v. KHETRA Doss, 4 L. W. 99, 31 M. L. J. 275; (1917) M. W. N. 149 168

— — — S. 53 684

— — — S. 54—Sale-deed, unregistered—Property of vendee, position of

TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT—cont'd.

mesne profits. An objection was raised that the transfer of the right to recover mesne profits was invalid under section 6 (c) of the Transfer of Property Act:

Held, that the transfer was valid, the right of the original decree-holders being not a mere right to sue but a right to have the amount of mesne profits ascertained under the decree which had declared that they were entitled to mesne profits.

Held, further, that under the present Code of Civil Procedure proceedings taken to ascertain mesne profits are proceedings in the suit and not proceedings in execution, so that the assignees ought to have applied to the Court for permission to continue the suit under Order XXII, rule 10, of the Civil Procedure Code; but their omission to do so, under the circumstances of the case, could not be held fatal to their right to continue the suit. PAT HARI PRASAD MISSEER v. KODO MARYA, 1 P. L. J. 427 998

— — — S. 8—Right, reservation of, inference of—Construction of document—Ambiguity.

Where property is transferred on execution of a document, unless there is an ambiguity in the document, an intention to reserve a certain right cannot be necessarily implied under section 8 of the Transfer of Property Act except from the terms of the document itself. If the document, however, is ambiguous, a Court can consider the object of the grantor and other circumstances attending its execution and the acts of the parties since the date of its execution. C SURESH CHANDRA ROY v. SURENDRA CHANDRA ROY 870

— — — S. 44, if applicable to cases under Hindu Law.

Section 44 of the Transfer of Property Act does not override the Hindu Law in a case governed by that law. M KOTA BALABHADRA PATRAO v. KHETRA Doss, 4 L. W. 99, 31 M. L. J. 275; (1917) M. W. N. 149 168

— — — S. 53 684

— — — S. 54—Sale-deed, unregistered—Property of vendee, position of

In an appeal on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit inasmuch as it was beyond the pecuniary jurisdiction of that Court, the appellant has to show, under section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, not merely that there has been an incorrect valuation but that the trial of the suit has been prejudicially affected thereby.

Per Walsh, J.—In such a case an appellant ought to take the ground in the memorandum of appeal and to state how he has been prejudicially affected.
A NASRAT HUSAIN v. ADIA SARAN 851

TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT (IV OF 1882)—
Homestead lands, tenancy of, whether transferable before passing of Act.

Tenancies from year to year of homestead lands were not transferable except by custom previous to the passing of the Transfer of Property Act. C
RAMADA SUNDARI MANDAL v. SHYAMA KANTA 939
— — — S. 6 661

— — — S. 6 (e)—Mesne profits, decree directing ascertainment of, whether can be transferred.

Plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 obtained a decree (a) for possession of certain immoveable property, and (b) directing an enquiry as to mesne profits. They sold their right to recover mesne profits under the decree to plaintiffs Nos. 3 and 4. Subsequently all the four plaintiffs applied to the Court to ascertain the value of less than Rs. 100.

Possession, title by delivery of, when dependent upon.

If in the case of a sale of tangible immoveable property of a value of less than Rs. 100, the transaction is evidenced by a document which is unregistered, the vendee may fall back upon his title by delivery of possession. O. HRIDAY BIHARI v. RAM RANI KUNWAR, 3 O. L. J. 460 20

— — — S. 55—Sale—Part-payment of purchase-money—Transfer of possession—Subsequent purchase by registered deed, right of.

Defendant contracted to purchase certain property from N, paid half of the purchase-money, and was put in possession of the property and the other half of the purchase-money was agreed to be paid after the sale-deed was passed. N subsequently sold the property by a registered deed to plaintiff, who purchased it with notice of the contract with defendant. On a suit by plaintiff for possession:

Held, that plaintiff could not profit by his conveyance and that his suit was not maintainable.

...nt, and ...
...necessary or might have ...dispensed with.
...the statements do not amount to a settlement by ...compromise.

A settlement by compromise is a case in which the parties agree not to ascertain the exact balance but agree to take a gross sum as the balance, and not where parties having accounts between them meet and agree to settle those accounts by the ascertainment of the exact balance.

A settled account may be opened where substantial error is shown in the account or where fiduciary relations exist and a less considerable number of errors are shown or where fiduciary relation exists and one or more fraudulent omissions or insertions in the account are shown.

Per Phillips, J.—The recital as to release relates only to the items in respect of which an acknowledgment is given and the two matters are not 'distinct' matters within the meaning of section 5 of the Stamp Act, and the document is an acknowledgment and, being unstamped, is inadmissible in evidence.

In order to bring a document within the terms of section 6 it must be read as a whole, and if as a whole it comes within two definitions in the Schedule, then it must be stamped with the stamp of highest value

P
... 95 P. R. 1916; 145 P. L.

105

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT FOR SALE, suit for—Plaintiff, what to show—Tender.

In a suit for the specific performance of a contract the plaintiff has to show, first, that he has performed or has been ready and willing to perform the terms of the contract on his part to be then performed and secondly, that he is ready and willing to do all matters and things on his part thereafter to be done. A default on his part in either of these respects furnishes a ground upon which the action may be resisted.

A plaintiff who as purchaser brings a suit for the specific performance of a contract for sale, is not entitled to the assistance of the Court if he defaulted to tender the balance of the consideration on or before the date fixed for the completion of the contract, even though it is proved that such tender, if made, would never have been accepted by the defendant-vendor. C MANIK CHANDRA v. ABHOY DHARAN GOPE,
24 C. L. J. 90

257

TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT—contd.

Held, also, that plaintiff could only stand in the shoes of N and receive the balance of the purchase-money due, on payment of which he would have to convey the property to the defendant.

Quære.—Whether a defendant who contracts to purchase a certain property and pays a portion of the purchase-money has no defence against a suit by his vendor for possession. B GANGARAM GANPATI v. LAXMAN GANOBA, 18 BOM. L. R. 455; 40 B. 498

360

— S. 55 (4) (b)—Vendor and purchaser—Direction to pay consideration to third party—Vendor's charge, whether lost—Contract to the contrary, inference of.

A vendor of immoveable property does not lose his statutory charge for unpaid consideration by a direction to pay it to a third person. The charge is for the purchase-money and it is immaterial that it is not directly payable to the purchaser. Such a direction is not a 'contract to the contrary' within the meaning of section 55 (4) of the Transfer of Property Act.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—If the direction is communicated to the proposed payee a completed contract may arise between the purchaser and the third party which may preclude the vendor from claiming the money before payment. Where it is not shown that the third person looked to the vendee for payment and where the vendor has to pay the third party himself the lien attaches to the property to the extent of that payment.

There are three classes of charges known to English Law (a) equitable charge founded on contract, (b) equitable lien enforced by Courts of Equity and (c) the common law lien which enables the vendor to keep back possession until he is paid. The Legislature in India, in order to avoid these confusions, has enacted a simple rule of law in section 55 of the Transfer of Property Act and it would be introducing an element of uncertainty if the interpretation of this unambiguous section is made to depend upon the English decisions. M SIVASUBRAMANIA AIYAR v. SUBRAMANIA AIYAR, 31 M. L. J. 530; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 306; 20 M. L. T. 375; 4 L. W. 415; 39 M. 997

429

— S. 58

277

— S. 58 (c)—Sale, conditional—Option to repurchase—Mortgage

91

— S. 59

692

— S. 59, PARA. 3—Mortgage by deposit of title-deeds—Registration—Memorandum, when to be registered.

Where a memorandum creates a mortgage it comes under the operation of the Registration Act, but where there is a deposit of title-deeds independently of it, the deposit creates the mortgage, and the memorandum need not be registered. C E. I. E. MORDECAI v. MORTHU MULL, 25 C. L. J. 160

117

— S. 60

756

— S. 74

343, 664

— S. 75

343

— S. 76

295

TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT—contd.

— S. 76 (h), applicability of—Possession of mortgagee not as such, effect of.

Section 76 (h) of the Transfer of Property Act does not apply where it does not appear that the mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged property qua mortgagee, although he pays no rent for its use. O MUHAMMAD HUSAIN v. MUHAMMAD ASGHAR, 3 O. L. J. 462; 19 O. C. 328

23

— Ss. 83, 84—Deposit of mortgage amount in Court—Withdrawal, while litigation pending as to rightful heirs of deceased mortgagee, effect of—Interest, cessation of, on deposit after suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIV, r. 3—Deposit and tender, distinction between.

A deposit made in Court under section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, to be effective, must remain in Court until the mortgagee or his successor-in-interest has been enabled or is in a position to draw it.

Where the mortgagee is dead, and the mortgagor, not being sure of the person entitled to the mortgage money, deposits it in Court but withdraws it before the rightful heirs are ascertained, he cannot be said to have done all that he could do to enable them to receive the money, and is, therefore, not entitled to cessation of interest.

Where the amount is paid after the institution of a suit by the mortgagee, the amount deposited should be deducted from the principal and interest all only for the balance.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—There is no analogy between tender and deposit. When a debtor tenders money, he must do it only to the person legally entitled thereto. He takes the risk of deciding for himself whether the offer he is making is to the proper person. In the case of a tender the person to whom it is made can have no claim for interest and no grievance if it is refused. A deposit, on the other hand, is ordinarily made when the debtor is in doubt as to who is the rightful claimant, and leaves it to the Court to hand the money over to the true owner. Consequently the money must be in deposit to be drawn out as soon as the legal rights of the parties are determined. The term 'deposit' implies that the money is in the hands of the Court until it is paid to the creditor.

Per Phillips, J.—Obiter.—When notice of the deposit is sent to the mortgagee through Court, and he refuses to accept it, it amounts to a tender through Court and interest ceases to run just as in the case when a mortgagee refuses a tender out of Court. There is no provision in the Transfer of Property Act, whereby interest is again to run if the deposit is withdrawn after the mortgagee has refused to receive it. The cessation of interest is the penalty imposed upon the mortgagee for refusal to accept the money when offered, and this penalty is not remitted because he changes his mind when it is too late. M THEVARAYA REDDY v. VENKATACHALA PANDITHAN, 31 M. L. J. 548; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 321; 20 M. L. T. 403; 4 L. W. 433

444

— S. 99

764

TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT—concl'd.

— S. 107, scope of—Tenancy-at-will—Writing and registration, whether necessary—Agreement to pay specified annual rent, whether tenancy from year to year.

The first paragraph of section 107 of the Transfer of Property Act is restricted in its terms only to the three specified classes of leases enumerated therein, viz., (1) a tenancy from year to year, (2) a lease for any term exceeding one year and (3), a lease reserving an annual rent. In these three cases registration is necessary.

An agreement to pay a specified rent every year is not conclusive proof that the tenancy is from year to year.

A tenancy-at-will can be created verbally and leases which do not come within the first paragraph of section 107 can be proved by oral evidence. C SARAT CHUNDRA DUTTA v. JADAB CHUNDRA GOSWAMI, 21 C. W. N. 206; 44 C. 214 956

— S. 111 (g) 935

TRANSFER OF RIGHT to receive offerings made to temple, validity of—Public policy—Estoppel, whether can validate invalid transfer 960

TRUST—Voluntary management of property—Constructive trustee—Liability of manager to account.

A volunteer acting in the management of another's property, without remuneration, becomes clothed with the character, position and capacity of a trustee and is deemed in law a constructive trustee, and, as such, undoubtedly liable and bound to account for the management of the property committed to him. Voluntary service is the foundation underlying all trusteeship and the law precludes a trustee from making a profit or acquiring a benefit from his office as trustee. The fact of the payment of a salary affords no test in determining the liability to account. PAT DILTOR KOER v. HARKHOO SINGH 367

TRUSTS ACT (II OF 1882), Ss. 42, 43 692

— S. 88, ILL. (f), construction of.

Illustration (f) to section 88 of the Indian Trusts Act goes further than the operative portion of the section itself, and, if it is to be regarded as laying down that in every case where after the death of a partner the money is left outstanding in that partnership the legal representative of the deceased partner is entitled to a share of the profits, it is not sound law. M SIDDICK v. MAHOMED HUSAIN, (1916) 2 M. W. N. 341, 4 L. W. 521 728

— S. 90 295

U. P. COURT OF WARDS ACT (IV OF 1912), S. 3 (3)—“Proprietor,” meaning of 188

— Ss. 55, 3 (3)—“Proprietor,” interpretation of—Ward, disability of, extent of—Joint Hindu family, property managed by Court of Wards—Member of joint family, which to be considered as ward.

The disability of a ward, as mentioned in section 55 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act, is not limited to such of his property as is managed on his behalf by the Court of Wards, but extends to every possible cause of action cognizable by a Civil Court.

U. P. COURT OF WARDS ACT—concl'd.

The word “proprietor,” as used in the latter portion of section 3 (3) of the U. P. Court of Wards Act, means the proprietor who has actually made an application under section 10 of the Act.

Therefore, a member of a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara Law, who has neither been declared a disqualified proprietor nor has joined in the application made by the other members of the family under section 10 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act, is not a “ward” under the Act, so that the disability arising out of the provisions of section 55 of the Act does not affect him, and he can institute a pre-emption suit in his personal capacity, in spite of the fact that his interests in the joint family property are managed by the Court of Wards.

A member of a joint Hindu family holding a share in the joint family property is a co-sharer of the subdivision in which the property is situate within the meaning of section 9 of the Oudh Laws Act, even though his name does not appear in the khowat. O LALTA SINGH v. CHHATTAR SINGH, 3 O. L. J. 552; 19 O. C. 306 183

U. P. LAND REVENUE ACT (III OF 1901), S. 36 1001

VATAN PROPERTY—Gordon Settlement—Holder of such property, liability of—Widow of last holder—Maintenance.

If a property is held under a sanad under the Gordon Settlement, each successive male holder of such property substantially holds an estate of inheritance in tail male unburdened by any duties of service and such holder is liable for maintenance of the widow of the last holder. B BASANGAUDA CHANNAPPAGAVDA v. GANGA KUMANGAUDA, 18 Bom. L. R. 450 291

VENDOR AND PURCHASER—Direction to pay consideration to third party—Vendor's charge, whether lost 429

WAKF. See MUHAMMADAN LAW.

—, validity of, when provisions not carried out by wakif's heirs.

The validity of a wakf is not in any way affected by the fact that, since the death of the wakif his heirs have not carried out the provisions of the wakfnama but have treated the property dedicated as their own. C ASNA BIBI v. JAIGUNNISSA BIBI, 21 C. W. N. 222 887

WILL, construction of 404

—, construction of—Devise of whole estate to one person coupled with devise of particular village to another—Repugnancy—Alienation, powers of, reservation of, by testator, effect of on devise.

A testatrix described herself as the “sole owner and possessor” (malik-o-qabiz) of her deceased husband's entire estate and in possession of all proprietary powers under his Will, and bequeathed the entire estate to one F C subject to certain conditions, one of which was that she would continue to be in possession of the entire estate, having full powers of alienation, and another was a devise of a particular village to one G, who would be its “sole owner and possessor” (malik-o-qabiz) after the testatrix's death:

WILL—concltd.

Held, (1) that the words malik-o-qabiz signified a full ownership in property;

(2) that the devise in favour of G was an absolute devise of the village;

(3) that the reservation of powers of alienation by the testatrix in her own favour was a mere surplusage, and neither abated from nor fortified the completeness of her ownership and possession, and

(4) that inasmuch as the entire estate devised to F C was subject to conditions, an absolute gift of the village in question to G was an exception but not repugnant to the devise in favour of F C. PC FATEH CHAND v. RUP CHAND, 38 A. 446; 18 Bom. L. R. 900; 20 M. L. T. 481; 21 C. W. N. 102; 4 L. W. 597; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 567

122

WILL—concltd.

— Gift—Deeds executed simultaneously—Statement in Will as to revocability of gift, effect of 69

WORDS AND PHRASES—

MOGHULI, meaning of.

The term 'moghuli' appearing in a rent receipt is a word of doubtful meaning and at best imports no more than that the rent assessed represented a proportion of the Government revenue. PAT NAWAGARH COAL CO., LTD. v. BEHARI LAL, 20 C. W. N. 1135, 1 P. L. J. 275

450